G.O.P. MEMBERS OF CONGRESS FOR GEN. WOOD

Both Houses Favor His Nomination in 1920.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., Nov. 8.—[Special.]—If the sentiment of the Republican members of the house and senate could be considered a criterion, Gen. Leonard Wood would be the next nominee of his party for the presidency.

By a vote of 115 in the house and 20 in the senate, as against a field of fifteen possible competitors, in a secret poll, Gen. Wood led them all, Gov. Frank O. Lowden of Illinois running second with 44 votes.

This question was put to each senator and representative: "Who, in your opinion, will be the nominee of the Republican party for the presidency in 1920?"

How They Ran.

The replies indicate the following result:

Wood Strong in New England.

New England members were almost unanimously for Wood. It was in New Hampshire that he was born over a grocery store. It was in Massachusetts that he attended Harvard college, of which he is now an overseer, and it was there he cast his first vote. Of the Massachusetts members of the house nine are for Wood, one is for Lowden, one for Taft and one noncommittal.

In order that the identity of the members may not be divulged the vote of Connecticut, Rhode Island, Maine, New Hampshire, and Vermont is given en bloc: Eleven representatives voted for Wood, two for Lowden, one for Harding, and one was noncommittal.

Points of Popularity.

Partly due to the Plattsburg movement for the national defense and partly to the association of his name with that of Theodore Roosevelt, Wood has a great preponderance of favorable opinion in the New York delegation. Fifteen expressed a preference for him, one is for Lowden, one for Watson, one for Taft, one for Pershing, and three were noncommittal.

In the Pennsylvania delegation nineteen members of the house are for Wood. Lowden has one supporter there, Harding one, Senator Knox one, Gov. Sproul one, and one was noncommittal.

The states of New Jersey, Maryland, and Delaware line up with ten for Wood and one for Harding.

Ten of the Michigan members are for Wood, one is for Harding and one noncommittal.

Favorable Toward Lowden.

Harding has nine votes in Ohio, with four for Wood and one noncommittal. In the Indiana delegation twelve are for Watson and one is for Lowden. In Wisconsin it is mostly Lowden sentiment. Five members of the house expressed a preference for him, while three voted for Wood and one was noncommittal. Iowa is overwhelmingly for Lowden, who attended the state university there. Nine are for the Illinois governor, one is for Wood, and one is for Johnson.

In the border states of Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, Missouri, and Oklahoma, seven voted for Wood, two for Lowden, one for Harding, and one was noncommittal. West Virginia members of the nouse stand four for Harding and one for Lowden.

Lauds the Rough Riders.

The west is also for Wood. This is particularly true of the southwest, due largely to the fact that in the Spanish war he was colonel of the rough riders, of which Theodore Roosevelt was lieutenant colonel. Califor-

SEIZE PHYSICIAN IN "DOPE" CASE; SAGE BACKS HIM

33 Addicts Also Taken as Start of a Big Roundup.

Dr. W. H. Sage, who until a few weeks ago was head of the "dope squad" of the internal revenue department, and who in that capacity made many raids and arrested many violators of the Harrison narcotic law, last night warmly defended Dr. Joseph A. Greaves, his friend, who was in jail, charged with having issued 4,475 prescriptions for drug addicts in the last eleven months.

Dr. Sage was at Dr. Greaves' home, 10 East Delaware place. Mrs. Greaves was there also. She had 'phoned him that her husband had been arrested in a raid on the Sage Drug company's store, at 3450 West Harrison street, a place in which Dr. Sage formerly was interested as joint proprietor. She had told him, too, that Hyman Cohen, who now owns forty-eight of the fifty shares of stock in the corporation, had been arrested, charged with filling the prescriptions written by her husband, and that thirty-three drug addicts also had been taken.

Held in $5,000 Bail.

She informed him, too, that she had retained Attorney Michael Igoe, and that he was trying to arrange to obtain the doctor's release on bonds of $5,000.

"I am here," said Dr. Sage to a reporter, "because I am a friend of the family. I have known Dr. Greaves intimately for three years, and he is a reputable physician. All his patients are incurables, and the law provides that physicians can give drugs to incurables.

"It is very poor policy, I think, to serve a warrant on a man of Dr. Greaves' standing on Saturday night, so that he may possibly have to stay in jail until Monday before he can secure bail."

"Did the drug store fill prescriptions for narcotics while you were interested in it?" the physician was asked. He replied that it did not. He had refused to fill such prescriptions, and had sold out his interest.

Start of Roundup.

The raid on the Sage drug store was but the beginning of a roundup which, agents of the revenue department promise, will put many physicians and druggists and drug addicts in jail within the next twenty-four hours.

The thirty-three addicts came into the drug store one by one. They saw some new clerks there—Dr. Samuel A. Braun, John Denison, J. J. Howe, R. J. Maloney, J. V. McMillen, and Michael Burns, all government agents. Dr. Braun was named successor to Dr. Sage when the latter refused to take a transfer to Cleveland, O.

Dr. Sage said he thought he could render a greater service to the public by resigning and lecturing—advocating a national campaign for the prohibition of drug manufacture and importation. The fact that his former drug store was reported to be under investigation had nothing whatever to do with his resignation, he declared. It is reported that his resignation has not yet been officially accepted in Washington.

Eighteen Are Held.

Only eighteen of the thirty-three addicts were held. Six of them are women. They were sent to the bridewell hospital. All declared they had told Dr. Greaves they were incurables, and that he wrote them orders on the druggist for various amounts of morphine at $1.50 the order.

Cohen, after his release on bonds made the following statement to a TRIBUNE reporter;

"I am a licensed druggist in the retail drug business. I am conducting my business in a legitimate manner. My prescription counter is part of my business, just as it is part of the business of a thousand other drug stores in Chicago. I fill prescriptions brought into my store in the same manner as a thousand other drug stores in Chicago There is no difference. In all my dealings all my life I have kept strictly within the law."

An Earlier Interview.

In an early evening interview Dr. Sage was questioned in part as follows:

Q.—We had heard that before you resigned as chief of the narcotic division of the Chicago internal revenue district last September many incurables were being recommended to the Sage Drug company to have morphine prescriptions filled. A.—Not to my knowledge. What I did do was to confer with Commissioner of Health John D. Robertson and recommended that incurables be examined for treatment. I think the health department examined 90 per cent of the city's addicts.

Q.—Dr. Sage, there are rumors other arrests are to be made. Do you think you will be involved? A.—They can do anything they like. I'm in the clear. Why, some six months ago, while I was still chief of the narcotics division, I heard rumors that the store was selling dope, and I asked one of the other men to investigate, because of my previous interest in the store.

6 CENT TICKET POSSIBLE BY NEW DECISION

Utilities Commission Awaits Data for Action.

The state public utilities commission in a decision tomorrow will refuse to restore 5 cent fares on the surface car lines. The commissioners will not pass in any manner upon the justice of continuing the present 7 cent tariff.

In ten days or two weeks, however, unless Corporation Counsel Ettelson sooner ties up the entire question by court proceedings, another order, perhaps to approximate 6 cents on a ticket basis, will be handed down, in which a moderate reduction will be made.

Three Schedules Suggested.

Three schemes are under contemplation in that connection, subject to what the street railway lines' statement of October earnings may show:

Sale of four tickets for 25 cents, or 6¼ cents a ride.

Five tickets for 30 cents, or 6 cents a ride.

Seventeen tickets for $1, or 5-15-17 cents a ride.

A return to a straight 5 cent fare is not under consideration by the commissioners. It is regarded as impossible in the light of the financial situation of the roads, revealed when the wage compromise proposed by Gov. Lowden ended the strike of employés in August.

As originally presented, the men's demands would have entailed additional operating costs, estimated at $11,500,000 to $14,000,000 annually. But the governor's compromise reduced the anticipated expense to approximately $7,000,000, which was the amount the 2 cent increase in fare was designed to cover. Traffic has not fallen off, however, as greatly as the utilities commission had reason to expect from statistics gathered in thirty-five other cities; and the traction lines' revenues have been proportionately swelled.

Statistics Are Limited.

Figures are available for only a portion of August and the month of September, which, according to the companies, do not afford a sufficient or correct indication of what the increase will be if 7 cent fares are continued indefinitely. Accordingly, the commission purposes to wait until the October tabulations are available before passing on that aspect of the controversy. A report from the companies is expected this week, and several days additional will be required properly to analyze it, so that a definite announcement of a new fare is improbable before Nov. 15.

The finding to be rendered tomorrow will deal exclusively with the city's contention that the Circuit court of Sangamon county, by declaring the 7 cent fare invalid, automatically put the fare out of existence, and that the commission should order the traction lines to return to a 5 cent tariff forthwith.

On the contrary, the commission will hold the companies, by appealing from the Sangamon county court to the Supreme court of the state, have stayed the effect of the lower tribunal's ruling until the higher bench publishes its opinion. In that position they were sustained on Friday by Attorney General Brundage.

In determining the fare the public eventually must pay, the commission will be governed by the same principles it enunciated when it denied the companies' application for permission to charge 7 cents, a few months before the men's demands were presented.

At that time the board decided to allow the roads operating expenses; 5 per cent on their capital account of $156,000,000, or $7,800,000 annually; net divisible receipts of $120,000 a month, to be divided 55 per cent to the city and 45 per cent to the lines, of which the latter's share for a year would be $600,000. The total of $8,400,000 represents 7 per cent on an investment of $120,000,000, the amount the commission held the roads employ in serving the public.

Comparative Figures.

In August the report of the companies revealed the increase in earnings was $864,000, compared to increased operating expenses of $467,000, a gain of $397,000 over August of the preceding year.

MAN SUING FOR $10,000 TOLD TO LEARN ENGLISH

Joseph Witowicz, 1363 Sloan street, an employé of Selz, Schwab & Co., who came from Lithuania nine years ago, was "sentenced" yesterday by Judge Michael L. McKinley in the Superior court to learn English by July 1.

A jury had been selected to hear evidence in Witowicz's suit for $10,000 damages from the Mowbray & Robinson company and Peter Tanrath, a truck driver employed by that concern, for injuries received in an automobile accident in 1916, when the plaintiff's attorney, Stuart B. Krohn, asked for an interpreter.

"This man doesn't need an interpreter," Judge McKinley said. "He needs a school teacher, and I am going to give him a chance to get one. This case will be continued until July 1 to allow him to learn English. If he makes enough progress by that time the case will be heard, otherwise it will be continued again and again until he is able to speak our language.

"This man has applied for his first papers, but has never taken out his final papers. He wants all the benefits accorded a citizen, yet he doesn't bother to learn the language or to take enough interest in the country and its institutions to understand them. He has been sending his money back to his wife and child, who are still in Lithuania. I have no patience with a man of his type."

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 8.—[Special.]—When their motor boat, the "Dub-Along," was swamped in the Mississippi river by an overhanging tree above Memphis late Friday night seven members of the eleven of the Harris Hunting club of Harrisburg, Ill., were probably drowned. Three members and the club's steward were saved. Two survivors arrived in Memphis today on a steamer. The other two are on the Arkansas side of the river.

Drowned and missing:

S. O. Davis, millowner.
Clyde Davis, mine operator.

Burton W. Peake, coal miner.
Henry Nichols, coal miner.
Albert Harris, factory owner.

Describes Accident.

Of the saved Wilson Pankey, manufacturer, and Fred Potts, coal miner, are in a serious condition from exposure.

Joseph H. Pierson, who arrived here with Fred Hancock, another rescued man, said:

"Some of the boys were caught in the cabin and never had a chance. I climbed through the engine room window onto the trunk of the tree that caused it all. The weight of the boat, with the current tugging at it, and our weight was too much and the tree went down with us.

"Pankey was caught amid some willows and his cries brought aid. They picked me up about 3:15 a. m. We went under about 10:10, and all but Pankey had floated on driftwood for hour hours."

Meager News at Harrisburg.

Harrisburg, Ill., Nov. 8.—Relatives of the launch party members were frantic tonight. Only meager information of the accident had been received here. Tonight a party of twenty members of the local Masonic lodge left on a special train for Memphis.

POLICEWOMEN IN ROLE OF DECOYS TRAP 14 MASHERS

A woman passed the restaurant of J. Martskse, 28 West Illinois street, last night. Martskse pushed five men aside to reach her side.

"Hello, honey," he said.

"If you don't stop annoying me I'll call a policeman," replied the woman.

"Aw, come on. There ain't any policemen around here."

"There ain't, eh?" interrupted Detective Sergeant Timothy Daley. "Step this way."

The woman was Policewoman Agnes Walsh. She and Policewoman Theresa Johnson were sent out through the Chicago avenue district by Capt. Dennis Malley. They were followed by Detective Sergeants Daley, Blaul and Sack, who gathered in thirteen other annoyers.

Congress Seeks Light on Jenkins $150,000 Ransom

Washington, D. C., Nov. 8.—Resolutions bearing on the kidnaping of William O. Jenkins, American consular agent at Puebla, Mexico, were introduced today in the house and senate.

One by Representative Gould, Republican, New York, would direct the state department to take immediate steps to have the Mexican government reimburse the Americans who paid the $150,000 ransom to the bandits for the release of Jenkins.

The other, by Senator King, Democrat, Utah, would ask the state department to report whether the Mexican government had been requested to reimburse Mr. Jenkins for the amount of the ransom.

Both resolutions were referred to committees.

Daughter, Third Child, Born to Kermit Roosevelts

New York, Nov. 8.—A daughter was born here today to Mrs. Kermit Roosevelt, being the second grandchild within a week to be added to the family of the widow of the former president.

The child will be named Belle, after Mrs. Kermit Roosevelt's mother, Mrs. Joseph Willard, wife of the American ambassador to Spain.

Capt. and Mrs. Roosevelt have two other children—Kermit Jr., 4 years old, and Joseph Willard, 2 years old.

General Improvement in Wilson's Condition Noted

Washington, D. C., Nov. 8.—Dr. Francis X. Dernum of Philadelphia paid his regular weekly visit to President Wilson today and held a consultation with Rear Admirals Grayson and Stitt, and Dr. Sterling Ruffin of this city. Jim Larkin and 500 Taken in "Red" Raid

New York, Nov. 8.—[Special.]—The federal government tonight made its second attack in two days in the nation-wide campaign against the radical agitators. Seventy-three places in Manhattan and Brooklyn were raided. Five hundred suspects were seized.

Among the prisoners was "Jim" Larkin, the Irish labor agitator, who led the British shipping strike in 1914. Larkin, regarded as one of the most dangerous agitators in this country, was caught in McDougall alley.

Directed at "Communists."

The places raided tonight were all connected with the so-called "communist party," the group of radicals which has broken away from the Socialists and is attempting to form a group of I. W. W. syndicalists and the other groups of violents.

Editorial rooms and printing shops were visited and tons of literature seized. It was of the sort of propaganda which was spread in Gary, Omaha, Seattle, and other places.

The attacks were directed by secret service operatives. They were supported by 700 New York police and members of the state constabulary.

Rushed to Ellis Island.

Last night's moves by the government seems to have put a quietus on the Union of Russian Workers, against which they were directed. Thirty-three men, most of them with bandaged heads and black eyes, and two women, caught last night, were taken to Ellis island today, where an effort will be made to deport them.

About 150 other men, who had been arrested, were set free.

The Reds, who were sent to Ellis island from this city, were joined there by thirty of the same type who had been arrested in the northern district of New Jersey.

Bridgeport Crop Is Sixty.

Bridgeport, Conn., Nov. 8.—Sixty alleged radicals were arrested here tonight in raids by agents of the department of justice, aided by local police. Most of the prisoners were taken in boarding houses on the east side and were brought to city court chambers to be examined.

U. S. PREPARES WAR

Washington, D. C., Nov. 8.—[Special.]—The United States government demonstrated today that it will wage war as relentlessly on the enemies within its gates as it fought the autocratic forces of Europe.

The government, both executive and legislative, served notice that it will crush lawlessness, imported sovietism, and the lurking spirit of revolution, and it will not tolerate industrial upheavals that violate the law and threaten the welfare of the people.

Notice that lawlessness and imported sovietism will be crushed came in an official statement from the department of justice following raids which

ORDER TO CHECK MINERS' STRIKE STUNS LEADERS

Lewis Is Silent After Judge Issues Ultimatum.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., Nov. 8.—[Special.]—With every federal resource at the capital mobilizing to face the industrial crisis precipitated by Federal Judge Anderson's mandatory injunction upon officials of the United Mine Workers of America to rescind the strike order before 6 o'clock next Tuesday evening, expressions of opinion from the miners' leaders throughout the nation reached Washington tonight.

Opposed to President Wilson's outspoken support of any measure the government may deem needful to terminate the strike of 400,000 soft coal miners, was the silence maintained by Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, and Edgar Wallace, official representative here of the mine workers, when apprised of the Indianapolis climax.

Lewis Refuses to Talk.

"Not one word," is the only reply President Lewis of the miners gave to questioners in the Indianapolis courtroom following the issue of the mandate. His colleagues and counsel were even less communicative. They smiled grimly and shook their heads.

The most outspoken challenge to the government of the United States in its effort to end the threatened industrial smash inevitable in a coal famine was uttered by Alexander Howat at Pittsburgh, Kas. He is president of district 14 of the miners' union.

"Judge Anderson's court order to call off the strike makes no difference in the situation so far as I am concerned," Howat said tonight. "Regardless of injunctions, prisons, and all the judges in the United States, I will not alter my stand, for I believe I am right. It's time for a showdown, and I am going to fight."

Union Conference Tomorrow.

It is reported that Mr. Howat, accompanied by several assistants, will leave Kansas for Indianapolis tonight in response to President Lewis' summons to all district leaders for a conference Monday.

Compared with this, C. F. Keeney, president of district 17 at Charleston, W. Va., said his 41,000 striking miners would return to work if so ordered by their leaders.

"I have no intention of fighting the government," Mr. Keeney stated, when informed of the Indianapolis verdict. "If our organization leaders call off the strike, the men will pick up their tools. There must be no change in existing contracts with the operators, however."

"Orders enjoining leaders from calling a strike will not produce coal," said John Brophy, president of the Clearfield district, speaking tonight at Pittsburgh, Pa.

Other Leaders Defiant.

It is believed that his views summarize the opinions of other union leaders here. There are approximately 100,000 miners idle in the Clearfield area, which includes a large part of western Pennsylvania. It was said the miners may remain out regardless of action taken against their leaders.

B. A. Frampton, president of the Missouri district, was questioned at the Moberly headquarters.

"The court order will have no immediate effect on the strike situation in this district," he declared.

John P. White, former president of the miners' organization, flatly refused to discuss the injunction when interrogated at Des Moines.

Men Won't Obey, One View.

"The men would not have to obey if President Lewis called the strike off; and I don't think they would obey," said William J. Trickett at Cumberland, Md. He is secretary-treasurer of District 16.

This field embraces the upper Potomac and Georges Creek fields. Officials expressed the opinion that Lewis has not the authority to withdraw the order and that the international convention would have to be reconvened since Lewis was merely carrying out the mandate of the convention in ordering the strike.

The effect of the injunction in district 5, represented by President Philip Murray, and included in the northwestern Pennsylvania fields, could not be learned from Pittsburgh, Mr. Murray saying he would await word from Mr. Lewis before making any observation on the federal writ.

Harry Fishwick, vice president of the Illinois Mine Workers, the only accredited official of the state organization at Springfield, Ill., headquarters, declined to talk about the mandate. President Frank Farrington was at Indianapolis. He also was silent.

Owners Eager for Parley.

The mine owners will reopen negotiations with the strikers as soon as today's court mandate is obeyed, Thomas T. Brewster, chairman of the coal operators' scale committee, announced tonight in St. Louis.

"The operators have accepted the suggestion of the president as a command," Mr. Brewster asserted. "We will reopen negotiations as soon as the men return to work and continue working pending final settlement of differences. I assume that Mr. Lewis and his associates will obey the mandate of the court and make it possible to resume negotiations."

END STRIKE: U. S. EDICT

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 8.—Cancellation of the strike order which, since midnight of Oct. 31, has kept 400,000 union bituminous miners out of the coal pits, was ordered by Judge A. B. Anderson in federal District court here today.

Violation of the wartime federal food and fuel control act, as alleged by the attorney general's department, was affirmed by the court, who said the strike was not only illegal but that, under the circumstances, it approached rebellion.

Unless the union leaders choose to defy the court—and there was no indication tonight of any such intention—they can move only towards ending the big walkout.

"Will Make Strikers Obey."

"I assume these men are law-abiding citizens and will obey the order," said Judge Anderson in announcing his decision. "If they do not look at it that way, and decline to obey the order, I will make them obey. It will be the part of wisdom for these gentlemen to obey the order."

The court's order was so worded that failure to cancel the strike call or any affirmative word or action tending to "aid and abet" the continuance of the strike, would make them violators of the injunction and in contempt of court.

Tonight, therefore, the union leaders are under orders to meet here Monday, draw up a cancellation of the strike order, submit it for Judge Anderson's approval by 10 a. m., Tuesday, and have notice of it on the way to all local and district unions by 6 p. m. that day.

Telegrams summoning district presidents of the union and members of the executive board and the central competitive field scale committee to meet here Monday, were dispatched a few hours after Judge Anderson's sweeping mandate had been issued.

Union officials here would not comment upon the court action.

United States Attorney Cheerful.

C. B. Ames, assistant attorney general, who conducted the case for the government, also smiled, but more cheerfully than the unioin men, when asked for comment, and said:

"The decision speaks for itself."

Attorneys for the union fought a losing fight from the start of the proceedings.

First, they moved postponement for a week, indicating that there was a chance for settlement of the strike by that time. Mr. Ames objected to postponement and the court ordered the case to proceed.

Then the government introduced five affidavits as evidence that the operation of the railroads was being interfered with and that contracts between employers and miners had been broken. The defense responded with its motion for dissolution of the restraining order and arguments followed.

Strike Endangers Nation.

Although allowed an hour and a half, Mr. Ames took only thirty-five minutes in presenting the government case. He based his argument upon President Wilson's denunciation of the strike and said that the structure of the government was endangered by the defendants' violation of the fuel control law.

From that point the proceedings were hurried by Judge Anderson, who gave the attorneys for the defense little opportunity to go into legal points they tried to get into the record.

He upheld in every particular the contentions of the government that the strike was illegal under the Lever food and fuel act and said that the upholding of this act was the only question before the court.

At one stage he indicated that the right to strike was not applicable to the case because none of the defendants to the proceedings was earning his living by working as a miner; but he allowed the argument to proceed on the theory that the union officials were proper agents of the miners, carrying out orders given by their principals.

Avoids "Waste of Time."

Almost immediately, however, the court threw the discussion back to the wartime powers of the fuel and food control law and advised the defense attorneys not to waste time by arguing other questions.

Judge Anderson next stifled this line of debate also by announcing firmly that he was going to hold the Lever act constitutional and in effect until the president of the United States formally decrees the end of the war.

"This case," he said in issuing the injunction, "involves solely the question of enforcing the law. It is my absolute duty to uphold the law which no one man and no body of men has the right to override. Were we to admit to even the slightest degree a contrary right, we would undermine the foundations of the republic.

"The government is right in seeking to uphold its own laws and in asking its courts to aid it. These men have done an illegal act from which irreparable injury results to the complainant."

Text of Mandatory Order.

The injunction, prepared by the attorney general's department in Washington, repeated the restraining order of Oct. 31, which forbade the issuing of any messages, oral or written, of "exhortation or encouragement" to the strikers, and also tied up the union's relief funds. It then provided the mandate for cancellation of the strike call in the following language:

> "And they (the defendants) are further enjoined from permitting the strike order issued on or about Oct. 15, 1919, to the miners and mine workers in the bituminous coal fields of the United States to take effect on midnight of Oct. 31, 1919, to longer remain in effect, commanding them to desist from aiding such strike by permitting said strike order to remain in effect, and commanding them to issue a withdrawal and cancellation of said strike order and communicate the same to district or local unions, committees, and members of the international United Mine Workers of America, as fully and completely as the said strike order has been heretofore distributed and circulated to the said organization, its members, district or local unions, or any committee thereof."

May Answer Up to Nov. 20.

If left to pursue its normal course, the injunction proceedings probably will rest until Nov. 20. The defendants have until that date to file a formal answer and when that time expires it is within the province of the government attorneys to ask that the temporary injunction issued today be made permanent.

It was pointed out by government officials that this was expected to result inasmuch as Judge Anderson decided the issues in the case today.

Attorneys for the miners indicated they will take the case to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago at the earliest possible date. Such action, however, will not affect the injunction proceedings nor the government's plan to ask that the temporary injunction be made permanent on Nov. 20.

In the meantime, it is pointed out, the court's order to call off the strike must be carried out.

After the government's evidence was presented and the union's motion read, Mr. Ames open argument for the complainant.

Reading from the Congressional Record, he got into the case President Wilson's statement on the coal strike, reading it in full.

Lewis Is Indifferent.

President Lewis of the union, with thumbs thrust into the armholes of his waistcoat, listened to the chief executive's excoriation of the organization with a nonchalant manner, emphasized by closed eyes and an occasional use of a pencil as a toothpick.

"The president states fact in that statement to the American people," said Mr. Ames. "Because of a disagreement between the miners and operators of the central competitive field a strike has been ordered throughout the United States. And this, too, notwithstanding that in other fields there were in force contracts which were negotiated independently of the central field.

"It is not for the defendants to decide what is the law in this case. In civilized countries such questions are left to the arbitrament of courts.

"As the president of the United States has said, the time has come for plain speaking. No organization may override the law. Otherwise there is successful revolution. And I do not believe the American people have reached the stage where such a course can be approved.

"The government contends that this strike is illegal in that it violates the federal fuel control act."

Mr. Ames cited the provisions of the law forbidding restriction of fuel output, and said:

"We pray at this time for a mandatory injunction for withdrawal of the strike order because, notwithstanding the restraining order's effect, the strikers are still on strike."

Defense Opens Argument.

Henry Warrum, counsel for defense, started with a flat statement that every decision in the country relating to strikes had averred the right of workmen to strike when unaccompanied by boycott or disorder. He read opinions to this effect, but Judge Anderson asked:

"How do these apply to this case when there is not a single defendant in this court who works with his hands?"

The attorney said the injunction against the officers or agents of the miners was in effect an injunction against the miners. On this theory he was allowed to continue his argument.

"These defendants are not interlopers," he said. "They are the duly constituted agents of the men and the government's bill of complaint itself shows that the men themselves ordered the strike and directed their officers to carry that order into effect.

"It is further important that in the bill appears the fact that these very defendants were parties to the Washington wage agreement and recognized then as lawful agents. But now the government turns around and seeks to place in the position of interlopers these same agents when they carry out other orders of their principal."

"That is not the question before the court at all," said Judge Anderson. "The Lever act makes it unlawful conspiracy for two or more persons to arrange to limit production of coal. Everybody knows that. You may discuss that if you wish."

"But your honor has just said you are convinced that conspiracy exists," exclaimed the attorney.

"Well, let's go on with the case as any other case," said the court.

Differs from Evans' View.

"Certainly," rejoined Mr. Warrum. "Judge Evans has held that the war powers of the Lever act have expired and——"

"But I do not agree with Judge Evans," said Judge Anderson. "Congress had the right to say and did say that the Lever act should remain in force until a definite thing was done. That has not been done. So I hold that the Lever act is still in force.

"I hold, also that stopping work in coal mines restricts the production of fuel. I am going to hold that even two miners who work with their hands may not legally conspire to stop production of coal."

The court also upheld the assertion of the government that the Clayton act did not apply to this case.

Discuss Attitude of Owners.

The discussion swung to the operators' attitude and the judge remarked they were not in court, that he had only one side to the controversy before him.

"But bring them in," he said. "I will be willing to enjoin their illegal acts also."

The war condition of the Lever act and the status of men in service came up, leading Mr. Warrum to say:

"This is a case in equity, not a court-martial."

"I don't understand that remark, but I concede the fact," said Judge Anderson.

Further attempts to bring in the right of employes to quit work singly or in a body met with equal obstruction from the court.

"When congress passed the Lever bill it made unlawful any conspiracy tending to decrease coal production. That is the law and that ends it."

Mr. Warrum sat down and Judge Anderson started a discussion of the Debs railroad case. He pointed out that the United States Supreme court held the government had right to get an injunction preventing a railroad tieup.

"Now," he said, "the government controls the railroads and is using them to transport troops and mails. Can you assert that any one has right to stop the roads in these circumstances?"

"I assert," said Mr. Warrum, "the right to strike for higher wages and to stop the roads if that result is an incident."

"You are wrong," said the court.

"I'm through," said Mr. Warrum.

Won't Talk of Lever Act.

William V. Rooker then tried vainly to discuss the Lever act, but the judge cut him short by holding formally that the act remains in force.

"Can I discuss the allegation of irreparable injury?" asked Mr. Rooker.

"Don't waste your time," said Judge Anderson. "I am going to hold that irreparable injury does exist in this case. Why, millions of dollars are being lost. What is the use in discussing this question or the Lever bill?"

Mr. Rooker agreed there was little. He then tried to show a difference between this case and the Debs case.

Decides to Issue Order.

"I suggest you turn to the mandate that this strike order be rescinded," said Judge Anderson. "I am going to issue that unless you persuade me otherwise."

Mr. Rooker agreed there was nothing more to be said, and Judge Anderson began his pronouncement.

U. S. Mobilizes to Smash Strike if Union Flouts Writ

Washington, D. C., Nov. 8.—[Special.]—Government forces, headed by the department of justice and backed up by President Wilson and a majority of the cabinet, are determined to stands squarely behind the mandate issued today at Indianapolis by Federal Judge A. B. Anderson, and proceed against acting President John R. Lewis of the miners, and other organization officials if the strike order is not recalled by 6 o'clock Tuesday night.

This was assured beyond a doubt tonight when the department of justice let it be known it was in full sympathy with the plea made before Judge Anderson by Assistant Attorney General C. B. Ames in asking that the mandate be issued. Apparently there will be no further negotiations with miners' representatives looking to a settlement, unless the strike order is recalled.

U. S. Officials Reticent.

Officials would not comment on the climax which came after a peace program had been drawn up last night and was thought to be settled. Operators had agreed to all proposals, as a result of which the injunction suit was to have been continued pending a settlement between operators and miners.

The miners' officials also were believed to have agreed to all details, but at the eleventh hour President Lewis announced that the miners would not agree to ultimate cancellation of the strike order after preliminary negotiations as one of the conditions to a continuance of the injunction proceedings. This left the government no alternative except to proceed with its injunction.

The government, it is understood, has under preparation a complete synopsis of all the peace negotiations conducted with a view to averting today's action. One official tonight said this will show resistance to peace came from the miners and not from the operators.

Union Leaders Silent.

Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, who had participated actively in the negotiations, and Edgar Wallace, official representative of the miners in Washington, were seen today after Judge Anderson had issued his mandate. They refused to comment upon the new situation. It was obvious that they were in a gloomy humor.

It was reported tonight that Mr. Gompers had sent out a call to members of the executive committee of the American Federation of Labor to meet him here tomorrow to go over the situation; an appeal may be made to President Wilson before Tuesday night. On just what grounds an appeal might be made or any further particulars concerning the reported conference call could not be learned.

It is known that labor chiefs are hurrying here by train from every section of the country.

It also was reported that William Green, secretary of the miners, was on his way from Indianapolis to Washington to join the conference. This could not be confirmed, as the labor officials maintained absolute silence.

Negotiations between Mr. Gompers and Attorney General Palmer apparently have been broken off. The attorney general made it plain to the labor chief today that the government intended to "smash the strike" as an unlawful action against the United States.

See Strike Quickly Called Off.

Government officials believe the order recalling the strike will be issued by the miners' officials before the time limit set by the court expires.

This belief is founded upon information said to be at hand that thousands of the miners are restive and anxious to have the strike ended and that acting President Lewis and his fellow officials will not at this time determine to defy the government to the point of disregarding a court order.

Statements in news dispatches from Indianapolis today that attorneys for the miners said that President Lewis and Secretary Green of the Western Federation of Miners probably would obey the court order, although they could not answer for their fellow officials.

There was some discussion as to what course the mine workers might pursue if the order calling off the strike is issued by Acting President Lewis.

Mining districts reports indicate the majority, even in the central competitive district, which includes western Pennsylvania, Indiana, Illinois and Ohio, would return to work.

Dividends Shed Light Upon Profits of Coal Operators

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

A few days ago in the offices of the state department of mines and mining a coal digger was encountered.

"You have printed a lot about the wages of miners," he said. "Why not print what the operators are making?"

"The Chicago Tribune will print any reliable information of news value," was replied. "Have you anything regarding operators' earnings?"

"No," he said, "but please get some information on the subject and print it. That is only fair to the public, and other newspapers won't print it."

As promised this miner, some data has been obtained.

Three Largest Operators.

The largest coal operator in the country is the Pittsburgh Coal company. It hoists 16,000,000 or 18,000,000 tons annually. The Consolidation Coal company ranks second, with 15,000,000 or 16,000,000 tons. The Peabody Coal company is third, with about 12,000,000 tons yearly.

Poor's Manual gives considerable information regarding The Consolidation Coal company. It was incorporated in 1860 and owns or controls 296,754 acres. Its capitalization is $45,000,000 and its dividends are payable Jan. 31, April 30, July 31, and Oct. 31. This, as well as the information to follow, came from Poor's Manual.

The Dividend Rate.

Take first the dividends and forget temporarily about the present capitalization.

Between 1889 and 1902 2 per cent was paid annually. In 1903 and 1904 the dividend rate was 4 per cent, and in 1905 it was 6 per cent. In 1906 it was 8 per cent annually with 2 per cent extra in January. Regarding the next year Poor says: "A stock dividend of 60 per cent was paid April 30, 1909, to stockholders of record on April 24, 1909."

From 1910 to 1916 the dividend rate was 6 per cent with an additional 5 per cent to stockholders of record Feb. 2, 1917. On Feb. 11, 1918, there was an extra cash dividend of 3 per cent, and a 14 per cent in stock March 30, 1918.

Returning to the stock on which the dividends were paid. The authority recited says that in 1909 the authorized stock was "increased to $20,000,000."

Of the increase $6,150,000 was used as the 60 per cent dividend and the other $2,626,000 was sold at par.

Further Stock Boosts.

On Dec. 12, 1910, the stock was increased to $25,000,000 and in February, 1913, to $31,190,000. This last increase was for the purpose of converting $6,500,000 ten year bonds.

Then in January, 1915, the stock was boosted to $39,190,500. This was done to pay the principal and interest on $7,000,000 of debenture bonds. Finally, on Jan. 25, 1917, the authorized stock was made $45,000,000.

The Pittsburgh Coal company has mines at Springfield, Virden, Girard, and perhaps other places in Illinois. Formerly the Pittsburgh Coal Company of New Jersey had control of the Pittsburgh Coal company of Pennsylvania. Poor says that the Pittsburgh of New Jersey paid 7 per cent dividends on preferred stocks between 1900 and 1903 and then paid 1¾ per cent quarterly during 1904 and 1905. Between 1906 and 1909 no dividends were paid. Between 1910 and April 25, 1918, 5 per cent was paid annually.

The Pittsburgh Coal company of Pennsylvania paid 1¼ per cent on preferred stock on April 25, 1916; July 25, 1916; Oct. 25, 1916; Jan. 25, 1917; April 25, 1917; July 25, 1917; Oct. 25, 1917; Jan. 25, 1918, and April 25, 1918. In addition $3.48 was paid July 25, 1917, in the form of a dividend, but appears more as an adjustment of the affairs of the two companies in accordance with an agreement previously made.

LABOR NOTES

The gas house workers' union has been launched through the efforts of Tim Murphy and Emmett Flood, organizers.

The grievance committee of the Chicago Federation of Labor has adjusted differences between the Health Officers' association and the health department over the employment of its members.

Members of Upholsterers' union local No. 24, say they will remain on strike until the wholesale furniture dealers grant their demand of $44 for forty-four hours work in a week.

The boot and shoe workers' union, local No. 14, headed by Miss Agnes Johnson, organizer, gave a dance last night at Schoenhofen's hall, Milwaukee and Ashland avenues.

Unions comprising the mechanical trades employed in the stockyards have formed a council known as the mechanical trades council of the packing house industry. J. J. Brennan of Firemen's union, local No. 7, has been elected president.

400 CARLOADS OF COALGIVEN CHICAGO IN DAY

About 400 cars of coal were released yesterday to retailers and manufacturers in the Chicago district on orders from T. W. Proctor, chairman of the regional coal committee. Eighty per cent of this amount was alloted to the city of Chicago.

Eleven thousand cars also were ordered released into the Chicago switching district and as fast as these come in notices will be sent to the consignees. No more trains were ordered taken off by R. H. Aishton, regional director for the railroads in the northwestern district.

Attorney Frank E. Harkness was called to Washington by Fuel Administrator Garfield to be special legal advisor in connection with the distribution of coal to the railroads.

New York Pressmen Going to Work; Strike Near End

New York, Nov. 8.—[Special.]—The end of the tieup in the printing industry which has existed in New York City for six weeks, is now practically in sight, as a result of the return of more than two-thirds of the pressmen to the international union. L. Berry, president of the international body, announced today that 1,680 of the 2,369 men in the old union were now in good standing, and that the office would be kept open all of tomorrow to enable all of the men to join.

MY, HOW THE MONEY ROLLS OUT.

There were 3,555,309 money order transactions in the Chicago postoffice during October, amounting to $63,734,539. Compared with the same month last year this is a 29 per cent increase in number of transactions., and an increase of 60.92 per cent in amount.

BRYAN'S DREAM COMES TRUE AND MINTS ARE BUSY

Heirlooms Melted as Silver Sell at $1.23 an Ounce.

The silver rush is on.

Not since the days of the discovery of the great Comstock lode and the silver tongued oratory of "16 to 1" Bryan has the white metal caused such a stir. This time there is no mad dash for the fields of Tonopah, no angry argument in the halls of debate. The rush is toward the pawnshops and mints of the country, where family plate and old silver heirlooms are being exchanged for gold. For "1,000 fine" silver has reached the highest mark in eighty years—$1.23⅝ per ounce.

Brings In Earrings.

"It breaks my heart to do it," wailed one woman, mingling her tears with the big silver earrings Uncle Silas gave her long, long years ago. "Hi Cost is the fellow that's to blame. How much are they worth, mister?"

"Well," says the high priest of a three ball establishment in West Madison street, "three years ago I couldn't give you much over 40 cents an ounce. But the price is 95 copper pennies today."

Some Ask Dollar.

Even the jewelers are seizing the silver opportunity to get rid of old fashioned knives and forks whose patterns have gone out of style. Some of them, according to L. Adelsdorf of Goldsmith Brothers' Smelting and Refining company, are still holding out for an even dollar on scrap silver.

"They've been waiting for that figure for twenty years," he said, "but I'm afraid they'll be disappointed. Silver has reached its high water mark. At present the price is stationary."

Mints Kept Busy.

Reports from New York indicate that the eastern mints are daily receiving a great deal of silver plate and old jewelry that has been lured from storage houses and attics by the boom prices. The tear-wet heirlooms are first cast into the crucible and converted into bars, which are assayed and their fine silver contents ascertained. The mints pay the "official" price of the day, minus a nominal charge for melting.

Platinum is also rising in value. Where from $40 to $60 was paid a few years ago, the present price is $125 an ounce, according to Mr. Adelsdorf.

VOTE U. S. RIGHT TO WITHDRAW FROM LEAGUE

Senators Adopt Change to Article I. by Vote of 50 to 35.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 8.—[Special.]—The peace treaty opposition in the senate scored another notable victory again today in their fight to Americanize the league of nations.

By the decisive vote of 50 to 35, the senate adopted reservation number 2, after rejecting every effort of the administration forces to kill it or weaken it with amendments.

The reservation accomplishes two highly important purposes:

First—It gives to the United States the clear, absolute, and unqualified right to withdraw from the league of nations upon two years' notice.

Second—It empowers congress, by majority vote, to withdraw the United States from the league and shears the president of all power to prevent withdrawal.

May Propose Actual Withdrawal.

A resolution of withdrawal probably will be introduced at an early date in preparation for possible failure of the league to function in a manner conducive to American interests.

For the first time since the voting on the treaty began, the Republicans stood absolutely solid and all cast their votes in favor of the reservation. All of the thirty-five votes against the reservation were Democratic, but five Democrats bolted and joined the Republicans in support of the reservation. Among these Democrats was Senator Chamberlain of Oregon, who heretofore has been voting with the administration forces. Senator Chamberlain announced he would support several other reservations.

Senators not voting, paired, were:

For the reservation—Elkins, Frelinghuysen, Kellogg, Sutherland, Republicans, and Shields, Democrat.

Text of Reservation.

The text of the reservation follows: "The United States so understands and construes article I. that in case of notice of withdrawal from the league of nations, as provided in said article, the United States shall be the sole judge as to whether all its international obligations and all its obligations under the said covenant have been fulfilled, and notice of withdrawal by the United States may be given by a concurrent resolution of the congress of the United States."

The chief opposition to the reservation centered upon the provision giving congress the right to withdraw the United States from the league by concurrent resolution. A concurrent resolution requires merely a majority vote in both houses and the president has no power to veto it. Numerous efforts were made to amend this provision and restore the president's veto power, but all were voted down.

Vote Down Changes.

Senator Thomas of Colorado, Democrat, first proposed to strike out all reference to the manner of giving notice of withdrawal. This was defeated, 48 to 37.

Senator Gore of Oklahoma, Democrat, proposed to give the president power to withdraw the United States from the league, but no power to veto a resolution of withdrawal by congress. He was in favor of as many ways as possible for getting out of the league, he said. This amendment was rejected, 68 to 18.

Senator King of Utah, Democrat, tried to have the reservation amended to give all nations, not merely the United States, the unqualified right of withdrawal. On the ground that other nations should take care of their own interests in this matter, the senate rejected the amendment, 52 to 30.

Sharp debate ensued when Senator Nelson of Minnesota, "mild" reservationist, offered an amendment to strike out the word "concurrent" and substitute "joint." The effect of his amendment, simple though it appeared, would have been to give the president power to veto notice of withdrawal by congress.

Not "Rebuke to President."

Senator Nelson appealed to the senate to accept his amendment on the ground that its rejection would be a rebuke to the president.

"The president is lying on his sick bed and we are asked to put a slight upon him," said Senator Nelson.

Senator Cummins of Iowa said he wanted to keep the power of withdrawal in congress, and Senator Lodge, the Republican leader, said that the idea of rebuking President Wilson had never entered the mind of the committee when it framed the reservation.

"In all probability the present occupant of the White House will not be present when the question of withdrawal comes up," Senator Lodge said. "It is much more likely to apply to a president of my own party. The amendment of the senator from Minnesota would mean a great advance of the executive power over the legislative branch. I do not want the president to be able to veto our withdrawal from the league."

Lenroot and Hitchcock in Tilt.

Senator Lenroot of Wisconsin, Republican, and Senator Hitchcock, the administration leader, engaged in a hot tilt.

"At this very moment," Senator Lenroot said, "we have the spectacle, boasted openly by some, that there are forty faithful Democrats who are willing to surrender their own convictions and their judgment and are waiting to find out what the president wants done about the reservations in this treaty and are then willing to vote however he asks them to vote. Then talk about passing a withdrawal resolution over the president's veto!

"I do not want the time to come when forty faithful Republicans, if there should be a Republican president who wants to keep us in the league against the will of the people, can keep us there."

Senator Hitchcock characterized Senator Lenroot's statement as "reckless and utterly unfounded."

The Nelson amendment was rejected, 45 to 39. Only two Republicans, Nelson and McCumber, voted for it.

Striking Butchers Find New Use for Saloon Bar

Crowd Watches Strikers Carve Meat and Prices at Same Time in Own Shop, Opened as Reprisal Move Against Bosses.

"STRIKE MARKET" JAMMED

While other striking butchers were busy cutting and selling meat at bargain prices in a hastily organized butcher shop at 6413-15 South Halsted street, where a saloon formerly was operated, three pickets from local No. 546 of the butchers' union were arrested yesterday in the loop.

The three gave the names of H. Arnold, H. Elliott, and James Talaczynski. They are charged with violating an injunction issued by Judge Sullivan in the Superior court. After being taken to the central station they were released on promises to obey the order.

South side citizens flocked to the co-operative butcher shop started by the union men and it was crowded.

The master butchers, who have refused to pay $40 a week, but have offered $33 to the workers, continue to make charges that the strikers are resorting to violence, threats, and bombs to compel them to sign the union agreement.

Guy E. O'Neal, secretary of the union, claims a victory, although he admits only 800 shops out of 3,000 are signed up. He said teamsters delivering meats may be called on for aid.

TAFT SAYS ALLIES WILL O. K. 13 OF 14 RESERVATIONS

New York, Nov. 8.—Thirteen of the fourteen reservations to the peace treaty proposed by the senate foreign relations committee do not affect materially the value of the covenant and probably would be accepted by the other powers, former President Taft today told the League for Political Education. The fourteenth reservation, proposed by Senator Reed of Missouri, is so drastic, Mr. Taft declared, that it is impossible of acceptance by other nations.

Senator Reed's proposal was interpreted by the former president as meaning: "I am glad to join your league if you are bound by it and I am not. I shall be glad to get all the benefit out of it so long as it does not require me to do anything."

The reservation declares the United States will not be bound by any question that involves its vital interest or honor submitted to the league or its tribunals of an international character.

Baby, Not Wife, Bosses Home, Suffragist Says

Boston, Mass., Nov. 8.—[Special.]—Miss Alice Stone Blackwell, president of the Massachusetts Woman's Suffrage association, takes exception to the declaration of Justice Farling of the London divorce court to the effect that the day is at hand when the wife will be the "boss of the home." She says:

"Justice Farling has the wrong idea if he applies it to Americans. In the ideal typical American home it is not the wife who is boss. It is not the husband who is boss. It is the baby who is boss.

"Neither husband nor wife should be the boss of the household. Of course, joking aside, we do know that it is only human nature for a woman to be less easily imposed upon if she has some money of her own."

Washington, D. C., Nov. 8.—Under the revised order, announced tonight by the railroad administration, foreign owned ships may receive permits for bunkering in American ports if their cargo does not include coal. The permits, however, will be only for sufficient coal to carry the vessel to its next bunkering station.

Arthur Drebeck, 4334 South Wood street, knocked a gun out of one robber's hand and ran. Another robber fired several ineffectual shots at him. Other victims reported were:

Newark, N. J., Nov. 8.—The United States shipping board has directed the Submarine Boat corporation of Port Newark, to cease construction work on the last thirty-two of the 150 steel ships for which the government contracted, it was learned today. Eighty-eight vessels have been launched and the eighty-ninth will be launched next Tuesday. The 118th keel will be laid immediately afterwards, the last one under the present orders.

BOOZE FIGHT IS A REAL FIGHT IN SOBER EVANSTON

Arrest of Chief and Detective Asked After Battle.

The Evanston police station was the scene of a rough and tumble melodrama yesterday evening. Chief of Police Charles Leggett, a couple of lawyers, three alleged whisky sellers, and numerous spectators formed the cast. Here's the tale:

Deputy United States Marshal Tom C. Smith went to Evanston to serve warrants charging conspiracy to sell liquor. The first two men to be served were William Kidd, 1424 Lake street, and Walter Schumacher, 1735 Darrow avenue. The third was William Perry, 827 Foster street, who was charged with both selling and conspiring to sell.

Private Stock Stolen.

Early Monday morning, Oct. 5, the home of Norris H. Bokum, wealthy insurance man of Evanston, was broken into and numerous quarts and gallons of 1881 whisky disappeared. Schumacher and Kidd were charged with the crime and were haled before Justice of the Peace Samuel Harrison yesterday.

The judge dismissed the local cases —and the marshal served his federal warrants before the men left the station.

The Battle Starts.

Arthur Johnston, Evanston detective sergeant, aided the marshal. This enraged Schumacher, who threatened to "get" the detective. Schumacher was hurled through a door. Then F. M. Collins, an attorney representing Kidd, is said to have started to hit Johnston, when the chief of police took a hand and cleared the station.

Warrants have now been issued for the chief and for Johnston.

WASHINGTON NEWS —IN BRIEF—

[Washington Bureau of The Tribune.]
WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 8.

THE government demonstrated today its intention to wage relentless warfare on anarchists and radicals in the United States who advocate the overthrow of the government. Over 200 adherents of a Red organization known as the "Union of Russian Workers," have been arrested in raids conducted in various cities yesterday by agents of the department of justice. Attorney General Palmer declared that aliens of this character are to be deported.

PEACE plans of the government in the coal strike having been thrown down by miners' union officials at the eleventh hour, all forces of the administration prepared today to back up the mandatory order issued by the federal court at Indianapolis commanding the union officials to rescind the strike order by 6 o'clock Tuesday evening. The general opinion here is that the order will be obeyed, although union leaders have said it would be defied.

THE senate by a vote of 50 to 35 adopted reservation No .2 in the Lodge peace treaty ratification plan, which gives the United States the absolute and unqualified right to withdraw from the league of nations upon two years' notice, and empowers congress by majority vote to withdraw the United States from the league and shears the president of all power to prevent such withdrawal.

THE Red Cross, with $14,000,000 on hand, with $10,000,000 needed to finish its work in Europe, and $5,000,000 necessary for an emergency fund, is depending upon the success of its present drive for $15,000,000 more to carry out its 1920 peace program, which includes work necessary to be done for American soldiers and sailors and for families of those afflicted and plans for preventive and relief work in dealing with public health problems in the United States.

STEEL STRIKE IS BLAMED ON GARY AND RADICALS

Senate Body Holds Board of Mediation Would End 'Barbarism.'

Washington, D. C., Nov. 8.—Refusal of Chairman Gary of the United States Steel corporation to meet union representatives and the determination of the American Federation of Labor to organize the steel industry, rather than any complaint of the steelworkers themselves, brought about the steel strike in the opinion of the senate committee, which investigated the controversy.

In its report, submitted to the senate today, the committeee characterized all strikes as "industrial barbarism," and recommended establishment of a permanent mediation board similar to the former war labor board as a means of settling industrial disputes. The board should have, the committee said, powers of compulsory investigation, admitting it to all facts, but compulsory arbitration was not recommended.

Committee's Work Summarized.

The committee summed up its findings as follows:

That laborers in the steel mills had a just complaint relative to long hours of service, though wages were satisfactory.

That they had the right to have representatives of their own choosing present grievances to employers, though possibly the representatives should come from the industry affected.

That behind the strike there was massed a considerable element of "I. W. W.s, radicals, revolutionists, and Russian soviets."

Remedies Suggested.

Remedies suggested by the committee included:

That congress establish a commission somewhat of the nature of the war labor board, with wide powers, though not with the power of compulsory arbitration.

That an Americanization law be passed requiring the effective education of foreign and native illiterates.

That congress consider ways and means of extending aid to workmen seeking to buy their own homes.

That naturalization laws be amended so as to provide for the deportation of aliens who fail to learn English within five years.

That congress enact stringent legislation dealing with anarchists, revolutionists, and "all who would destroy the American government."

Committee a Unit.

Committee members who conducted the investigation were fairly unanimous in the report, though leaving open points on which they could not agree. The report was signed by Senator Kenyon of Iowa, chairman, and Senators Sterling, South Dakota; Phipps, Colorado (Reps.), and McKellar, Tennessee, and Walsh, Massachusetts (Dems.).

Treating of the causes of the strike, the committee expressed the opinion that along with the refusal of Gary to meet union officials the walkout was precipitated by the determination of the American Federation of Labor to organize the steel industry. Wages are not a factor in the strike, the committee held, being high enough to give no reason for dissatisfaction. Hours of the workers, however, the senators believed, are too long.

Further behind the strike, the committee found, was massed "a considerable element" of revolutionary radicalism, of which it is said there is no question that William Z. Foster, secretary of the general strike committee, was a leader.

With Jacob Margolis, attorney for the I. W. W. and assistant in organizing the strike, Secretary Foster came in for unsparing condemnation.

DECISION TO END PEACE MEETINGS STIRS ITALIANS

Demand That Fiume Be Disposed Of Before Close.

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

PARIS, Nov. 8.—The Italians are highly dissatisfied with the peace conference's decision to adjourn and leave the Adriatic and Fiume questions unsettled. The Italians assert that it will take years to solve the problems by working through the foreign offices and embassies.

It is pointed out, however, that the Italians themselves took the Fiume problem out of the hands of the supreme council when Foreign Minister Tittoni sent the proposition direct to President Wilson at Washington, instead of sending it through the American peace commission in Paris.

United States Will Oppose Change.

However, the Americans and British will insist that the peace conference's decision be not changed and will demand that the final adjournment take place at the end of this month. Arrangements already are being made to turn over the Hotel Crillon to the French owners when the American commission vacates.

The Italians now are complaining that Great Britain and France are willing to give them Fiume and let them realize all of their aspirations in the Adriatic, and that President Wilson alone opposes them.

It is true that Premiers Lloyd George and Clemenceau are willing that the Italians should take Fiume and the Adriatic coast if the question can only be settled immediately.

Wilson Cannot Change Now.

However, when President Wilson gave his famous address to the Italian people early last spring, in which he definitely stated that Italy could not rightly insist upon seizing Fiume, he was backed by Premiers Lloyd George and Clemenceau, although they craftily did not sign the statement.

After Mr. Wilson was committed on the affair and it was announced as one of his principles, he could not recede although both the French and British were willing and anxious to have him do so.

It is believed that after the Italian elections of Nov. 16 some means will be found to reach a compromise on Fiume, but the Italians will have to do most of the compromising, and it is known that the president is inflexible in his attitude.

Haase's Assassin Called Insane; Sent to Asylum

C., Nov. 8.—The first commercial transaction between the governments of the United States and Germany since April 6, 1917, was made a few days ago, when a bill for $64,800, covering cost of transporting prisoners of war to Germany, was presented in Berlin through diplomatic channels.

WARRIOR POET URGES ITALY 'TO LET FIUME FUME'

Refuse Allies' Mandate to Restore Order. He Advises Rome.

FIUME, Nov. 8.—[By the Associated Press.]—Gabriele d'Annunzio, in a statement made public today, proposes that Italy declins to restore order in the Fiume situation.

"The way out is wide, clear, direct," he says. "It is the same for us who entered the city Sept. 12. I have stated for the third and last time the necessity of annexation, declaring that 'Fiume, its territory, port, and railway, belong to Italy.'

"Turn Mandate Back."

"I realize that the Italian government persists in its erroneous judgment by accepting from the supreme council a mandate to restore order in Fiume when I have used all means to put the situation before the government in its true light.

"No one can accuse me of lacking clearness, firmness, and loyalty. From the first hour I have borne all responsibility.

"Now, interpreting the wish of Italian citizens and soldiers, I propose that the Italian government send back the Fiume problem to the peace conference by returning the mandate, which it will be impossible to execute without shedding fraternal blood, and without the danger of civil war throughout the nation.

Prepared to Fight.

"When the mandate is returned the government of Fiume claims the honor of remaining solely responsible for its attitude before the conference and before the world. The head of the Fiume government accepts now the entire responsibility and is prepared to repel with force any force, from whatever quarter it comes."

"Have I spoken clearly? If there are impenetrable ears, let them use the trepan."

STRIKES COST N. Y. WORKERS $28,000,000

New York, Nov. 8.—[Special.]—Strikes in New York have cost workers so far this year over $28,000,000 in wages, not including the shorter strikes lasting a few days to a week.

Cigarmakers, returning to work after four months' strike with only 10 per cent increase, lost $10,000,000 in wages. Workers in longshoremen's strike, returning to work on a prestrike basis of 65 cents an hour and $1 overtime, have lost $8,000,000, while wage loss to clerks, teamsters, and others connected with tieups is $4,000,000.

The unsettled printers' strike, having already driven fifty publishers out of New York, has reduced pay rolls $6,000,000 for this year in comparison with last.

Foster, 'Exiled' from Ohio, Finds Haven in New York

New York, Nov. 8.—William Z. Foster, secretary of the national committee for organizing steel workers, who was driven out of Johnstown, Pa., yesterday, addressed a massmeeting in Madison Square garden tonight, at which he declared: "Despite what the lying press has said, this steel strike is effective." The men are going to stay on strike, he added. Encouragement to the strikers was offered when more than $160,000 was collected and more than $500,000 pledged to aid them.

HOLD 7 TAKEN IN LOCAL RAIDS AS DANGEROUS REDS

U. S. to Ask Deportation of the Prisoners as Nihilists.

Seven men, including one whom federal officials believe one of the most dangerous radicals in the country, are being held by the government authorities in Chicago as a result of the nation-wide roundup Friday night.

Deportation warrants for three of the Chicago men were announced by Inspector Childs of the immigration department, and orders to hold the remainder were received by telegraph from Washington.

These Men Held Here.

The names of the men held were revealed by Edward G. Brennan, chief of the local office of the bureau of investigation for the department of justice, after he had kept silent for hours. They are:

E. WASLEYEVSKI, 2328 Carver avenue, secretary of the Chicago Union of Russian Workers.

JOHN BOROVSKI, 2600 Thomas street.

ANTON ROLICH, 1453 West Huron street.

JOSEPH HOROSCHINIA, Fullerton and Clybourn avenues.

ELI RATKOVSKI, no address.

THOMAS WAKUT, 1346 South Morgan street.

NICK ALFERCHICK, 1215 South Peoria street.

108 Questioned Here.

Mr. Brennan declined to estimate the number of men seized in the raids in the Chicago district, but stated that he had interviewed 108 in thirty-six hours.

Wasleyevski, Borovski and Rolich are being held at the county jail awaiting trial on charges of being revolutionary aliens. Evidence in their case will be forwarded to Secretary of Labor Wilson, who will make final decision. The others are being held at the Chicago avenue and Desplaines stations, awaiting receipt of warrants from Washington.

All the men are members of the Union of Russian Workers, known as the most dangerous radical organization in the country. Many more members of the same organization are now under surveillance, and many further arrests will follow, according to Mr. Brennan.

Both Lenine and Trotsky at one time were active in the organization, which was nihilistic in principle. Its American founder was Wilhelm Svetzov, formerly a steel worker in the Gary mills, now chief of police at Petrograd under the bolshevik rule.

Documentary Evidence.

Documentary evidence was found in the possession of the men arrested. One pamphlet, entitled "Bread and Freedom," was of especial interest to the battle to relieve the workers of the curse of capitalism," reads the pamphlet, which is printed in Russian.

"Among the many straight action aids to such an overthrow will be found sabotage. Praise and good will will be accorded all those who use every effort in carrying out through real acts the principles defined by sabotage. Sabotage consists in turning against capital every weapon within the power of the proletariat."

Placing the Credit.

Agents of the department of justice alone are responsible for the work done in tracing and arresting the many members of the union throughout the country. Neither the army intelligence service or the police aided, according to Mr. Brennan.

Credit for the major part of the work in investigating and arresting the Russians was given by Mr. Brennan to August H. Loula, sergeant in charge of the federal Red squad, and J. M. Spolansky, federal agent.

No members of the various radical organizations with more or less political aims were arrested, Mr. Brennan said. "The I. W. W. and the communists are not up in this affair. It is purely a matter connected with this one nihilistic organization. However, that doesn't mean that the government is asleep on other matters." the government agents. "The test of strength will come in Radicals Seem Cheerful.

Radical leaders appeared cheerful, some even chuckling at what they characterized as "another fizzle of the capitalist police."

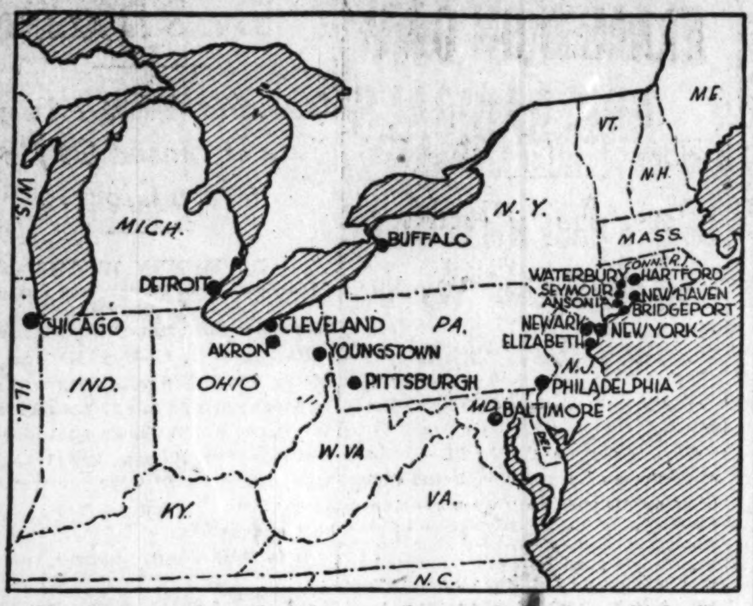
"The men arrested were all small fry—they were not leaders in any sense," Dennis Batt, chief of the minority section of the Communist party, said. "I don't understand just what Egan, McDonough, Loula, and Brennan were after, unless it was simply to create a sensation.

"Deportation proceedings against the foreigners will be welcomed. I don't know of a radical of foreign birth in Chicago today who would not be glad to gain free transportation across the ocean."

Knocked from Bicycle; May Die; Autoist Held

Stephen Warzinlec, 27, 1320 Cornell avenue, was probably fatally injured when knocked from his bicycle last night by an auto driven by Stanley Pawloski, 35, 2343 Cortez street, who was held.

WHERE RED CENTERS WERE RAIDED



The above map shows the industrial centers where the federal government has taken into custody hundreds of members of the Union of Russian Workers. According to Attorney General Palmer, these radicals are "even more radical than the bolsheviki." Washington has announced its intention of making a complete cleanup of all alien radicals who are fomenting strife for the purpose of undermining the government and deporting them.

In the east the chief centers of the Reds are in New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, and Pennsylvania. Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, Buffalo, Akron, Youngstown, and Pittsburgh are the chief centers in the middle west.

RIGHTS-DUTIES OF ALL NATIONS GIVEN IN CODE

PARIS, Nov. 8.—[By the Associated Press.]—The first draft of the declaration on the "rights and duties of nations," which is proposed as a basis for a future code of international law, is before the "international juridical union."

This document, which Prof. Bourgeois predicted would, when adopted in its final form, be as historic an instrument as the famous declaration of the rights of man and of the citizen which was issued by the constituent assembly at the beginning of the French revolution, consists of a preamble and four articles, outlining the rights of states, the independence of states, the equality of all states before the law, and the duties of states. The principles are stated in broad terms and in less than 500 words.

It is proposed to follow the declaration with a concise draft of international law, which will be submitted to the various governments or to the league of nations for approval.

were made yesterday in fifteen cities and the arrest of several hundred radicals allied with what is known as "the union of Russian workers" seeking to overthrow the government.

Will Deport All Undesirables.

Notice that the spirit of revolution that crept into the country in the wake of the war will be put down came from the department of justice in the announcement that alien radicals, "Reds," "revolutionists," "anarchists," "bolshevists" and all undesirables who seek to foment strife for the purpose of undermining the government will be deported.

Attorney General Palmer turned his attention to the dragnet being conducted by government agents and announced that undesirable aliens who had been caught in the government net would be deported.

Tells of Big Raids.

The department of justice told of its campaign in the following statement:

"Two hundred and eleven Russian Reds, one of them with all the materials for making a bomb in his possession, were taken into custody last night by agents of the department of justice in a raid that covered more than fifteen of the largest industrial centers of this country. The raids were made at the direction of A. Mitchell Palmer, attorney general. Anthony Caminetti, commissioner of immigration, coöperated.

"Raiders captured a complete counterfeiting plant at Newark, N. J. This included plates, presses, and bank notes ready for circulation. Red flags, guns, revolvers, and thousands of pieces of literature also were taken.

"Union of Russian Workers."

"The Reds taken into custody were all leaders of the Union of Russian Workers in this country, an organization that does not believe in any form of organized government, and teaches the overthrow of government by force and violence. This organization has more than 7,000 members throughout the country and has been engaged in active propaganda against the present form of government for many months.

"Romen Bosichok, organizer of the union at Trenton, N. J., had the material for making bombs in his room when taken into custody. The counterfeiting plant at Newark, N. J., was an elaborate affair. A large supply of counterfeit bank notes was on hand.

"The Union of Russian Workers is even more radical than the bolsheviki.

Own Books Prove Guilt.

"The due books of the members of this organization contain the following preamble of the constitution of the organization, which reveals the purposes of the Union of Russian Workers:

"'The present society is divided into two opposing classes—the downtrodden workers and peasants, on the one side, producing by their work all the riches of the world; the rich people, on the other side, who have grabbed all the riches into their hands.

"'Many a time the class of the oppressed stood up against the rich parasites and their faithful servant and protector—the government—to conquer its full liberation from the yoke of capitalism and political power, but every time it suffered defeat, not being fully conscious of its own final goal and means, by which victory can be accomplished, thus remaining only a weapon in the hands of its enemies.

"'The struggle between these two classes will end only when the toiling masses, organized as a class, make themselves masters of all the riches of this world by means of a violent social revolution.'"

WILSON'S PARIS CHAUFFEUR HERE LOOKING FOR JOB

Has anybody a chauffeur's job to give the soldier who drove President Wilson and his party about in Paris during the peace conference and who can drive any car made?

ROBERT E. CUMMINGS.

Corporal Robert E. Cummings of the 415th company, motor transport corps, is back in Chicago, after eighteen months' overseas service, and has applied to the bureau for returning soldiers, sailors and marines at 120 West Adams street for a job.

He told Maj. John S. Bonner and his aids at the bureau some of his adventures yesterday. For two months, during April and May, he was detailed to drive one of the cars President Wilson had at his disposal in Paris.

"They were so busy over there that they did not even have time to get the president's flag and keep it on some of the cars he was using," he said.

"I drove him around Paris a good many times. Mrs. Wilson, Miss Margaret Wilson, and Admiral Grayson made other trips while I was at the wheel."

Cummings is stopping at the Y. M. C. A. hotel, 822 South Wabash avenue.

Socialists in Italy Start Game They Can't Finish

COLLEGE 'PAJAMA PARADE' PARADES RIGHT INTO JAIL

Sacramento, Cal., Nov. 8.—A "pajama parade" intended to advertise a college football game today, went astray last night, and its student participators as a result are crowding the local jail. They are accused of delaying a mail train an hour and twenty minutes.

The pajama clad students, according to the version given by the train conductor, boarded the train at Davis, at the University of California, saying they wished to come to Sacramento. They refused to pay fares.

Two miles outside the city the engine was cut off and an appeal sent by it to the local police for help.

Meanwhile instructions had come from San Francisco to hold the persons charged with causing the delay, and instead of aiding the conductor to collect fares the police arrested more than a hundred students.

U. S. TO SELL 94 REAL, OFFICIAL 'WATER WAGONS'

Now that Chicago, so to speak, has been forced to climb aboard the "water wagon," the surplus property division of the war department, with no thought of being facetious, offers an opportunity for a number of citizens to acquire their own medium of transportation. Ninety-four drinking water carts have been offered for sale and may be inspected at the zone supply office at 1819 West Thirty-ninth street.

"The water carts," reads an official announcement, "consist of a 160 gallon steel water tank mounted on two wheels and equipped with a hand lever force pump, used in filling the tank. Water carts of this kind were used in France for hauling drinking water to the troops. Around the platform at the rear of the tank is a pipe fitted with a number of small faucets, which were used to fill canteens. These carts are very strongly built and could be readily converted into sprinklers or plant spraying apparatus."

Fifty logging carts also are offered for sale at a fixed price of $70 each.

LEGION CIRCUS OPENED BY WOOD AND GOV. LOWDEN

Yanks Steadying Force in Unrest, the Army Chief Asserts.

Veterans of the world war were extolled last night by Gov. Lowden and Maj. Gen. Leonard A. Wood in addresses at the victory reunion and circus hippodrome of the American Legion of Illinois, which opened in the afternoon and will continue until next Saturday night. Gov. Lowden praised the spirit of Illinoisans in the war. Gen. Wood lauded the legion as a stabilizing factor in the current unrest.

Sees Guaranty in Legion.

The governor said in part:

"I am here because it is the duty of every American to avail himself of every opportunity to pay a tribute to the American soldiers of the late war.

"The Legion is one of the most hopeful organizations of the present day. Just as the Grand Army of the Republic was the most influential organization in its generation, and the most helpful to this country, so the great American Legion is our best guaranty for the future against disaster.

"I am glad to say a word for the legion. I have no doubt when the history of this time is written the legion will be recognized as having contributed as much to its country's welfare in peace as it did by winning battles on the firing line."

Force for Law and Order.

Gen. Wood said:

"We are assembled to welcome the men of the American Legion. I am glad to join in the welcome. The American Legion is as fine an organization as we have ever had or ever will have in this country."

He then spoke of some of the recent disorders throughout the country and of the stabilizing influence the legion had shown itself to be.

"In Gary," he said, "the American Legion was a force for law and order when everything else failed."

He declared he wished the legion to look after the men crippled during war service.

"Men who have fought as these men have fought," he said, "can be depended upon ably to support all good measures. So, good luck to the American Legion—we're all for it."

Arnold Heads Project.

Directing the affair are Bion J. Arnold, chairman of the executive committee; H. H. Merrick, treasurer, and George M. Spangler, in charge of ticket sales. The women's committee is directed by Mrs. Charles E. Frankenthal and Mrs. Marshall Field III. Mr. Arnold introduced the speakers.

Featuring the circus, which has two daily performances, are the veteran clowns, Billy Rice and Felix Adler, who went to France as mess sergeants with the 168th infantry, Rainbow division. There are daredevil bareback riders, merry go rounds, and public dancing.

Boy's Dog Leads Father to Body of Missing Son

Clinton, Ia., Nov. 8.—Grief stricken antics of his pet dog led to the discovery of the body of 13 year old John Francis McManus, lying between two logs in a small creek near his home, near Dewitt.

The boy evidently had slipped in attempting to cross the creek, and in falling discharged a shotgun he carried, the charge entering his body and apparently causing instant death.

The discovery was made by the boy's father, John McManus, and two sisters, who started from the home when the dog returned alone and gave unmistakable evidences of excitement.

Nov. 11 to Start New War; No Armistice for H. C. L.

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 8.—Gov. James P. Goodrich today joined hands with the treasury department in its campaign against the high cost of living. He issued a proclamation calling upon citizens of Indiana to mark armistice day, celebrating the end of the war against Germany, as the beginning of a new war, against waste and extravagance. The governor agrees with the savings division of the treasury department that extravagance is one of the chief causes of the high cost of living.

Traction System Workers of Illinois Get Back Pay

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 8.—A wage agreement retroactive to Oct. 1 last, and running to Dec. 1, 1920, providing a scale of 60 cents an hour for motormen and conductors and 47½ cents for brakemen, has been signed by the Illinois Traction System with its employes, traction officials announced today. The men were given a 10 per cent increase over the old scale for August and September.

Indications Are That Berlin Will Eat This Winter

BERLIN, Nov. 8.—Food prospects for Germany for the coming year are good because of the plentiful harvest, according to the ministry of food, which decries pessimism. Beginning with this month the quality of bread will be improved. The potato harvest is as yet uncertain, but it is believed it will be enough for the whole year. The meat supply is not expected to improve.

Austria Plans Amnesty, but Not for Profiteers

VIENNA, Nov. 8.—An amnesty act, which would cover minor civil offenses, political crimes, and certain breaches of military discipline, but which would exclude from its operation profiteers and food hoarders, has been proposed by the government.

The act would become effective Nov. 12, in celebration of the anniversary of the formation of the republic of Austria.

BOOM FOREMAN AS U. S. CHIEF OF AMERICAN LEGION

Minneapolis Papers for Chicagoan; Delegates Silent.

BY C. G. MacARTHUR.

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 8.—[Special.]—With the arrival of the Illinois delegation to the national convention of the American Legion tomorrow "collective bargaining" to bring the national convention to Chicago next year will begin.

Capt. Marshall Field, Col. Foreman, Maj. A. A. Sprague, and a sprinkling of downstate delegates have arrived and participated in several committee meetings concerning the financial program of the legion. So far there has been little mention of the general election.

May Select Foreman.

A few of the Minneapolis papers have heralded Col. Foreman as the next national commander, but the "foxy grandpas" who will work the machinery are as reticent as clams on the subject.

A boom also has been started for Col. "Bill" Donovan of New York, whose 165th infantry was brigaded with Reilly's Bucks throughout the war.

Lieut. Col. Theodore Roosevelt, whose qualifications for the post have been discussed since the organization of the legion, has spent most of his time since arriving in Minneapolis denying he will accept office.

Admit Newspaper Men.

Col. Foreman was instrumental in abolishing secret committee meetings and having the legion go on record as favoring open covenants, openly arrived at.

Newspaper men are admitted to all committee meetings.

Indianapolis is making a strong fight for the legion headquarters, and will doubtless be opposed by Chicago unless a trade is arranged. As an example of how strongly the delegates feel toward radicalism, the one argument offered by Col. Robert H. Tyndall, chairman of the Indiana delegation, is that the establishment of legion headquarters in Indianapolis will have a balancing effect on the labor unions, whose headquarters are there.

The convention will open Monday and adjourn Wednesday night.

Girl Missing Two Years Telephones Her Parents

Scranton, Pa., Nov. 8.—Margaret Dickey, whose mysterious disappearance two years ago when she was 14 years old caused search in every large city without success, has been found.

Her parents were overjoyed last night when the girl called them by telephone from Washington and appealed to them to come to her at once. Mr. and Mrs. Dickey left early today for the capital.

The message was the first word received from the girl since she disappeared.

Welcome of Reformers Not Hearty in England

LONDON, Nov. 8.—English newspapers, as a rule, are still continuing to ridicule the prohibition campaign being directed by American workers in this country. The general attitude of the press is that this is the easiest way of discrediting the attempt to make England "dry," although some of the papers have made decidedly hostile attacks on the invaders from the United States, claiming that England can run her own affairs without assistance from outside.

OHIO DRYS LEAP FINAL HURDLE ON 'WET' COURSE

Practically a Complete Count Returns Them Winner by 381.

Columbus, O., Nov. 8.—Ohio last Tuesday voted to sustain the action of its legislature in ratifying the federal prohibition amendment by a majority of 1,480, according to complete returns from all but two precincts in the state and official returns from seventy-nine of the eighty-eight counties, tabulated tonight at the office of the secretary of state. The vote stood:

After the tabulation announcement was made by the Cuyahoga county [Cleveland] election board the official vote in that county gives the wets a gain of 1,099 on the federal prohibition amendment over the unofficial figures reported to the secretary of state. This would reduce the dry majority for the amendment to 381.

In Cincinnati tonight James A. White, superintendent of the Ohio Anti-Saloon league, when informed of the announced wet gains in Cuyahoga county, declared, even if correct, they would not of themselves change the results on the amendment, as the league's figure showed the amendment carried by "several thousand dry."

Nearly Clean Sweep for Drys.

Although returns on the other prohibition questions voted upon had not been tabulated officially, they indicated that the repeal of state-wide prohibition was defeated by 30,000 or more majority, that the 2.75 per cent beer proposal was defeated by a majority of 15,000 or more, and that the wets succeeded in defeating the Crabbe prohibition enforcement act by a majority of 25,000 or more.

As the situation stood tonight, the drys conceded the defeat of the Crabbe enforcement act, while the wets conceded the defeat of the prohibition repeal and 2.75 per cent beer proposals.

Kentucky Drys Claim 10,000.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 8.—With a dry majority of 7,797 showing on the face of complete unofficial returns from ninety-nine of the 120 counties of the state, prohibitionists in Kentucky were jubilant today over their apparent victory. They declared that when the remaining twenty-one counties are heard from, the dry majority would go beyond 10,000. "Wet" organizations did not deny this assertion, some conceding defeat of the amendment.

Ritchie Wins in Maryland.

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 8.—Attorney General Albert C. Ritchie, Democrat, was elected governor of Maryland at last Tuesday's election by a plurality of 165 over Harry W. Nice, Republican, according to the complete official returns, the canvass of which was finished today. It was the closest gubernatorial election ever held in this state. The official vote stands: Ritchie, 112,240; Nice, 112,075.

Chairman Tait of the Republican state committee refused to concede the election of Ritchie. In a public statement he charges that "thousands of ballots were thrown out all over the state, particularly in Republican sections, for flimsy and legally insufficient reasons."

Deaths in Chicago by Automobiles in 1919 to date 354

Death, which had passed him by so many times on the Taliaferro flying field in Texas, yesterday claimed Archibald Paradise of 5322 South Michigan avenue. An automobile in which he was a passenger crashed into an iron lamppost at One Hundred and First street and Commercial avenue, and he was killed. Charles A. McAvoy of 5223 South Michigan avenue, a salesman for the A. G. Becker bond house, who was driving the car, is being held pending the inquest.

Paradise was the son of Maurice Paradise, a lace importer, with offices at 5 North Wabash avenue. He obtained his commission as a lieutenant in the army aviation section shortly before the armistice was signed.

McAvoy had driven a girl friend home in his low racing car when he met Paradise and a young woman at Fifty-fifth street and Michigan avenue. He offered to drive them home. He had taken the young woman home and was returning when he drove into the post.

Paradise was hurled from his seat and struck on his head. McAvoy was injured slightly.

"I don't know how it happened," McAvoy told the police. "I just became confused at that turn and lost control"

McAvoy is the son of James B. McAvoy, a contractor.

FEDERAL JURIST DOUBTS VALIDITY OF WAR DRY ACT

Judge Hand of New York Expresses Belief in Hotel Case.

New York, Nov. 8.—"Genuine doubt" as to the validity of the war time prohibition act, already held unconstitutional by a United States District court in Kentucky, was expressed today by Federal Judge L. A. Hand.

The opinion was given during the hearing of arguments on a motion to vacate an injunction classifying the Eastern hotel as a "public nuisance" under the Volstead law.

Words Are Weighed.

The question of the validity of the law was put aside by the judge as not coming within the scope of the hearing, but considerable importance was attached to his words as he reserved decision last week on three motions to have war time prohibition declared unconstitutional.

"Of course the act may be invalid," Judge Hand said in today's case. "There is to my mind a very genuine doubt about that. The act may be invalid, but we are not discussing its validity. We are discussing its meaning. It seems to be quite clear that its meaning is that it shall run beyond the present time because the president has not made any statement that the conclusion of the war may mean the conclusion of hostilities."

Arise from Direct Powers.

Judge Hand then asked both sides if they could furnish any authorities defining the war powers of congress. Assistant United States Attorney Earl B. Barnes, arguing for the government, said that to his knowledge there were none. He asserted that such war powers, however, arise from direct powers given congress to declare war.

ALFONSO DEPARTS FROM PARIS.

PARIS, Nov. 8.—King Alfonso of Spain left Paris tonight for Madrid. During the day the king visited the battlefields in the Noyon and Oise region.

GUNS BOOM, THEN SILENCE, TO MARK ARMISTICE DAY

2 Hour Artillery "Battle" Here Will Precede Tribute to Dead.

The dogs of war will bark their derndest for two hours Tuesday morning—then they will lie down and die. From 9 o'clock until 11 a battery of 75s commanded by Col. W. D. Newbill will spout destructive fire upon a line of trenches in Grant park. Airplanes, circling overhead, will direct the fire. Machine guns and rifles will spit replies. But promptly at 11 o'clock—the first anniversary to a minute of the signing of the armistice—the roar of the artillery barrage will cease and the strains of "The Star Spangled Banner" will float over the "battlefield."

Then all traffic will stop and pedestrians will face east for one minute in memory of the boys who died in the great war.

The entire day in Chicago will be a combination of Memorial day and the Fourth of July. There will be fireworks, flags, bands, speeches, and athletic events, cheers and tears, clamor and silent tribute.

Asks Fitting Observance.

"Nov. 11, 1918, will ever be a red letter day in history and it is fitting that we annually celebrate the day with proper ceremony," said Col. William Nelson Pelouze, chairman of the executive committee. "Chicago should not be behind other cities in demonstrating its gratitude to the men who fought, its reverence for the memory of those who fell, and its joy over the restoration of peace."

Some of the events of the day are the footrace from Grant park to Comiskey park, beginning at 1 o'clock; a football game and athletic carnival at the latter place; the American Legion's victory reunion and circus at the Stockyards hippodrome; a special dance at the Khaki and Blue club, open house at the Salvation Army hotels, the first reunion of the 2d division at the Hotel La Salle, and in the evening at 8:30 o'clock fireworks in Grant park opposite Congress street. The funds for the last event were donated by loop business men.

Fêtes for Heroes, Too.

In order that the boys who have not recovered from their wounds may not be forgotten, special vaudeville entertainment will be given in the hospitals.

An appeal has been made to the florists and the general public asking that flowers for the convalescents be sent to the Central Soldiers' and Sailors' club, 205 West Washington street, before 2 o'clock tomorrow. They will be distributed by the Red Cross.

The committee in charge of the armistice day celebration has requested that every one coöperate in making the day a success by bedecking himself and his property with flags.

A solemn high mass of thanksgiving and memorial, beginning Armistice week, will be held at 11 o'clock this morning in St. Vincent's church, Sheffield and Webster Avenues. The Rev. T. C. Powers, C. M., will be celebrant, the Rev. Thomas Lilley, C. M., deacon, and the Rev. M. E. Ries, C. M., subdeacon. The Very Rev. F. X. McCabe will speak. Twenty-one seats will not be occupied—and these will be decorated with gold stars.

REVEAL LOSSES AND SUCCESS OF SUBMARINE WAR

German Chiefs Tell Rise and Fall of Their Hopes.

BERLIN, Nov. 7.—[By the Associated Press.]—The submarine war was discussed at today's session of the national assembly subcommission investigating the war.

Capt. von Bartenbach, explaining the difficulty of communicating by wireless with submarines away from their base, related how seven Dutch ships were sunk owing to a submarine being submerged and failing to get a message giving permission for the vessels to pass. This severely strained diplomatic relations with Holland, according to Capt. von Bartenbach.

Col. von Merz asserted that Germany was able to decipher all English messages sent after 1914.

Admiral von Koch criticized Admiral von Tirpitz for the interview the minister of marine had with an American newspaper correspondent [in December, 1914] in which the submarine war was predicted.

Surprised by British Guns.

There were searching questions as to whether the British fleet was not speedier and better equipped with guns, armor, and higher gun elevation, enabling the British ships to shoot farther. It was asserted by Vice Admiral von Capelle, former minister of the navy, that during one encounter in the North sea between German and British warships, of unequal size, the British opened a long distance fire which amazed him.

Col. von Merz testified that he had picked up wireless messages from Rome to Petrograd showing that the British positions at Saloniki were seriously menaced, and therefore the British had confiscated all the Greek grain.

Admiral von Koch testified that Germany possessed 103 submarines in Febuary, 1918; 121 in March, 124 in April, 128 in May, 130 in July, 123 in August, 132 in September and 134 in October. The losses in the same month were only 49.

Handicapped by Inventions.

Capt. Bartenbach, commander of the submarine bases in Flanders, described the U-boat warfare. He said that in 1915 and 1916 hardly anything could harm the submarines; but in 1917 the work of the submarine became more difficult because of British inventions, such as listening stations, from which it was possible to hear any submarine entering the channel, and also the fast developing British flying service, which made it dangerous for U-boats.

This situation became materially worse in 1918. The Germans, however, were able to counteract the mines to some extent by sending aviators over the mine fields at ebb tide, when the mines could be charted.

Underestimated Allied Losses.

Testimony was also given that the Germans tried to underestimate, rather than overestimate, the losses of ships they sank. Each returning officer reported minutely as to the size and probable tonnage of vessels sunk. The admiralty subtracted 10 per cent.

Capt. Bartenbach said that the admiralty deducted 100,000 tons monthly for destruction by mines. In his opinion the submarine warfare had been declared too early, as Germany was not ready and did not have sufficient U-boats. Germany had only about thirty boats, he said, in February, 1916.

World Labor Delegates Visit Tomb of Washington

Washington, D. C., Nov. 8.—Delegates to the international labor conference today went to Mount Vernon on a pilgrimage to the tomb of George and Martha Washington.

More than thirty nations were represented in the party, which included government officials, prominent representatives of capital, and some of the best known labor leaders of the Old World.

The trip was made on the presidential yacht Mayflower, with Secretary Daniels as host. Secretary Wilson, conference chairman, also accompanied the conferees.

$11,000 Tax Holds 47 Russ Engines Worth $500,000

Paterson, N. J., Nov. 8.—[Special.]—This city has on its hands and does not know what to do with forty-seven locomotives worth $500,000, built in 1917 for the Russian government by the Cooke Locomotive works and seized through the failure of the Russian authorities to pay taxes of $11,000 levied on them.

After the engines were built it was found impossible by the Russian agents to secure shipping facilities.

Paterson levied a personal property assessment against the Russian government covering the forty-seven locomotives.

Miss Anne Morgan Offers Movie for French Fund

New York, Nov. 8.—[Special.]—Miss Anne Morgan, daughter of the late J. P. Morgan, recently returned from France, has gone into the motion picture business, it became known today when she saw reporters at her studio, 4 West Fortieth street. The motion picture venture in which Miss Morgan is interested is American committee for devastated France propaganda, for the organization needs $2,000,000 to "finish the job." The picture will show the war horrors through which one peasant family living in the Aisne district passed during the entire war period.

WARRING ARMIES TORTURE JEWS IN SOUTH RUSSIA

Barbarous Outrages by Both Sides Leave Hundreds Dead.

BY PAUL WILLIAMS.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 8.—"Two hundred thousand Jews have been murdered in Russia in the last twelve months, and the massacres continue unabated," asserted Dr. Isnel Called, representative here of the Grand Committe d'Action Zioniste. He talked to me at the headquarters of La Nation, a Jewish newspaper, of which the blank columns daily denote the activity of the censor.

"What Turkey did to the Armenians Russia is doing to the Jews," the doctor continued. "The Jew is the universal goat of Russia. Wherever there is fighting, no matter what factions are engaged, the Jews are massacred. The bolshevists kill them because they are bourgeoise. The followers of Denikine and Petlura kill them on the grounds they are bolshevists.

Murdered by Both Sides.

"On the southern front in the fighting between Petlura and Denikine the towns have changed hands sometimes a dozen times. Each time the Jews are murdered for the reason they are Jews. The bolshevists are retreating before Denikine, who is slaying them by the hundreds. The volunteers with Denikine carry flags on which is written, 'Kill the Jews and save Russia.' Pogroms appear whenever Denikine troops advance.

"I have indisputable evidence of persecutions of the most revolting nature. Ten year old girls are outraged in the presence of their parents, who become insane. Patriarchs are tied by their beards to vehicles and dragged to death. Young men are bound and forced to walk the plank into the River Dneiper. They are countless crimes too horrible for publication and almost unbelievable to white men.

Up to Allies.

"There is no end in sight to these terrors. The allies who are supplying the Denikine army can stop him if they bring sufficient pressure to bear on the commander.

"Thousands face death this winter."

ALL ANTI-STRIKE PROVISIONS OUT OF NEW RAIL LAW

Measure as Returned to House at Variance with Senate.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 8.—Finally refusing to include an anti-strike provision in its program of permanent railroad legislation, the house interstate commerce committee tonight completed the bill which will be presented for consideration in the house next Tuesday. Passage of the bill by the end of next week is planned, Republican Leader Mondell informed the house.

By that time, he said, he hoped the treaty situation in the senate would be such as to permit adjournment of the special session of congress. Night sessions of the house will be held next week, if necessary, to pass the bill, he added.

Bar Anti-Strike Provision.

The committee worked all day on the labor provision. Various forms of anti-strike legislation, including a provision carrying fine and imprisonment for strikers, were voted down, none of the proposals receiving more than a half dozen votes. A minority report on this or other provisions, on which the committee failed to agree unanimously, is not expected, but the disagreeing committeemen said they would carry the fight into the house.

The committee bill differs radically from the senate committee proposals. No provision is made for creation of a transportation board, which under the senate measure would advise the interstate commerce commission of the railroad matters. The house bill centers about increasing authority of the interstate commerce commission over the rail carriers. Proposals for giving the commission control of water carriers and telegraph and telephone companies were rejected.

Agree on Arbitration Boards.

Voluntary arbitration by means of boards similar to those created during the war was agreed on by the committee as the basis of the labor section.

The only penalties provided are assessment of damages against a railroad for a lockout of employés in violation of a contract, or against a union authorizing a strike that would violate a contract. Under the provisions the carrier would be liable to double the damages suffered by an employé from loss of employment, and the union would be liable for the full damages suffered by a carrier because of breach of an employment contract.

Two Boards for Disputes.

The bill would set up two boards for adjusting disputes, with headquarters in Chicago.

The railway labor adjustment board would be composed of twenty union appointees and twenty representatives of the railway executives, and function through a "conference committee."

Failure by the adjustment board to agree would refer the dispute automatically to the railway board of labor appeals, composed of nine members, appointed by the president, with equal representation being given employés, employers, and the public.

For Roads' Capitalization.

To provide capital for the carriers following return of the lines to private control, the bill directs that the government continue payment of the standard return or rental for six months, extending payments to short line railroads that have not been under government operation.

Government loans within one year after the return also are authorized on approval by the interstate commerce commission of security tendered, at 6 per cent interest, and to mature in five years. Debts incurred during government control would be refunded during a period of ten years, meanwhile bearing interest at 6 per cent.

Government control and operation, under the bill, would cease at the end of the month, in which the measure is approved by the president, unless such approval is given after the 15th day of that month, in which event private operation would begin at the end of the next month.

Consider the Public.

The committee bill contains a new statutory rule of rate making requiring the interstate commerce committee to consider "the itnerest of the public, the shippers, the reasonable cost of maintenance and operation, including the wages of labor, depreciation and taxes, and a fair return upon the value of the property used or held for the service of transportation," in reaching its conclusions.

Rates initiated by the railroad administration during government control would be continued "until otherwise changed by or pursuant to authority of law," and the bill increases the membership of the interstate commerce commission from nine to eleven members, and salaries of members from $10,000 to $12,000 a year.

Among new duties of the commission would be supervision of all new capital issues of carriers, control of all improvements, authority over pooling agreements and terminal facilities, and supervision of the division of joint rates.

Cotton Thread 15c a Spool; Stirs British H. C. L. Foe

Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.
[Copyright: 1919.]

LONDON, Nov. 8.—"We mean to find out why a spool of cotton thread costs seven pence half penny," said McCurdy, chairman of the central profiteering committee, yesterday.

Today it is disclosed that J. and P. Coats, cotton manufacturers of Paisley, made a profit last year of £38,994,000, permitting a dividend of 40 per cent. This profit was made after paying an excess profits duty, which probably amounts to hundreds of thousands of pounds.

I. and R. Win in Only Seven of Downstate Districts

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 8.—The official vote from 76 of the 101 counties outside of Cook, and representing all or part of each of the thirty-two senatorial districts outside of Chicago, indicate that the I. and R. (initiative and referendum) carried in only seven districts. These were the Fourteenth, Eighteenth, Twentieth, Thirty-third, Thirty-ninth, Forty-first, and Forty-second.

MIGHT BE AN HEIRESS IF—

It Were Not for the Objections of Her Father and Mother, Who Are Separated, to Her Becoming Ward of Wealthy Easterner.

Lois Finkbinder

PARENTS, POOR, KEEP GIRL FROM RICH MAN'S HOME

Can't Support Her, but Oppose Her Adoption by N. Y. Banker.

BY LEOLA ALLARD.

Her fairy godmother is trying to put 5 year old Lois Finkbinder into the home of a New York banker worth a million or so. She has tried her best, and so has the banker. This fairy godmother, whom the child looks upon as her grandmother, adores her, but is willing to sacrifice her feelings for the sake of the wonderful future there would be in that home. But Lois has a father and mother, who do not live with her, nor with each other, and, without saying just why, they object to the adoption.

The remarkable person in the story of Lois is Mrs. F. F. Fellows, now very old. She has plenty of money, and when Lois' mother was 12 years old Mrs. Fellows adopted her. She took her out of the industrial school and gave her an education and a home and treated her as her own daughter. Nor was she the first child that Mrs. Fellows had adopted. The first girl she took married well, has two children, and is living on the south side. Then there were others, all now married and happy.

Parents Couldn't Get Along.

It was about a year ago that Mrs. Fellows, Lois and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Finkbinder came to the Court of Domestic Relations. In chambers the young people told their troubles. They couldn't get along, but they both loved Mrs. Fellows, the foster mother, as dearly as if she were their own mother. While the baby sat on her "grandma's" lap and listened the parents came to the decision that they wouldn't live together and that Lois could go with her grandma to her summer home at Paw Paw Lake. Judge Fry told Lois she could go home with him; that he had two children, and they would love her.

"Well, if you got two, you got enough," she told him, and flung her arms tighter around her grandmother's neck.

Yesterday Mrs. Fellows brought Lois to court and asked Judge Fry to grant her permission to take the child and care for her a while longer.

Thinks It Selfish of Mother.

"I hoped until recently that Wanda and her husband would be reconciled," she told him. "But now that I see the changes in both parents I am sure I don't want it. There is a wealthy banker in New York City who comes to Paw Paw lake. He and his wife are so anxious to adopt Lois, and would give her everything that love and money could furnish.

"I've talked to Wanda and begged her, as long as she can't care for the child, and Albert can't, to let them have her. She says no. I think it's very selfish, because I am getting old and I won't always be here to devote my life to her. God knows I will as long as I live, but that won't be always. I sat and looked at Wanda the other evening, her eyebrows pulled out to a dainty line, her cheeks pinked, and her pretty smile always in evidence, and I wished more and more that she would consent to this adoption. It's selfish not to do so."

Maybe Godmother Will Win.

Mrs. Fellows put her kerchief to her eyes and Lois tried to pull her hand down.

"My great, big, beautiful Gamma," she said, caressing her.

"Not beautiful," Gamma protested. "You're beautiful to me," and Lois clung to her and asked, "Tan't I speak you a piece, then you'll feel better?" and she recited about how much she rather be a gray rat, or anything, than "a man with a gun who shoots a poor bird just for fun."

Mrs. Fellows and the child left for Paw Paw last night. Perhaps that fairy godmother will win yet.

JAPS' OBJECTION HALTS CHICAGO LOAN TO CHINA

Washington, D. C., Nov. 8.—Efforts to extend a loan to China to tide over what is regarded as a desperate situation threatening the existence of the government have come to a standstill owing to disagreement over the security offered.

The Chicago bankers' group which was negotiating a loan of $30,000,000 to the northern government of China, it was learned, demanded that the loan be a lien on the salt tax in addition to other sources of revenue.

Objection immediately was made by the Japanese financial interests composing the group of bankers which would be included in the international consortium on the ground that this consortium had first call on the salt tax by previous arrangement with China. Now the chances for the Chinese loan are considered remote.

SIMPLE LIFE AND SIMPLE DRESS ARE URGED FOR YOUNG

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 8.—[Special.]—Advising mothers to begin to dress their children simply while in the kindergarten and to continue after that, Mrs. B. F. Langworthy, head of the committee on girls' work of the war camp community service in Chicago, addressed the Wisconsin branch of the congress of mothers and Parent-Teachers' association here. She declared:

"It is in the kindergarten that the little men and women form ideals. Avoid the use of jewelry; it leads to snobbishness.

"The most disagreeable of all things is the diaphanous waist, or I call it the 'next to nothing blouse.' It's beautiful, of course. If they must be worn high school girls should be compelled to wear underwear that at least covers their shoulders."

AP-ALL RUSSIAN PACT AGREED ON, LONDON REPORT

'udenitch in Need of Aid to Save Petrograd from Starving.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—A telegram to euter's Limited from Archangel expresses approval at the reported conclusion of an agreement with Japan. he newspaper Otetchestvo (Fatherland) says:

"It is no longer a question of the recognition or nonrecognition of Admiral Kolchak but of an alliance of the all-Russian government with a powerful neighbor. It is sufficient to describe it even in this way to understand its meaning and its importance."

No Information in London.

No direct information, however, has been received here regarding this reported special agreement and both the rench foreign office and the Japanese mbassy declared they knew nothing f any such alliance or agreement.

A bolshevik wireless communication rom Moscow announces the occupation of Tchernigov.

Tchernigov is on Gen. Denikine's ront. It is situated on the River esna, eighty miles north-northeast of iev, and about 225 miles southwest of Orel.

A wireless message from Denikine states that the chief of staff of the soviet army near Britinsk organized an uprising of workmen, occupied Britinsk, and overthrew the soviet authorities. Thus the Red army lies between Denikine's troops and the insurgent workmen.

YUDENITCH NEEDS HELP

BY ARTHUR E. MANN.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

NARVA, via Reval, Nov. 8.—The people of Petrograd will starve, freeze, and die of typhus under the bolsheviks this winter, as they did last year, unless Gen. Yudenitch's Northwestern Russian army is able to enter the city, but without considerable outside aid his forces probably will have to dig in and hold about the same line they now have until next spring.

With no chance of allied intervention or of help from the Baltic states of Esthonia, Letvia, and Lithuania, Yudenitch's last hope is Finland. A prompt Finnish offensive toward Petrograd might yet save the situation, but reports from Finland as to the possibility of such a move are conflicting. Some say it is only a question of Finland getting its price for intervention.

The bolshevik defense of Petrograd has been energetic and desperate. Soviet troops have been identified from the Kolchak, Denikine, and Baltic fronts. Trotsky, bolshevik minister of war, who has been directing operations, told one organization of Red cadets that the British tanks were only made of wood. They resisted the tank attack on that presumption and officers tell me that the slaughter was terrible.

LETTS CONTINUE DRIVE.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 8.—The Lettish press bureau announces that on the fourth day of their new offensive the Letts are gradually enveloping the forces of Col. Bermond, and bombarding his lines of retreat with the assistance of the allied fleet.

German counter attacks have been beaten off, but obstinate fighting continues. Russian detachments, with their officers, are deserting to the Letts.

Czecho-Slovaks Adopt Treaties, Denmark Hears

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 8.—A semi-official message from Prague announces that the Czecho-Slovak national assembly yesterday adopted both the Versailles and St. Germain treaties.

HOPE FOR RUSSIAN PEACE IS REVIVED BY LLOYD GEORGE

Can't See Red Victory; Will Not Mix in Civil War.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—[By the Associated Press.]—Premier Lloyd George, speaking at the lord mayor's banquet tonight and referring to the supreme council's effort at Russian peace early this year, said:

"I hope the time is not distant when the powers will be able to renew that attempt with better prospects of success."

"The outlook in Russia is unpleasant," he continued. "A few weeks ago there was a promising prospect of an early issue, but today indications point to a more prolonged and sanguinary struggle. I do not believe the bolshevik armies are going to conquer the whole of Russia, but I dread an interminable series of swaying campaigns, devastating the country and the prosperity of the world.

Russian Proved Helpless.

"The allies gave an opportunity to the Russian people to decide their form of government, but unfortunately no section was ready. We have given real proof of our sympathy to the men of Russia who helped the allied cause by sending one hundred millions sterling worth of material, and support of every form."

The premier said he did not regret the cost, but asserted that England could not continue intervention in a dangerous civil war.

Adriatic a Hard Question.

The premier, taking up the most difficult questions left for settlement—the Adriatic, Turkey and Russia—said:

"The Adriatic question has gathered about it a deep passion, but I am confident a settlement will be found compatible with the interests and honor of our gallant allies. On the other hand, I am certain that justice will be done the nations emancipated from the Austrian yoke."

The premier declared that there was complete agreement among the allies that Turkish domination of the Greeks, Arabs and Armenians should end and that the Black sea should be free to all nations.

OPEN INQUIRY ON U. S. SOLDIER ROW WITH MEXICANS

El Paso, Tex., Nov. 8.—[Special.]—Military intelligence officers have begun an investigation into the alleged shooting of two Mexicans by three American soldiers on the Mexican side, near Juarez, Wednesday night.

The attack followed a refusal by the Mexicans to provide the Americans with whisky and money, according to report.

The wounded Mexicans will recover. They asserted the three men woke them and fired through the door of the house after their request for liquor had been refused.

Child Thought They Had Their Money to Burn

Sioux City, Ia., Nov. 8.—[Special.]—Nikolai Pelelo sold his little home late yesterday and received $1,950 in bills. This morning he gave the money to his wife. She laid it on a table and stepped into another room. Her 5 year old child placed the roll in the ktichen stove. The roll was rescued, badly charred.

WHOLESALE AUTO THIEF SUSPECTS, FREED, IN AGAIN

Rearrested on New Charges; Grilled in Fur Robberies.

Five men said to have been engaged in a wholesale, interstate traffic in stolen automobiles and suspected of complicity in a long list of fur store holdups, would have trickled through the fingers of the law yesterday but for the persistence of the police. Charges against them were dismissed by Judge Howard Hayes in the South Clark street court when several business men of Benton Harbor, Mich., to whom they sold stolen cars, failed to appear against them.

As soon as they had been released, Patrick Hamilton, sergeant in charge of the automobile squad at the detective bureau, obtained new warrants and rearrested them.

Arrested at "the Wigwam."

The men, ranging in age from 19 to 25, were arrested Oct. 27 by Detectives Sheehy, Doyle, Hayes, Schumacher, and Mullen in a raid on "Mike de Pike" Heitler's resort, known as the Wigwam, at West One Hundred and Fifteenth and South Wood streets. They are:

Michael J. Stack, 6915 Emerald avenue; alleged leader.

Daniel Corcoran, 5700 Justine street.

Michael O'Brien, 3740 Lowe avenue.

Patrick Flaherty, 3808 Lowe avenue.

Arthur Werner, alias "Rogers," Iron Mountain, Mich.

All of the men are declared to have police records. Warner was taken yesterday to the Lakeside hospital to be viewed by Jacob Kane, who was shot during a holdup of his fur store at 539 East Forty-third street last Tuesday night.

"I'm pretty positive that's the man who shot me," said Kane.

Werner denies the shooting.

When first arrested the men were charged with having stolen automobiles from A. F. Rader of Elmhurst in the loop Oct. 4; from John Finklestein, 1301 Union street, Oct. 1, and from Ernest Block, 604 East Fifty-first street, Oct. 23. These three cars were shortly afterward disposed of in Benton Harbor.

New Thefts Charged.

The chief of police at Benton Harbor had assured the detectives by long distance phone that the purchasers of the cars would appear in court, but they failed to do so. There was nothing to do then but dismiss the cases. Warrants were immediately obtained by Sergt. Hamilton charging thefts of autos from the following on the dates named:

E. C. Winter, 5742 South Park avenue; Oct. 20.

H. E. Cohen, 3913 Wentworth avenue; Oct. 11.

Daniel Sandal, 1008 North Oakley avenue; Oct. 3.

Floyd D. Evans, 305 Fullerton parkway; Aug. 9.

Herman Strauss, 5741 South Michigan avenue; Oct. 23.

R. E. Compton, 7626 Union avenue; May 23.

L. M. Fletcher, 5512 Ingleside avenue; Aug. 10.

Most of these cars also were soon disposed of in Benton Harbor.

Suspected as Fur Robbers.

Proprietors and employés of the following fur stores will be asked to visit the detective bureau today to view the prisoners:

S. M. Wier, 1840 North Wells street; sixteen employés lined up by three armed men on Oct. 21; $7,000 worth of furs taken.

J. S. Brown, 909 East Forty-seventh street; proprietor, son, and two women held up on Oct. 22; $4,500 worth of furs taken.

M. Malter, 4608 Kenmore avenue.

R. May Fur company, 502 Masonic temple.

M. Salinski, 6843 North Rockwell street.

J. Jackson, 810 Montrose boulevard.

Mrs. G. Smith, 1528 East Sixty-fifth street.

Altogether about $50,000 worth of furs were stolen from these places.

"By tomorrow night," said Sergt. John W. Norton of the homicide squad, "we expect to have the Kane case, a number of burglaries, and, possibly, a murder cleared up."

4,000 SOLDIERS WANTED TO TRAIN FUTURE LEADERS

Washington, D. C., Nov. 8.—[Special.]—Ernest E. Cole, assistant superintendent of schools of Chicago, is here urging members of congress to amend the national defense act to provide for the detailing of 1,000 officers and 3,000 noncommissioned officers to the more than 300 units of the R. O. T. C. in the United States.

"The R. O. T. C. organization," he said today, "has rendered valuable service. If universal military training fails in congress it offers the best substitute therefor.

"If universal military training wins the R. O. T. C. units will be called upon to furnish officers for carrying forward that work. Congress should not hesitate to put that organization on an efficient basis."

Mr. Cole called attention to the peak of the war activity, when there were 1,000 officers and 3,000 "noncoms" assigned to schools and colleges and their military possibilities developed.

LOWDEN FORCES PREPARE ACTIVE FIGHT IN WEEK

Chicago Center of World in Politics of the Nation.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 8.—[Special.]— Chicago becomes, during the coming week, the hub of Republican national politics. Developments of utmost interest in the pre-convention presidential campaign are expected.

National Chairman Will H. Hays departed tonight for Chicago, following the Republican love feast that was managed by the Republican editors of Illinois, and at which the candidacy of Gov. Frank O. Lowden for president became an active, going concern and at which strong approval was given to the suggestion that Gov. Calvin Coolidge of Massachusetts should be considered as the candidate for vice-president.

Call in Committeemen.

Republican national committeemen from all over the middle west have been summoned to Chicago by National Chairman Hays for a general conference as to party conditions and prospects, following the local and state elections of last week. This session will start Monday morning and will continue through the day and evening. While not called formally as a meeting of the national committee, it is expected that the proceedings will be of great significance.

Reports are that definite steps are to be taken during the week with respect to the candidacy of Gen. Leonard Wood. National Committeeman John T. King of Connecticut, manager of the Wood campaign, soon will arrive from a consultation with his lieutenants through the states adjacent to Chicago.

Hays Boomer of Harmony.

Chairman Hays shot a wonderful quantity of pep and enthusiasm into the Illinois Republicans while he was here. More than 800 party men listened to him as he outlined the fundamentals upon which the 1920 campaign should be fought. All vestiges of factionalism in state affairs were submerged during an evening of party harmony.

Mr. Hays steered clear of the Lowden boom, which became a 100 per cent proposition so far as the assembled Republicans were concerned. He made it very clear that his purpose in coming to Springfield was to put the party at high speed in preparation for the campaign that now begins.

Incidental to the round up of national committeemen at Chicago, it is understood that the fight to have Chicago chosen as the national convention city will get into swing. Fred Upham, who is handling Chicago's interests, is on the job, and something definite may be expected in advance of the formal session of the national committee to choose the location for the convention that will be held in Washington next month.

BUREAU FINDS JOBS FOR 34,970 EX-WARRIORS

Chicago's returning soldiers, sailors, and marines had comparatively little trouble in obtaining jobs when they came back, according to Maj. John S. Bonner, director of the bureau to aid them at 120 West Adams street. Out of 37,294 applications for jobs, 34,970 of the warriors were placed in positions paying from $18 a week to $10,000 a year to one expert engineer during the last seven months, according to figures made public yesterday by Maj. Bonner.

He said that employers responded with far more offers of employment than could be filled and that 532 cases are now pending of men referred to jobs on which no reports have been made so far. Cases of soldiers, sailors, and marines who were dissatisfied with proffered positions or else left the city number 1,792. Aid in other forms to the men number 8,425 cases, and the figures show approximately 93 per cent of the cases were taken care of.

"These figures are for the period of from March 31, when the bureau got started, to Nov. 1," said Maj. Bonner. "We estimate that we have saved the men over $2,000,000 in fees that employment agents would charge for services in obtaining jobs, and over $100,000 worth of civilian clothing was bought by the Salvation Army."

Blast Causes Damage of $200; Seeks the 'Bomb'

An explosion, which shattered windows and did damage amounting to $200 yesterday afternoon in an apartment building at 4843 South Marshfield avenue, brought Capt. Michael Zimmer and a squad of policemen from the New City station to the scene in a hurry. tI was reported a bomb had been exploded in the building.

The police were told by Mrs. James Maher, who occupies the front apartment on the first floor, that she had attempted to light a gas heater in the kitchen when it exploded. She was knocked to the floor by the force of the explosion, she said, but was not injured.

Xmas Trees 50c to $1.50, Yuletide 'King' Announces

Christmas trees are to be cheaper. Louis O. Macloon of Hubbard Woods, who styles himself "the Christmas tree king," has contracted for 100,000 evergreens, which will be delivered in the city by Dec. 1. They will be sold from vacant lots, he said yesterday, at prices ranging from 50 cents to $1.50. Last year grocers and others sold trees for as high as $5 and $10.

Oppose Plan to Make Doctors State Employes

EISENBACK, Germany., Oct. 16.—German physicians in their annual convention here have unanimously voted against the government's proposal that all physicians should be made state employes. The physicians opposed the idea because they say it is necessary for them to maintain confidential relations with their patients.

G. O. P. MEMBERS OF CONGRESS FOR GEN. WOOD

Both Houses Favor His Nomination in 1920, Poll Shows.

nia, Oregon, and Washington voted six for Wood, five for Johnson, one for Poindexter, and one was noncommittal. New Mexico, Idaho, Wyoming, Montana, and Colorado gave four for Wood, three for Lowden, and one for Pershing. Kansas, Nebraska, and North and South Dakota gave eight votes for Wood, four for Harding, four for Lowden, and three were noncommittal.

In the home state of every other candidate Wood, so far as the preference of the members of the house is concerned, is the second choice.

Some Modest Senators.

On the senate side of the capitol the Wood sentiment is no less pronounced. Because Senators Borah, Kellogg, Spencer, Edge, Poindexter, Sutherland, and Lenroot, as well as Senators Johnson, Harding, and Watson, are understood to be somewhat receptive and have been prominently mentioned in their own states at least, they are placed in the poll as modestly admitting that one among their number might make an excellent chief executive of the United States.

To designate closely the preferences of states or small groups of states would reveal the identity of the senators voting in the poll. Hence the Republican senators are divided into classifications, those east and those west of the Mississippi river.

Giving a Chance to Guess.

Of the twenty-nine senators east of the Mississippi, twelve voted for Wood, two for Lowden, three for Watson, four for Harding, one for Johnson, one for Sutherland, one for Edge, one for Lenroot, one for Hughes, and three were noncommittal. Of the twenty Republican senators west of the Mississippi, eight voted for Wood, one for Lowden, one for Harding, three for Johnson, one for Borah, one for Kellogg, one for Spencer, one for Pershing, and two for Poindexter. One was noncommittal.

HOME BURNED; 2 CHILDREN DEAD

Port Arthur, Ont., Nov. 8.—Two girls, 6 and 7, daughters of Otto Strey, a farmer, were burned to death when fire destroyed their home at Dorion, Ont., this morning.

Mrs. Strey threw out of a window her 1½ year old son and then jumped to safety.

With his feet bleeding from cuts and bruises and his body badly burned, Strey walked more than a mile through the snow to a neighbor's with nothing on but his night clothing, to get help.

JEREMIAH O'LEARY TO SPEAK.

Jeremiah A. O'Leary of New York will speak this evening at a raly of the Friends of Irish Freedom in Car Men's hall, Ashland avenue and Van Buren street. A concert will precede the speaking and the Seventh regiment band will play.

TOUR OF MEXICO PLEASES CARUSO

New York, Nov. 8.—[Special.]—Enrico Caruso returned to New York tonight from Mexico City full of enthusiasm over his tour and over the gold currency which, he said, was in circulation in that country in $2.50, $5, and $10 pieces.

"Before I went to Mexico," he said, "I heard that the people and the country were 'bad' and that I might not get my money. I have been most agreeably surprised. Truthfully, I am enchanted with Mexico, and hope to go there again.

"In twenty-five years on the stage I have never been treated with such exceeding kindness and hospitality. With previous contracts I have always had some expenses to pay out of my own pocket. But on this trip I did not have to pay one cent from New York back to New York."

BOY GETS ROBBERY TALE REVERSED.

Frank Jornowski, 9 years old, 2437 North California avenue, who told the police he had been robbed of $20, was found to have fibbed. His mother said he had robbed her of $18. He had $3.26 left. He was turned over to the juvenile authorities.

SEARCH BRINGS ARREST ON LOVE SWINDLE CHARGE

For weeks Patrolman Paul Winton of the Lincoln park police has been looking for a well dressed elderly man, who was said to be noted for his philandering. He was wanted on a charge of swindling Mrs. Lena Ehrmann, 3029 North Clark street, a widow and mother of two children, out of $200 after promising to marry her.

Friday night the policeman's vigilance was rewarded. He arrested the man in the park. He took his prisoner past the refreshment stand of Mrs. Ehrmann in the park, where she had first met the man as she served him with an ice cream cone two months ago. Mrs. Ehrmann identified him.

At the station the man gave his name as Carl Beck. He said he was 53 years old, but gave no address.

BOY A HUNTING VICTIM.

50 WARD MAP JOB MAKES CERMAK CITY HALL CZAR

Posts of 20 Aldermen or More Hang on New Plans.

Mayor Thompson is in danger of losing his laurels as the most powerful man in the city hall. That attribute appears to have passed to Ald. Anton J. Cermak, who, as chairman of the council judiciary committee, is redistricting the city into fifty wards, as approved by the voters last Tuesday.

The redistricting scheme approved by the council will make or break at least twenty and probably many more of the seventy aldermen now in the council, and this fact has caused Ald. Cermak to be at once the most powerful, the most popular, and withal the most disliked alderman in the body.

Arguments Are Heated.

Loud arguments as to the advisability of this or that ward line float out through the judiciary committee transom at all hours of the day, and aldermen enter with honeyed words and depart with "cusses" every few minutes.

As a result of a score of conferences held with north side aldermen, Ald. Cermak announced yesterday that he will recommend that the territory north of Cornelia and Roscoe streets and east of the river be made into three wards.

Considerable Division.

This means that the Twenty-fifth and Twenty-sixth wards will be split four ways, as they now cover the territory mentioned by Ald. Cermak, but extend south of the Cornelia-Roscoe street line as well.

Under Ald. Cermak's plan the territory now occupied by the Twenty-first, Twenty-second, Twenty-third, and Twenty-fourth wards will become five wards if the council approves his recommendations.

Wins by Less Than 856.

The vote counting in the canvass of the results of Tuesday's election was completed shortly after noon yesterday in the election boards' office, and the task of summing up the totals of the official figures was begun. This is not expected to be completed before Tuesday, when the official proclamation of the results of the election will be issued.

The fifty ward proposition, which won out by the narrow margin of 856 votes, according to the police returns, will be shown in the official figures to have won by slightly less than that plurality, says Shelby M. Singleton, secretary of the Citizens' association. Forty votes were lost by the proposition in the Twenty-first ward in the counting yesterday, twenty were lost in the Nineteenth ward, and minor gains and losses were made in other wards.

Watchers for Judge John M. O'Connor placed his plurality at 7,533. The police returns gave him 7,932.

Judge O'Connor, according to his watchers, gained 275 votes in the recount. Earlier indications were that he had lost to some slight extent. The gain of 275, if confirmed by the official figures, will place Judge O'Connor's plurality well over the 8,000 mark.

Heber J. Grant Suggests Mormonism to Calm World

Mormonism was held up as the real agent of spiritual reconstruction and the most efficient remedy for present world-wide unrest yesterday by Herbert J. Grant, president of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, sixth head of the Mormon church, who stopped off in Chicago for a few hours between trains. President Grant had planned to speak at the North States mission, 2555 North Sawyer avenue, but was compelled to hurry west to sail for Hawaii, where he will dedicate a new $100,000 Mormon temple.

SEEKS TO OUST MRS. SHONTS AS ADMINISTRATRIX

Lawyer Who Filed Will Gets Court Order for Hearing Tuesday.

New York, Nov. 8.—[Special.]—Upon the application and affidavit of De Lancey Nicoll, personal attorney of Theodore P. Shonts, late president of the Interborough, Surrogate Fowler signed an order requiring the widow, Mrs. Milla D. Shonts, to show cause at 10:30 o'clock next Tuesday morning why she should not be removed as temporary administratrix of her husband's $500,000 estate.

The order recited that the will of Mr. Shonts executed July 30 last had been filed since Mrs. Shonts obtained, last Thursday afternoon, an appointment as temporary administratrix of the estate on the allegation that she did not know of the existence of a will.

Her Lawyer Calls Will "Absurd."

After the copy of Surrogate Fowler's office was served today upon George W. Files of 115 Broadway, attorney for Mrs. Shonts, Mr. Files said:

"Mrs. Shonts spoke advisedly when she said that she had been unable to find any will. The document which Mr. Nicoll has filed as a will does not meet our idea of a will. It will be contested. There was never a more absurd clause inserted in the will than that which threatened to cut Mrs. Shonts off from any inheritance in case she contested it.

"She got practically nothing under the will, so has nothing to lose by a contest. The $100,000 which he acknowledges he owes her is her own money. The estate can't keep that from her anyhow.

"The reference in the will to his having provided for her in the agreement of June, 1917, is a joke. That agreement was to cease upon his death."

Mrs. Thomas in Passive Role.

At the office of Mr. Nicoll it was said that the acknowledgment of the $100,000 indebtedness to Mrs. Shonts was merely Mr. Shonts' way of making certain that his widow got that amount no matter what might be the outcome of any contest which the verbiage of the will shows he anticipated.

Mrs. Thomas up to this time has played a passive rôle. Her attorney, Clarence J. Shearn, said that she would not make any statement except in court. She lives with her youthful son on the tenth floor of the apartment house at 930 Park avenue, on the sixth floor of which Mr. Shonts had his apartment.

LAKE SHE LOVED TAKES WOMAN IN DEATH MYSTERY

A verdict of death from asphyxiation by drowning in some unknown manner was returned by a coroner's jury yesterday in the case of Mrs. Olga Kerr, 5050 Addison street, whose body was found on the lake shore at Goethe street Friday night.

John Kerr testified he knew of no reason why his wife should seek to end her life, and said there had been no family trouble.

"Mrs. Kerr always was happy and had everything she wanted," he said, breaking down. "She loved the lake and often walked along the shore with William, our little son. Yesterday she told William to stay at home. We waited for her until 11 o'clock; then I went to the police station to make inquiries."

FIVE CENT FARE HOPE FADES, BUT SIX IS POSSIBLE

Board Waits Data and May Delay Until Nov. 15.

Busby there were several factors, however, which made the showing inconclusive. Car schedules, he said, had not been rearranged to give the men an eight hour day, which would have added $300,000 to the cost, leaving the companies only $97,000 surplus. In August, 1918, there were, moreover, no divisible receipts, because the companies failed to earn 5 per cent on the city's purchase price. After these deductions had been made for August, 1919, the gain of $397,000 shrunk to $217,500, and the new time schedules remained to be taken into account.

For September the increase in earnings over the same month of 1918 was $1,259,276, while operating costs mounted to $767,042. Again the claim was presented in the companies' behalf that the time schedules—which must all be in force by Jan. 1, 1920—had not been completely installed, and September, 1918, was cited also as a subnormal traffic month, due to curtailment of traffic by the influenza epidemic. In consequence revenues fell while operating costs remained virtually stationary.

Since that fact was cited by the commissioners in denying that the low receipts for September, 1918, entitled the companies to an increased fare when they applied for it before the strike, they were constrained, it is said, to wait for the statement of earnings for October of the present year.

In Corporation Counsel Ettelson's office yesterday preparations were made for an injunction suit against the lines to prevent them from collecting more than 5 cents a passenger. The suit will be filed in the Circuit court here, and will seek also an order of court impounding the money collected under the 7 cent schedule until its validity is finally decided.

MICHAEL J.'S ADVICE.

[illegible]

"The Greatest of All."

WESTERN AVENUE: "This will be the greatest thing of them all, though the people don't yet realise it. It will give Chicago one of the great streets of the world—a street 100 feet wide for twenty-five miles. It can be rebuilt to the most modern models because 80 per cent of the frontage is vacant. Of the 1,600 odd houses on it, 754 ought not to be on any street. They are only shacks. The importance of Western avenue to the future of Chicago is that in ten years it will be the center of our population. Today it is only three-fourths of a mile from the center.

"In widening it we shall not follow the Roosevelt road precedent of doing the widening on only one side. The Chicago plan commission made a mistake there which we shall avoid on Western by doing the widening 17 feet to the side, thus insuring reconstruction of the houses and store fronts we cut into on each side of the thoroughfare. All the public hearings for this improvement are finished, the surveying done, the commissioners of values appointed, and the ordinance ready for Monday's session of the council."

ST. MIHIEL HERO IN WHEEL CHAIR AIDS RED CROSS

Membership Drive Ends on Armistice Day; 100,000 Enroll.

Armistice day will end the Red Cross roll call campaign for 500,000 members in 1920. With 100,000 members obtained during the first week of the campaign, the managers voted yesterday to discontinue all acitvities Nov. 11 except the industrial canvass of the Association of Commerce.

"Chicagoans are proving their loyalty by their willingness to renew memberships voluntarily," said Marquis Eaton. "The fact that 100,000 men and women have joined thus far should spur our workers to give every citizen ample opportunity to take out a membership during the remaining days of the drive."

The canvass of industries will continue until Saturday night.

Workers throughout the city reported much enthusiasm. The bluejacket band and Swift & Co.'s band paraded the loop and hundreds of membership dollars were garnered.

St. Mihiel Hero Aids.

A legless soldier in a wheel chair one of the heroes of the great St. Mihiel battle, accompanied by a Red Cross nurse who was at the front during the Argonne offensive, added materially to the membership campaign. The soldier was Sergt. E. G. Tripp of Oak Park and the nurse was Miss Catherine Babcock. Tripp, before he enlisted to fight for his country, was in vaudeville. While overseas he wrote a number of songs, including "Trench Blues." Sergt. Tripp and Miss Babcock were stationed at Eighteenth street and Michigan avenue.

SECOND DIVISION HEROES TO MEET HERE TOMORROW

There's no hope, fellow citizens—Chicago is doomed. Tomorrow, the city will be invaded by those famous veterans of the great war, the 2nd Division men, in their first annual reunion.

MAJ. GEN. J. A. LEJEUNE.

The capture of Chicago will be led by Maj. Gen. John A. Lejeune, president of the 2d Division association. He and his men engaged in five pitched battles during the world war and are reported to have captured more prisoners and guns than any other division in the A. E. F.

The fighting career of the 2d began on June 1, when it halted the German drive near Veuilly and Belleau Woods. Between June 6 and July 8 it captured four towns, overcoming the resistance of ten German divisions in succession and suffering casualties of nearly 10,000. Soissons, St. Mihiel and Beaumont are a few other places where the boys tarried.

The reunion will be held at the Hotel La Salle. The division's wounded in Chicago hospitals will be quartered there during the reunion.

RED CROSS PLANS FOR PEACE TIMES GIVEN IN BRIEF

Ten Millions Needed to Finish Up in Europe, Five for Emergency.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 8.—[Special.]—With $14,000,000 on hand and an estimated need for $10,000,000 to finish up its work in Europe, and for $5,000,000 as an emergency fund, the Red Cross is depending on the success of its present drive for $15,000,000, and memberships, to carry out its peace program for 1920.

In this program is included all the Red Cross work remaining to be done for American soldiers and sailors, about 25,000 of whom are now in hospitals in this country, and for their families; and the carefully worked out plans for preventive as well as relief work in dealing with the public health problem in the United States.

Depends on Membership Drive.

As much depends on the success of the membership drive as upon the response to the call for $15,000,000. If the present membership can be increased or even maintained, it will add approximately $20,000,000 to the fund, for a year ago the American Red Cross had a total membership of 20,648,103; but on Nov. 1, 1917, the membership was 5,000,000, and on May 1, 1917, just six months earlier, it was only 486,194.

The Red Cross, therefore, will make no predictions as to 1920. With its record of past service, and its hopes for the future, it has made its appeal for money and memberships. Not until the returns are in will it be able to make detailed estimates for the coming year, for not until then will it know what it will have to work with.

Manager Munroe's Statement.

"The report of the controller of the Red Cross as of Oct. 1 shows an unappropriated balance of approximately $14,000,000," Frederick C. Munroe, general manager of the American Red Cross, said today.

"In the campaign which is now on the Red Cross is asking for $15,000,000 and as many memberships as it can get. The membership fee is $1, of which 50 cents goes to headquarters for administrative purposes and 50 cents is held by the chapters for local work.

"Of the probable amount that will be on hand Jan. 1, 1920, not less than $10,000,000 must be set aside to round out the work which the American Red Cross undertook in Europe, which it is obligated to complete, and which the American people expect it to complete. The supplies which the Red Cross had in France when the armistice was signed and those which were turned over by the war department to the Red Cross in France must be distributed, and such distribution will call for a considerable sum of money.

Typhus Menace in Europe.

"The conditions of distress in Europe, especially in Poland and the Balkans, have rendered it impossible for the Red Cross to withdraw, although it has been and is the fixed policy to bring to an end the work in Europe as soon as possible.

"Epidemics of typhus and other diseases in central Europe constitute a menace to western Europe, and even the United States, which must be met, and which the American Red Cross is seeking to wipe out largely through the administering of medical and sanitary relief and the distribution of dietetic foods for the children and the sick.

"For the purpose of meeting emergencies arising from disasters at home or abroad it is proposed to establish a fund of about $5,000,000. Obviously the exact calls upon this fund cannot be foretold. In order to render relief effective in case of disasters, however, there must be instantly available considerable sums of money at all times.

"The balance of the fund will be devoted, in a general way, to two purposes.

"First, there is the work to be done for the American soldiers and sailors and their families. There are still about 25,000 service men in American hospitals who must be looked after. The families of these soldiers and sailors must be helped in many ways until their normal conditions are restored.

"Second, there is to be carried out the peace time program of the Red Cross, with special reference to public health. The establishment of health centers, the carrying out of a comprehensive public health nursing program, and similar activities come under this general classification. In connection with the expenses for first aid service, work of the junior Red Cross through the schools, and the maintenance of service for the army and navy, there will be considerable demands."

House Bill Would Prohibit Print Paper Exportation

Washington, D. C., Nov. 8.—Exportation of print paper would be prohibited under a bill introduced today by Representative Christopherson, Republican, South Dakota. Penalty for violation of the law would be $10,000 or ten years' imprisonment.

BANDITS ROB, BURN VICTIM IN HOTEL FIRE

Washburn, Ill., Nov. 8.—[Special.]—Fire which destroyed a landmark prominent in the early history of Illinois at Varna yesterday is believed by the police there to have been set by men who robbed, then murdered Frank Thompson, a hermit, reputed to be wealthy.

The landmark, a ten room hotel, was built in 1875. Fifteen years ago it was abandoned, and Thompson made it his home. Nobody knew his past, he talked little, and was known as the sphinx. His bank account never exceeded $300, but townspeople say he had several thousand secreted about the hotel.

Flames were observed in the building at 4 o'clock yesterday morning. By the time the volunteer fire department had arrived the fire was beyond control. Thompson's charred body was found in the room he used as a bedroom. The inquest will be held Monday.

BUILDER OF CAMP GRANT TO HAIL CONGRESS QUIZ

Denies Any Irregularity or Waste; Inquiry Opens Tomorrow.

Congressman John C. McKenzie tomorrow morning will begin an investigation of the cost of materials, any waste of supplies, or any irregularities that may have occurred during the building of Camp Grant at Rockford. He is at the head of a congressional committee which is making such investigations throughout the United States.

The inquiry, it is stated, may be directed against the Bates & Rogers Construction company, which built the entire cantonment at Rockford. W. A. Rogers, president of the company, yesterday announced he would be on hand tomorrow to answer any charges that may be made against his company.

Denies Any Irregularity.

"I know of nothing that can be said against my company," he said. "There was not one irregularity, there was absolutely no waste, the labor question caused us no trouble, and we built one of the most complete and largest cantonments in America in record time.

"When the country entered the war we offered our services, individually and collectively, to the government, but were informed it would be best to hold our organization together. We thought first of overseas service, but later it was decided that we could build homes for our soldiers in this country.

"On June 22, 1917, we were notified by the government that we were to build one of the sixteen cantonment camps in America, and on that day we started work at Rockford.

"The first order was for a camp that would house 32,000 men. Later this was raised to 43,000 men and 12,000 horses. The camp was ready for the 32,000 men on Sept. 1, though army officials said such a thing was impossible. The entire camp was finished—with a capacity of 43,000 men and 12,000 horses—by the middle of November. It cost about $8,500,000.

"There were 1,600 buildings when we finished—a complete city, with its own heating system, its own sanitation, its own water. There were twenty-two miles of paved streets, thirty-eight miles of service pipes and water mains, fifteen central steam heating plans, 100 miles of steam distributing pipe, and 8,000 radiators. More than 50,000,000 feet of lumber was used—and none wasted.

Cites Watch by U. S.

"Altogether I believe we employed more than 20,000 men in the building of the camp. Most of them we housed and fed on the grounds. The government decided what their pay should be and even kept time for them and made out the pay rolls. We paid what the government said we should.

"The government told us what materials we were to buy, where to buy, and how much to pay.

"There was no waste in the building operations—E. S. Whitney, the chief engineer, can tell you that—and the cantonment was constructed at the lowest prices possible.

"We are open to any investigation any one may care to make."

A BOMB ROMANCE

Her Picture in Tribune, Following Federal Building Explosion, Wins Soldier's Love.

MISS WINIFRED AST.
L. K. BAER.

At the time a bamb was set off in the Federal building, wrecking an entrance, the picture of Miss Winifred Ast, who was cut by falling glass, appeared in THE TRIBUNE. As a result of that picture, she will be married tomorrow to Lipman K. Baer of Atlanta, Ga.

When the explosion occurred Mr. Baer, then in the military service, was a patient in an army hospital at Atlanta. One morning a soldier in the next cot received a Chicago visitor who had brought with him a copy of THE TRIBUNE. He left it with Mr. Baer. The picture of Miss Ast attracted the soldier's attention and a romance followed letters and a visit here.

Miss Baer, whose father is a captain in the British army, left last night for Atlanta, where they will reside.

AUTO SLOWS UP, DOCTOR SINKS IN SEAT—AND DIES

For the last few days Dr. Clayton W. Carson, 65 years old, 4361 Greenwood avenue, had complained of feeling ill, but he proceeded about his work as usual. Yesterday morning he left his offices at 766 Oakwood boulevard and drove in his automobile to the loop. While he was returning on Michigan avenue his machine was seen to slow down and draw to the curb, near Fourteenth street. His body suddenly slumped down in the seat and partly disappeared, attracting the attention of E. W. Egan, employed in a garage at 1401 Indiana avenue. The doctor was dead when Egan reached him. The body was taken to St. Luke's hospital. The doctor is survived by his widow. He was well known on the south side.

FACTORIES PERIL OWN LIVES WITH TREES THEY KILL

Foresters Point Grave Need of Growing New Timber.

BY EYE WITNESS.

> Let us put it in hand at once, that the wood may be grown against Alexander's majority.
> ["The Master of Ballantrae."]

Approximately a fifth of the manufactories of Illinois, Indiana, and Ohio depend on wood for their running.

In from ten to twenty years, at the present rate of unregulated cutting, unattended as it is by any systematic replanting, the lumber from the south will be exhausted.

Then the Pacific coast will be good for forty years, but it will be too expensive for the purposes of our factories to ship timber so far. Hence the factories will either succumb or be moved into the Pacific area. In either case we shall lose them

In these three states of Illinois, Indiana, and Ohio there is a great deal of soil that should not be farmed, if it is, because that soil is so poor that it does not pay the farmer a fair return for extraordinarily severe effort.

Some specialists estimate this unprofitable area at one-sixth of the total area of the three states. This estimate probably is excessive.

Economic Waste.

On many of these farms people do manage to eke out an existence, but it is a growing economic waste to have generation after generation continue the struggle.

But trees don't need so much humus as grains and grasses do. Trees are a mineral feeding proposition.

You can grow good trees where you cannot grow good barley.

Not dabbling in prophecy, but considering the foregoing facts, the state and county foresters of Illinois, Indiana, and Ohio have formed, on the initiative of Ransom E. Kennicott, chief forester of the Cook county forest preserve, the Central States Forestry association.

The new organization hopes to hold its first meeting in Chicago next April.

Its object is to formulate a tri-state forestry policy and urge upon the state governments the necessity of extreme measures of forestation and reforestation, and the establishment of a system of restricted cutting that shall be in some proportion to the amount of replanting.

The estimate of some members of the association, notably Mr. Kennicott, is that the three states could profitably put something like a seventh of their area into commercial forestry.

The association bases its campaign on both the natural and the commercial advantages to be derived from a liberal policy of reforestation.

First, the trees are needed to conserve moisture and prevent erosion, which is progressing in late years at an alarming rate.

Second, the three commonwealths cannot retain their wood-using industries if they don't provide the wood for them.

State authority and state aid in reforestation will be asked because private capital is not going to go into a proposition that looks as far forward as forty to sixty years for the richest part of the return. It's got to be the state.

Reasonable Returns Possible.

On the other hand, reasonably prompt returns are not excluded if the sytem of forest management be comprehensive.

If you have absolutely to reforest bare land it will be about forty years before you can get a steady income from it.

But from second growth and coppice areas, if treated scientifically, you can get a revenue in ten years.

The first thing you get out, by a scientific treatment, is eight inch ties. And if you treat a hickory forest right you get your revenue just as soon as you can cut ax handles. Five inch hickory gives four ax handles.

Here is an important point: There has been a kind of superstition among foresters that not more than $10 an acre ought to be paid for forest land for commercial cutting, but that tradition is outdated now by the fact that the cost of most varieties of lumber has tripled in the last ten years.

Only science and authority make prompt commercial cutting possible in reforested areas.

Think, wood workers, what the newspapers are up against in the matter of wood pulp, and ponder your case.

'SCALPER' SHAVES FOOTBALL RATES FOR CLYNE, BUT—

Here is a ltitle secret which, if known earlier, might have saved football fans bent on seeing the Chicago-Michigan game a few dollars on their tickets. It is the one way so far discovered of making the ticket "scalper" cut his prices. A clerk at the federal building was sent out to buy a ticket for District Attorney Clyne. A broker offered a $2.50 ticket for $6.

"But I want the ticket for District Attorney Clyne," said the clerk.

"Well, then," said the broker, "you may have it for $4."

However, the broker may be taken into custody for failing to write his name and the price on the back of the ticket, in accordance with tax regulations.

Mr. Clyne said he expected ticket brokers would clear $5,000 on the game. Deputies watched the operations of ticket brokers both in the loop and at the game.

THE FRANKLIN SEDAN

There is one fine enclosed car whose satisfactory performance does not depend on the addition of accessories, even when touring from three to four hundred miles a day.

The Franklin Sedan doesn't need shock absorbers because it is built to ride comfortably without them.

It does not carry spare tires, unless its tires be run well over 10,000 miles, because it doesn't pound tires out or make its owner tire conscious.

It uses no thermometers because it carries no water to boil in summer.

Non-freezing mixtures are noticeably absent in winter because of no water to freeze.

Franklin Light Weight and Flexible construction, the basic principles of riding comfort, safe, easy driving, tire economy, and low fuel consumption, require no assistance from accessories.

Franklin Direct Air Cooling (no water to boil or freeze), by eliminating the factor of temperature from motoring, the doctoring of fifty pounds of water, and the trouble of 177 unrequired water cooling parts—cuts out annoyance and expense, and permits all year motoring.

That the Franklin Sedan is exceptional in every way is conclusively proved by its nation-wide delivery to its owners of:

20 miles to the gallon of gasoline
12,500 miles to the set of tires
50% slower yearly depreciation

To its unequaled performance it adds these exclusive features of sedan design: Wide Observation Windows giving unobstructed outlook; two Wide Doors extending this view and making access easy; the V-shaped Slanting Windshield, allowing broad driving vision and perfect ventilation.

Before coming to investigate Franklin performance make a note of the things you would like to eliminate from your list of motoring troubles and limitations, and then see if the Franklin car meets your requirements.

OTHER FRANKLIN TYPES

COURT RESTORES DR. CHADSEY TO DIRECT SCHOOLS

Judge Scanlan Enters Order Ousting Mortenson.

Charles E. Chadsey, the $18,000 a year educator from Detroit, yesterday was declared superintendent of Chicago schools by Judge Kickham Scanlan in the Circuit court. Accompanying the ruling was an order ousting Peter A. Mortenson from the position. Dr. Chadsey was ordered reinstated to fill out the unexpired portion of the four year term to which he was elected by the old Loeb board.

The Mortenson forces took prompt measures to safeguard the superintendent's office, pending the hearing of the appeal filed by Special Corporation Counsel Chester A. Cleveland.

Police Guards Installed.

Chief of Detectives James L. Mooney was appealed to for men to guard the school head's office in the Tribune building. Two men stood watch until 5 o'clock, when they were relieved by Detective Sergeants Robert C. Jacob and Ray Cullen. At midnight Detective Sergeants O'Malley and Sullivan appeared as relief.

"Our orders are to allow nobody to enter these offices," Jacob said.

The guard will be maintained, it was said, until the court settles the controversy.

Prepares Appeal.

Mr. Cleveland announced that he will appear before the Appellate court on Monday morning and ask for a writ to stay the operation of the order "until the courts finally decide who is Chicago's superintendent of schools."

Immediately after Judge Scanlan had issued his ouster order Attorney Cleveland prayed for an appeal, which though granted, did not halt the removal order.

Upon receipt of the news that he had been reinstated, Mr. Chadsey, dean of the college of education of the University of Illinois, asserted that he would come to Chicago today.

"The decision means that I am the legal superintendent of schools of Chicago," said Mr. Chadsey. "Until I have conferred with my counsel I can make no announcement of my plans. As to my position at the University of Illinois, it may be taken for granted that I shall take no step until all parties concerned are satisfied."

History of Case.

Dr. Chadsey was chosen to come from Detroit on March 17 lasts by the school board of which Jacob M. Loeb was president. The appointment was opposed by the Thompson administration and finally, following the mayor's reelection and the ousting of the Loeb board, Dr. Chadsey was deposed. He at once took his case to court.

Judge Scanlan, at whose order the so-called "solid six" was ousted because they were holding their office "illegally," ruled that inasmuch as the old Loeb board had been regularly and legally appointed, it had the authority to appoint Dr. Chadsey.

Mayor Plans Fight.

Corporation Counsel Ettelson went into conference with Mayor Thompson shortly after news of Judge Scanlan's decision reached the city hall. When he emerged he announced "everything that can be done lawfully to keep Mr. Chadsey out of the superintendency will be done."

If all legal remedies fail to keep Mr. Chadsey out it is understood that an offer will be made to pay him his salary to date if he will resign.

Failing in this, men close to the board said yesterday that "for the good of the school children" the board would be justified in making the $18,000 job so uncomfortable for Mr. Chadsey that he would prefer to resign.

"I have no personal fight to make in the matter," said Supt. Mortenson when told of the action. "I am willing to go on in the work or to step aside if the interests of the school will be best served by that action. I was elected to the position without my knowledge, and I am willing to be guided by the board."

THE CONSUMMATE COMBINATION
The Vocalion and the Vocalion Record

The Vocalion has endeared itself to music lovers as the phonograph that plays all records with greater meaning. But ordinary records, even at their best, fall short of perfection. Now that limitation has been removed and the Vocalion, a great phonograph has been made greater. Vocalion records covering the whole range of music are available. Vocalion records played on the Vocalion closely approach musical perfection.

When You Think of Music— Think of Re-Creation

LET that word "RE-CREATION" burn into your memory. It means music so faithfully Re-Created that it is impossible to tell which is the artist and which the phonograph when the two are heard together.

Such music The New Edison gives you—and The New Edison alone. Tests before more than two-million people have proved this.

Close your eyes and it is the living artist himself you hear. It is wonderful. It is true Re-Creation of Music.

The NEW EDISON

"The Phonograph With a Soul"

Mr. Edison's word is law at the Edison Laboratories.

So it was that when he expressed the wish some months ago that the beautiful period cabinets of the NEW EDISON costing up to $6,000 be used in moderately priced instruments, it HAD to be done.

And it HAS been done!

Sheraton—Chippendale—Heppelwhite—William & Mary—these period cabinets and others are presented in the beautiful cabinets now offered with The New Edison. You simply MUST see them!

Miss Elsie De Wolfe, America's foremost authority on interior decoration after a thorough examination of these cabinets wrote this unqualified endorsement:

> "The period cabinets which Mr. Edison has adopted are in pleasant contrast to the rather grotesque cases one so frequently sees. From the characteristically diminutive and graceful Heppelwhite to the costly replicas of historical pieces, the superior furniture value of the Edison cabinets can scarcely fail to impress the lover of good furniture."

And they will impress you. They can't fail to. So come in tomorrow. See these beautiful new cabinets. Hear the marvelous music Re-Creations of the New Edison. Both will delight you. No obligation incurred, so come.

MAROONS DEFEAT MICHIGAN, 13 TO 0

ILLINOIS' RALLY LICKS GOPHERS IN 10-6 COMBAT

Fletcher Brothers Heroes in Contest Won in the Final Period.

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 8.—[Special.]—It was a sad homecoming day at the University of Minnesota today. The Fletcher brothers—Robert and Ralph of Morris, Ill.—were the heroes of an Illinois victory this afternoon, 10 to 6.

The Minnesota team went down to defeat in the fourth quarter of what is considered one of the best played games seen on Northrop field in many years.

Arnold Oss, Minnesota's star halfback and the hero of the day, scored the only Gopher touchdown in the third quarter by some sensational open field running. Oss, in this quarter, made one run from his own forty yard line to Illinois' thirty-three yard line. A minute later he broke loose to the twenty-five yard line, and after the other backfield men had carried the ball to the twelve yard line, Oss again got away, shooting off tackle in another specatcular dash for a touchdown.

Fletcher Opens Up Plays.

It was that Minnesota touchdown that brought defeat to the Maroon and Gold. It was only a few minutes later that Bob Fletcher, the little Illinois quarterback, opened up with everything he had. A forty yard pass, Walquist to Carney, started it, and it was first down on the Minnesota thirty-three yard line.

Walquist shot another pass over the line to Bob Fletcher's waiting hands, and he ran to the Minnesota one yard line. The battling Gophers then held for two downs, but Bob Fletcher smashed through center for a touchdown.

The Minnesota men fell exhausted when Ralph Fletcher, who came in the game as a substitute for Sternaman, made a beautiful goal from touchdown.

Drop Kick Clinches Game.

The Gophers were on the defensive from that point on and the Illinois backs tore big holes in the Minnesota line. It wasn't long before the Orange and Blue were on the Minnesota's thirty yard line. Failing to gain through the line, Ralph Fletcher dropped back and made a wonderful place kick from the thirty-four yard line.

Coach Zuppke, not until the last few minutes of play, was forced to uncork any of the tricks. Minnesota outplayed its opponents all through the first half. It was within thirty yards of the goal once in the second quarter and going good when Tomasek fumbled and a Gopher chance went aglimmering.

Arnold Oss was the star and the surprise. He tore around ends so fast he eluded the entire Illinois team time and again. Even Coach Zuppke admitted he was the biggest star of the day and he rightly deserves the honor.

Gophers Lack the Punch.

Once in the second quarter, the Illinois defense stiffened when the Gophers lost the ball on the two yard line. It was a brilliant opportunity for a score, but the Gopher backs lacked the punch to put it over.

More than 25,000 persons saw the game, the biggest crowd that Northrop field ever held. Lineup:

HARVARD COMES FROM BEHIND AND TIES PRINCETON

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 8.—Harvard and Princeton played a 10 to 10 tie game today in what was probably the most thrilling football contest ever staged in Palmer Memorial stadium. All the emotions of joy and sorrow that enter into a big football game were present. The thirty or more thousands in attendance were in almost a constant pitch of excitement.

The Cambridge eleven, on the short end of the score almost all the way, staged a wonderful comeback and, playing desperately in the last minutes of the contest, staved off defeat and tied the count. There was a breathless moment when Church of Harvard carefully surveyed the angle he had to kick and then swiftly but surely sent the pigskin between the goal posts that gave the fighting Crimson team its tenth point.

Pass Nets Tigers' Score.

Immediately after the game started, Princeton adopted the tactics played against it by the West Virginia team last Saturday when the Tigers were carried off their feet by the forward passing of the Mountaineers. Using Trimble and Strubing exclusively in this work, Princeton with a few other variations in carrying the ball, took the pigskin from its own twenty yard line right down the field for a touchdown early in the first period.

Harvard fought desperately to stop the play but the fighting Nassau team never faltered until the ball was planted behind the goal posts by Trimble, who got it from Strubing on a lateral pass.

Harvard in the third period profited by a Princeton fumble and managed to work the ball close enough to the goal line to permit Ralph Horween, who was sent in to make the play, to kick a field goal from Princeton's twenty-eight yard line.

Murrey Makes Drop Kick.

A bad pass and a blocked kick in the final period gave Princeton another opportunity to score, which it accepted, F. L. Murrey going in and booting the ball for a field goal, which raised its total points to ten. Harvard followers lost heart at this disaster, but the team did not.

Harvard finally got the ball close to its opponent's territory and, adopting Princeton's aerial game, varied by a few line plunges, carried the pigskin over the Tiger line and put the Crimson men in a position to tie the score easily with the goal from touchdown.

Capt. Murray tried a field goal for Harvard from the twenty-five yard line early in the first period, but failed. The ball was put in play on the Princeton twenty yard line and the Tigers then began their first march down the field.

Trimble crashed through Harvard's center and another line plunge put the ball on their forty-five yard line. Two forward passes, Trimble to Strubing, put the ball on Harvard's twenty-four yard mark. Then it was repeated, giving the Tigers ten more yards. Amid great cheering a line plunge put the ball forward three more yards.

Here the Tigers set themselves for a forward pass, but instead Strubing shot a lateral pass to Trimble, who

GUS THE BUS—MODEL.

By JACK LAIT.

GUS THE BUS breezed in and Evelyn the Exquisite Checker raised her heavenly eyes—and kept them raised; raised and open in wide astonishment. Gus stood before them, a vision in pea green.

About his bony form was an overcoat of post-latest design. It was punctuated with shiny and numerous buttons, and across its midsection was a belt running to a burnished buckle, dead center. The coat was toppy, snappy and cocky. It fit him as though it had been made for him.

"Well—what a dude you turned out to be," gasped the Exquisite.

"Look me over," chimed Gus. "Am I some sports, or don't you? I'm telling the world what I'm some styleplusser, campus brand, for men and youths. I tell you clothes is what's makes the man, huh?"

"Say—you been readin' them clothin' store ads?"

"Sure. You think I'm want to be a piker all my life? Swellish garments gives the wearer confidentz. Confidentzes makes a guy stuck on his self. Then he walks up by the boss and he sticks out his jest and he asks quick for a raise."

"An'—when he picks himself up—his new benny is all splattered with mud."

"No. Confidentz it breeds suggsess. Not often it's a fine, new coat what's picked out from the mud. Usual it's a ragged old coat what gets run yet raggeder. When in comes a feller and he smells all over from persperity every people he's got to be impressioned. That's what grand clotheses is for; they're a fine investment, I bet you."

"Maybe—if you was a trav'lin' salesman, or somethin'. But what good does expensive duds do you? You can't only wear 'em as far as the door an' into the locker room. You can't work in 'em."

"No. But I can feel diff'rent becus I got 'em. When a party he slips out from a silk lined sleeves that gives him a rustle what it gets in his blood. Silk is silk, nobody could get away from it. A gen'ral he's just so much a gen'ral when he's skin out from his meddles and his spurs to take a bath or something like he is when he's all gedolled up by the desk of action. It's becus he had on them things, and they are staying with him, see?"

"That's fine," said Evelyn. "But don't go puttin' on any silk lined airs aroun' that dinin' room or Shorty might bean you with a bevo bottle. Better confine your superiority to your social functions, an' when you're bussin—bus."

"Pardon me, Missus Effelyn, but maybe you eggscuse me if I say I think you're wrong. It can't hurt nobody he should think pretty good from his self. That's me. When a gent he thinks good from his self the rest of the world they think good from him. What you think from me?"

"I think you're a nut—but I'm for you."

"See? Right away I win. The goods is the goods, Missus Effelyn. The newspapers wouldn't print them clotheses ads if they was liars."

PITT IS VICTOR OVER POWERFUL W. AND J. TEAM, 7-6

Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 8.—University of Pittsburgh won the western Pennsylvania championship today by defeating Washington and Jefferson for the fifth successive year, 7 to 6. It was the hardest fought contest staged here this season and was witnessed by more than 30,000.

Pitt scored early in the second period when, after a forward pass from Hastings to Davies, the former carried the ball over on a line plunge. With only a few minutes to play, Pitt recovered a fumble on its ten yard line and Hastings attempted to punt out. The kick was blocked by Wickerham, who recovered and made a touchdown. Line up:

SHIVERICK BEATS CARENGIE, 20-0; GETS ALL POINTS

Ithaca, N. Y., Nov. 8.—Displaying a reversal of the form that caused three successive defeats, Cornell defeated Carnegie Tech, 20 to 0. Capt. Shiverick played brilliantly, scoring every point. The back field, led by Shiverick, plowed through for a touchdown in the first period.

In the second, Shiverick dropped a goal from the 40 yard line, and in the third period broke through Carnegie's line off tackle and ran forty-five yards for a touchdown. Just before the final whistle, the Cornell captain added three more points by a goal from the thirty yard line.

CENTER COLLEGE BESTS W. VA., 14-6

Charleston, W. Va., Nov. 8.—Center College of Kentucky today won eastern football recognition by defeating West Virginia's heavy eleven, 14 to 6. The Center team, representing a student body of 202, with today's score had amassed a record of 219 points, against 16 for its opponents in five games. West Virginia's lone touchdown came in the first quarter, but the Kentucky line stiffened and was thereafter impregnable. Center scored a touchdown in the third and fourth periods, kicking both goals.

BUCKEYES GIVEN REAL BATTLE BY PURDUE, 20-0

Columbus, O., Nov. 8.—[Special.]—On a slippery field under ideal football atmosphere the Buckeye hopefuls demonstrated their prowess by annexing the first big ten game on Ohio field this year from Purdue, 20 to 0. The Boilermakers forced the Ohio team to play its best, showing a stiff opposition at all times and often pentrating the Ohio line for good gains.

Purdue was on the offensive most of the first half, but was not able to get dangerously near the Ohio goal. Ohio State gained largely through the stellar work of Full Back Willaman in this half. His terrific line bucking netted several gains of ten and fifteen yards. Huffine was the star of the Purdue offensive.

Harley Goes Across.

Capt. "Chic" Harley entered the game shortly after the opening of the second period with Ohio State in possession of the ball in midfield. Harley kicked in an exchange of punts and gained ground, after which he rambled thirty yards around Purdue's right end for the only score of the first half.

On the run to the goal Harley was tackled five times, but his great skill enabled him to break away and skim the side line across the Purdue goal.

The Buckeyes started with a punch in the second half. Receiving the ball on the kickoff, Stinchcomb made several sneaks through center and two end runs, which were followed by Harley's forward pass to Slycker for twenty-five yards, putting the ball on the five yard line, from where Williams scored.

Score Third Touchdown.

Long runs by Davies and Stinchcomb and another Harley pass to Slycker for fifteen yards scored the third touchdown. Stinchcomb kicked goal.

PURPLE ELEVEN DROPS HOT TILT TO IOWANS, 14-7

Northwestern Bunch Twice Holds Hawkeyes on One-Yard Line.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Making a strong, uphill fight in the face of commanding odds, Northwestern fell in defeat yesterday on Northwestern field before the well drilled Iowa eleven, 14 to 7.

It was by far the best game the Purple has played this season, and the alumni, who helped to celebrate homecoming, left the field satisfied the team had displayed the best football it was capable of and submitted to defeat at the hands of one of the strongest elevens in the west.

After Iowa had scored its first touchdown in the opening period the Purple did not relax in its efforts to cross the Hawkeye goal. Instead, Capt. Koehler and his men went into the fray with renewed vigor and tied the count in the second period.

Iowa Plays It Safe.

Iowa, however, scored again in the third quarter, but Northwestern kept right on trying. With dusk coming on, Quarterback Brightmire uncorked all sorts of forward pass and trick plays in the hope one of his players might slip away for a touchdown. Iowa was content to work on its 7 point margin, and played the game safe at all times, the punt being resorted to whenever a scant distance was needed on the fourth down.

Northwestern must be commended for its defensive play. The Purple stopped the Hawkeyes several times inside the five yard line, and at one time took the oval away on down on its six inch line. The Hawkeye backs were thrown for losses several times by the hard fighting Purple forwards, who played consistent football throughout. The line charged better than it did at any time this season, and the ball changed hands several times by a matter of inches.

Hawkeyes Work Smoothly.

Iowa played its usual high class football. The team worked with a smoothness and precision which was certain to gain ground. The interference took off the tacklers in the usual manner taught by Coach Jones, while the tackling of the visitors was deadly most of the time.

Northwestern got an early break, but was unable to follow it up. Capt. Lohman won the toss and defended the north goal. An exchange of punts followed, and on one of the kicks A. Devine fumbled on his twenty-five yard line and Daley dropped on the oval for the Purple. Northwestern, however, could not gain and Lane punted over the Iowa goal for a touchback.

Purple Forced to Kick.

After the ball had been put in play on the Iowa twenty yard line by the Hawkeyes, A. Devine turned loose a long punt which rolled out of bounds on the Purple two yard line. Lane then kicked for the locals from behind the goal line, and Iowa downed the oval on the Purple twenty yard mark. On a shift play A. Devine broke through Northwestern's left tackle and scored the first touchdown of the game. He kicked goal.

In the second quarter Northwestern gave a real display of football. With Scott, Koehler, and Brightmire carrying the oval, the chalk marks were passed with regularity until the ball rested on the Iowa one yard line. Capt. Koehler then was sent through center for the lone Purple score. Daley tied the count by kicking goal.

Uses Deceptive Triple Pass.

In its march to the goal the team employed a deceptive triple pass which worked practically every time it was called. The play usually wound up with Quarter Back Brightmire carrying the ball, and the little pilot generally managed to zigzag his way through for ten or fifteen yards.

After the Purple had tied the score the Hawkeyes bent to their task with a vengeance. Twice they carried the oval inside of Northwestern's five yard line, only to loose it on downs. Both times Lane kicked out of danger.

In the third period, after the Purple could not gain, Lane punted. A couple of Iowa forward passes, Lohman to Belding and A. Devine to Parker, placed the ball on Northwestern's fifteen yard line.

Three Smashes Bring Score.

By means of a concentrated attack, with Lohman carrying the ball over Slater, the giant Hawkeye tackle, placed the oval on the Purple one yard line. Two more assaults failed, but on the third attempt A. Divine plunged between his center's legs for a touchdown. Parker wound up the scoring by kicking goal.

Northwestern tried all the plays in its repertoire in the closing period. Some of the forward passes were beautifully executed, but not enough ground could be gained continuously to cross the counting mark. Lineup:

MAROON NOTES

The game was cleanly played. The Maroons were seldom penalized, while the Wolverines drew only three setbacks for unnecessary roughness. Even Chicago regarded the infractions as unintentional.

Fritz Crisler, who started at left end for Chicago, has not been in a scrimmage since September because of injuries, and it was his first conference game. He put up a whale of a battle until laid low late in the third period.

Bobie Cole, Chicago half back, was declared ineligible Friday night because of scholastic troubles. Hutchinson performed in his place almost faultlessly. His fumble of one punt was his only mistake in an hour of work.

The big Michigan band of sixty pieces, wearing blue uniforms with flamboyant yellow capes, formed a big "M" between the halves and the Wolverine folks sang the "The Yellow and the Blue" on Stagg field for the firs time since Thanksgiving day in 1905. There was no band out when the two student army freshman teams played last year.

FORWARD PASSES BY NOTRE DAME BEAT ARMY, 12-9

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 8.—The Army lost to Notre Dame, 9 to 12, today in a close and hard fought game. The westerners, except in the opening period, played better than the soldiers. Notre Dame's air line attack ultimately proved to be the Army's undoing.

Coming from behind with the score 9 to 0 in Army's favor, the visitors launched overhead plays for long and short tosses, which upset the Cadets in the second period.

A long pass, Gipp to Bahan, put the ball on the Army's ten yard line, and Gipp slipped through in three plays for a touchdown. The goal was missed.

Army forged its way to a score in the opening period, fine work by Schabacker and Lystad featuring in the drive which started at midfield. Lystad went over for the touchdown. The goal was missed.

McQuarrie kicked a placement goal from the thirty-one yard line in the second period.

In the third period a long toss, Gipp to E. Anderson, put the ball on the Army's ten yard line, and in two plays Miller went around the right end for a touchdown. This goal also was missed. For the Army, Greene, Lystad, Schabacker, and Daniels starred. Gipp, Brandy, E. Anderson, and Bahan featured Notre Dame's game. Lineup:

SLIP PAVES WAY TO FIRST SCORE FOR STAGG MEN

Forward Pass Plays Net the Second Marker; 24,000 at Game.

BY HARVEY T. WOODRUFF.

Chicago's Maroons won the first renewal of its traditional gridiron rivalry with Michigan's Wolverines yesterday before a crowd of 25,000 spectators at Stagg field, 13 to 0, the same score by which the Yostmen triumphed in the meeting of the S. A. T. C. elevens last fall.

Coach Yost epitomized an analysis of the result in his congratulations to Coach Stagg at the conclusion of the game, when he said: "Your team played perfect football, making no mistakes, and the score represents the relative merits of the two teams."

This expression did not mean that these were the two greatest teams that had ever represented Chicago or Michigan, or that it was the greatest game ever played between these two colleges. It simply meant that both teams played up to their capabilities and that flukes or poor judgment did not enter into the result.

Scene Recalled Good Old Days.

In its setting the contest suggested the old days to which alumni are wont to refer. Every seat in the vast stands had been sold for days. Wolverine supporters were massed on the east side, with the Michigan band on the side lines, and the yellow chrysanthemums on the coats of the young women gave a livening touch of Michigan color to the whole assemblage as viewed from the west stands.

On the Chicago side the Maroon chrysanthemums were less noticeable, but the Chicago banners and colors carried by the students were plainly visible to the rooting hosts opposite.

If the scene was similar to the old days, the rooting and enthusiasm, wild and frenzied in the early years of this century, were not. College rivalry between Maroon and Wolverine is a name more than a reality to the respective present day students. It will take two or three or even four years to develop the old conditions among the undergraduates. Even the customary snake dance of victory by the Maroons was less wild and less exuberant than when Northwestern was defeated two weeks ago.

Ideal Sportsmanship Prevails.

So far as sportsmanship was concerned, the contest both in its preliminaries and in its decision was ideal. Michigan was invited to use Stagg field for practice on Friday. Coach Stagg visited the Michigan hotel yesterday morning to inquire whether anything could be done for the comfort of the Wolverines. After the game Coach Yost and Director of Athletics Bartelme visited the Maroon dressing room to offer congratulations. Bartelme said: "We never like to lose to Chicago, but I'd rather the 'Old Man' would do it than several of our other opponents."

Even the rival cheer leaders vied with one another in extending vocal courtesies to their opponents. Some of the old timers rather scoffed at these civilities, but they certainly are better than the bitterness and suspicions which once held sway in the conference.

Maroons Good Ground Gainers.

That's enough for the amenities. Now for the game. Chicago from the start showed its ability to gain ground, and it did the major share of the gaining throughout. Michigan men did not regard their case as hopeless, however, until well into the second half, constantly looking for a consistent attack, which never materialized, because the Staggs were outplaying the rival line, keeping the ball as much as possible, playing safe by punting, and exercising conservative and effective rather than brilliant tactics.

Chicago's use of the forward pass was less frequent but more successful than Michigan's. Passes, successfully completed when most needed, were responsible for both touchdowns. The pass which gave the first score in the second period was one of the prettiest in its conception seen on a western field this season, because it carried a perfect deception.

Great Pass Scores Touchdown.

With the ball on Michigan's thirteen yard line because Hutchinson had recovered a fumble shortly before, Hutchinson gained two yards through the line. The Maroons then started an end run, with Graham carrying the ball. McDonald, as part of the interference, did not attempt to take off a tackler but sifted through to the open, and Graham, while in motion behind his interference, heaved the ball over the oncoming Wolverines to McDonald on the three yard line, from where he went over unopposed.

Michigan, near the end of the half, nearly evened the count with a long pass from Peach on Chicago's forty yard line to Weston out in the open. It was incompleted because Weston, moving goalward, with none to stop him, could not quite reach the ball in its long flight.

Hutchinson Scores in Fourth.

The Maroons did not score again until early in the fourth quarter. Carrying the ball from Michigan's forty-five yard line to the sixteen yard line mostly by line plunges, the Maroons were penalized five yards for offside. Graham then tossed the ball to Fouche on the Maroon left wing and Fouche advanced to the eight yard line. Hutchinson then went between Michigan's left guard and tackle to within a foot of the goal line and on the next play went over.

In the recapitulation, the yardage gained by Chicago was more overwhelming than the score indicates. The Maroons made first down seven times in the first half and Michigan once. Including forward passes, the Maroons gained 129 yards from scrimmage and Michigan forty-one.

In the second half, Chicago made eleven first downs and Michigan three, gaining 154 yards from scrimmage and Michigan fifty-eight.

Chicago's Line Holds.

Michigan was unable to gain consistently through Chicago's line, which had recovered from the slump or overconfidence which brought defeat at Illinois while its end runs were smothered. Resorting to long, desperate forward passes also failed, for the Maroons played deep and broke them up.

Chicago attempted few end runs. Its best gains were on plays between guard and tackle, both from its shift and a fake punt formation, the Maroon guard pushing the opposing guard in, while the interference pushed the Yost tackle out. Four different Michigan left guards were used by Yost in an attempt to check Capt. Higgins' propensity for opening holes for his backs.

Because of the reputation of Capt. Angus Goetz of the Wolverines for blocking kicks, which paved the way for Northwestern's defeat, Chicagao played its protecting backs close to the line of scrimmage on punts, where they early took off any Michigander breaking through. Graham was never hurried in any attempt and on the average outpunted Weston.

Michigan Battles to Finish.

While it was apparent early in the second half that Michigan could not win unless its attack braced or the unexpected happened, the Wolverines fought hard to the finish, not as effectively as their magnificent defense in the second period, which stopped the Maroons on the Michigan one foot line, but just as gamely.

This defense came when Chicago had a first down on Michigan's six yard line and a touchdown seemed a certainty. Hanisch gained two yards, Elton two, Hanisch one, and then Hanisch was stopped a foot from the line as the Maroon interference messed its start. This was Michigan's gamest and best defense, vitiated soon after by a fumble which paved the way for the first touchdown.

Higgins Stars for Victors.

For Chicago, Capt. Higgins was a tower of strength and his line play made possible most of the Maroon gains through his side of the line. McDonald and Crisler showed the best Maroon end play of the season, while Hanisch Elton, Hutchinson, and Graham were dependable and consistent in the backfield.

For Michigan, Tackle Hugh Wilson played a whale of a game with Ward Culver as a loose center, getting into many plays outside his regular position. The Michigan backs hardly got a fair chance because the Maroon line was superior. "Duke" Dunne, son of the former Illinois governor, put up a good game at end until hurt.

THE DETAIL OF PLAY

Sparks kicked off over the goal line and Chicago took the ball from scrimmage on the twenty yard line. Hanisch got seven yards on the first smash and repeated for a first down, but Graham had to punt. Crisler downed Sparks on the twenty yard chalk.

Michigan failed to gain, so Sparks punted back, and Graham returned the boot with only a yard needed for first down. Graham's bounding punt was touched by a Michigan man and recovered by Hutchinson on the Wolverines' twenty yard line. Two smashes made small gains and a forward pass failed, and on fourth down Graham missed a drop kick from the thirty yard line.

Hutchinson Gains 20 Yards.

Sparks punted back to Chicago and on the first play Hutchinson got around end for a twenty yard advance. On third down a forward pass failed and Graham's second attempt at a drop kick was recovered on the eight yard line by Michigan.

Sparks punted back and both elevens traded five yard penalties. The first Chicago attempt at a forward pass, Graham to Elton, was good for thirty yards, putting the ball on the twenty yard line as the first quarter ended. Score: Chicago, 0; Michigan, 0.

Wolverines in Danger; Hold.

With the ball close to her goal line, Michigan braced, but another pass, Graham to Elton, put the ball on the eight yard line. Hanisch and Elton put the ball on the one yard line, but the Wolverine center trio stopped Hanisch on the next two drives, and Sparks punted out of danger. Graham failed on another drop kick and Michigan again punted, Sparks getting a dandy kick to the Maroon thirty-five yard line.

The Maroons made first down on drives by Elton, Hutchinson, and Hanisch, but Graham was thrown for a loss and had to punt. Sparks muffed the ball on his own thirteen yard line and Hutchinson scooped it up with a clear field ahead, but slipped before he could get under way and was downed by Weston. On the second play Graham sailed a forward pass to MacDonald, who swerved wide for a touchdown. Capt. Higgins kicked goal from a treacherous angle.

Both Penalized for Holding.

After Sparks' kickoff, both teams were penalized fifteen yards for holding after making first downs. The Wolverine penalty forced Sparks to kick to Hutchinson, who fumbled, Peach recovering on the Maroon forty yard mark. On a fake place kick Weston got into a clear field for a touchdown, but Peach's pass was just out of his reach and the only Michigan chance for a touchdown was gone.

Sparks followed with an attempted field goal, but missed as the period ended. Score: Chicago, 7; Michigan, 0.

Third Quarter Scoreless.

The third quarter was without scoring. Sparks kicked off to Elton, who came back thirty yards. Graham and Sparks traded punts, and then kicked to each other again without material advantage. A second time the Wolverines attempted Yost's fake place kick forward pass, but the Maroons followed Weston like a hawk and broke up the play.

Chicago took the ball on downs when Wolverine passes failed and were in a march towards the goal when the period ended. Score: Chicago, 7; Michigan, 0.

With the ball on the twenty-two yard line when the final quarter opened, Chicago was penalized, but Graham heaved a pass to Fouche, who jumped into the air and ran to the seven yard line. Hutchinson would have made a touchdown in one play, but he hit the goal post. On a second attempt he went across behind Higgins. The Maroon captain missed the goal.

Graham's Kicks Fail.

Late in the quarter Graham tried two more drop kicks, but failed, and on the second Knode made a thirty yard return. The Wolverines were raining forward passes near the end of the game, but Hutchinson intercepted the ball on the last play of the game and made a fifteen yard return. Lineup:

YALE MEN GIVEN REAL STRUGGLE BY BROWN, 14-0

Kempton and Braden's Offensive Play Feature in Win of the Elis.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 8.—Yale defeated Brown in a gruelling contest in the Yale bowl today, 14 to 0. The game was featured by the brilliant offensive work of Kempton and Braden of the Blue backfield, and the deadly tackling of Williams and Albright, the Brown ends.

Gloom settled on the Yale supporters in the first minute of the game when Kempton injured his shoulder and was taken from the lineup, La Roche going in at quarter back. Kempton went back into the game in the second period, but it was not until the third that Yale displayed an attack which made victory appear certain. Kempton made a thirty yard run soon after the period opened and Braden pierced the Brown line for several good gains.

A forward pass, Kempton to Neville, netted eight yards, and then Braden went over for the first touchdown. Before the quarter was ended the Blue backs had again advanced the ball into Brown territory, and the period closed with the ball on the three yard line.

PENN LOSES BY A SINGLE POINT TO DARTMOUTH

Inability to Kick Goals Costs 20-19 Game at Polo Grounds.

New York, Nov. 8.—Dartmouth narrowly defeated Pennsylvania, 20 to 19, in a bitterly fought game at the Polo grounds. Each scored three touchdowns, but Heinie Miller's failure to kick two goals from touchdowns meant defeat for Penn. Dartmouth, using its famous shift play, gained repeatedly through the Quaker line and around ends.

The Red and Blue was unable to make much progress through the strong green line, but resorted to an aerial attack, forward passes being responsible for all Penn's touchdowns.

Robertson of Dartmouth broke his leg in the third period and will be out of the game the rest of the season.

Holbrook of Dartmouth was the individual star, scoring two touchdowns and one goal from touchdown. He ran fifty-five yards through the entire Penn eleven for a touchdown in the first period and smashed the line for four yards for the second. Jordan intercepted a forward pass and ran sixty-five yards for Dartmouth's touchdown in the third period.

Brunner, Light, and Bell scored for Penn. Capt. Bell made two unsuccessful attempts to kick field goals in the closing minutes. Lineup:

CENTRAL A. A. U. ASKS RETURN OF HOOSIER CITIES

Will Request the National Body to Rescind Action of Last Spring.

A demand for the return of Hammond, Gary, East Chicago, and other nearby cities and towns in Indiana to the territory of the Central association of the Amateur Athletic union will be made by local delegates at the annual meeting of the national body in Boston next week, according to resolutions adopted at a meeting of the Central association in the Hotel Sherman last night.

The national body last spring removed several towns and cities in northern Indiana from the Central association in order to create an Indiana association.

It was pointed out by the central managers that the action was arbitrary, against the ethics of the organization, and inimical to the athletic interests of the central division, as the towns thus affected are almost suburbs of Chicago.

A resolution was therefore adopted instructing all delegates from the central division to demand the return of the Indiana towns in question to the central division.

The awarding of indoor and outdoor championship events for 1919-1920 was referred to the championship committee.

Harry Berz was added to the championship committee of which Charles A. Dean is chairman.

HEAP OF PASSES BY ENGLEWOOD NIPS SENN, 13-0

Forwards in Last Quarter Avert Triple Tie for School Honors.

BY JIMMY CORCORAN.

Englewood forward passed its way to the Chicago High School league heavyweight title and a 13 to 0 win over Senn at White City yesterday before 4,000 prep shouters.

Before the match the Edgewater gridders were given a fighting chance of licking the Purple and bringing themselves and Hyde Park into a triple tie for the 1919 honors, but Coach Barradell's athletes were polished too highly in the aerial feature of the battle.

Open Game Lands Victory.

It was the Puple tinted triangle of Folz, Bryson, and Reynolds, introduced in the final period, that sent Coach Crook's lads back to the north side in mourning. For three quarters the elevens had squabbled and skidded on their ears in the mud on practically even terms. Then Englewood uncorked its open game assets.

With Senn backed up under its goal posts five minutes after the last chapter started, Full Back Mueller was forced to punt and wafted the ball into midfield, from where Folz of Englewood squirmed to the twenty yard line. A forward pass, Folz to Bryson, on the next play brought the moist pigskin to the one inch line. Metz then smashed center for the first score and Folz added the goal after touchdown.

Another Pass Goes Over.

The next count was registered after Senn found itself practically in the same position. Mueller's punt was carried by Folz to the eighteen yard mark, after which a flawless forward, Folz to Left End Reynolds was flashed for the second touchdown. The try at goal failed.

It was Mueller's punting and Senn's spunky line that kept the Englewood outfit on its toes for the first three quarters. The back field, however, was unable to produce in yardage, as only one first down was made during the muddy melee.

Line Opens Big Holes.

The alleged tissue paper forward wall of the Purple proved capable of opening holes on offense and defense, and as a result Bryson, Metz, Dixon, and Folz were able to shimmy through for generous gains at intervals. The booting of Folz also was a prominent factor. Lineup:

HYDE PARK WINS AND TIES.

Capt. "Wop" Simmons led in a line battering attack that routed Lake View, 38 to 0, in the heavy end of Hyde Park's double header at Cub park. Lake View lightweights were tied, 0 to 0, by the Hyde Parkers, but this leaves their sectional record intact, as they have not lost. Wop Simmons had a rival for individual honors in Graham, the red and white quarter, but the south siders held a big edge in other positions, and the superiority stood out in the play.

The two lightweight teams battled each other completely off their feet, their game being a much better exhibition than that of the bigger fellows. Lake View was aggressive, and kept Hyde Park fighting to avert a score, but this defense was successful. The game ended with Lake View on the fifteen yard mark. Lineups:

CRANE WINS AND TIES.

Crane placed second in the City league heavyweight race by beating Lane, 10 to 6, at Pyott park. The two lightweight elevens fought a 7 to 7 tie. Davis of Crane featured the major battle with his kicking. His forty yard drop kick gave Crane its only points in the first half, which ended in Lane's favor, 6 to 3. In the third period he sailed a punt sixty-five yards to Lane's goal region, where Wachendorf touched the ball but failed to hold it and Rosenblum pounced on it.

Laydo, a Japanese boy, played a fine game at fullback for the Crane lightweights. This game, like the heavyweight one, was marked by continual scrapping between players. After each scored in the first half the teams fought themselves out in the second. Lineups:

BOWEN, 13; AUSTIN LIGHTS, 6.

Bowen qualified to meet Schurz for the division II. lightweight honors by defeating Austin, 13 to 6, at Bessemer park. Austin started with a vicious attack, scoring in five minutes and holding the pace through the opening half. In the third quarter Bowen began a machinelike advance, with Moline and Neville banging the line, Vandenberg scoring from the three yard line. In the fourth quarter, on a blocked drop kick, Moline ran thirty yards for the winning score. Bowen's line stopped Austin's shifts. Lineup:

LA GRANGE SPLITS EVEN.

La Grange split even in its Suburban league double header on the Lyons township field. The heavyweights conquered Deerfield, 18 to 6, battling to the front early in the game and staying there. The lightweights provided the medium for Proviso to annex its second league title in two years, winning, 45 to 0.

Deerfield completed only one first down. Its touchdown came in the third period, when Jackson tossed a long pass to Parcells, who was downed on La Grange's one yard line. Dolan bucked across for the score. Hey was La Grange's star, and Deerfield's inability to stop him decided the battle. He carried the ball on three-fourths of the plays and backed up his line in sterling style. The minor battle was one sided, Coach Barry sending in the second team of Maywood boys in the third quarter. Lineups:

EASY FOR ST. RITA, 39-0.

St. Rita trimmed De La Salle from Joliet, 39 to 0, at St. Rita's field. The game was a walkaway from the start, and after a twelve point lead in the first quarter, St. Ritas took their time and practiced a few trick plays. The letdown almost cost a shutout, however, for they were forced to held the Joliet team on the one yard line for four downs.

TITLE TO OAK PARK, EVANSTON FALLING IN DEFEAT BY 55-0

Oak Park heavies quelled all doubts as to their class, clinching the Suburban league title before 4,000 rabid high school rooters with a 55 to 0 triumph over Evanston at Oak Park. The home eleven got the jump at the start, and smeared the whitewash thick. In three minutes the first touchdown had been scored. The team played open football all the way, passing and circling the ends with facility. Evanston had to punt when it got the ball, and completed only three first downs.

Capt. Hoff Is Star.

Capt. Hoff starred. He caught two passes for touchdowns, added another score for good measure, and made the bulk of the tackles. Caruso led the onslaught which ripped the hitherto unbeaten Evanstonians into shreds. He tore around ends and his toe added points on five goal kicks and one thirty-five yard drop.

Steger twice intercepted Evanston passes and ran through the open field for touchdowns. Berry, at center, was a tower of strength. Six hundred Evanstonians backed the team, bringing all sorts of noise making apparatus, from horns to dish pans. Their team never got the chances to spring the trick plays that had put other teams of the Suburban conference to rout.

Title without a Defeat.

This victory gives Oak Park the Suburban league title for the fourth straight year. It was the seventh victory of the season, and the goal remains uncrossed. Lineup:

PROVISO UPSETS NEW TRIER.

Proviso heavies surprised New Trier, 7 to 0, at Maywood. The outstanding feature was Proviso's defense, which three times repulsed the Kenilworth team inside the five yard zone. Just at the close of the second quarter Proviso held for four downs, the last attempt reaching one foot from the goal.

Breaks in luck favored Proviso, with New Trier having much the better of play through the first three quarters. Toward the end of the final period three successive penalties put Proviso's ball on the New Trier twenty-five yard line, and on straight football Ziebell completed the march by crossing the goal. He also kicked goal. Weinecke of New Trier played a great line driving game. Lineup:

A. Horween
R. Horween

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 8.—[Special.]—Expecting a muddy field, Harvard planned to play the Horween brothers of Chicago, Ralph and Arnold, when the Princeton game reached a critical stage. How well the Chicago boys came through was one of the redeeming points about a game which the Crimson expected to win. Ralph sustained a broken shoulder in a previous game.

The two brothers are heavy men and work finely together where weight is necessary. Both are stars. Ralph in 1916 scored Harvard's three points in the Yale game by kicking a field goal. His younger brother bids fair to equal his fine record on the gridiron.

AUSTIN HEAVIES, 22; SCHURZ, 0

Austin heavyweights won a 22 to 0 victory over Schurz at Schurz field. The game was a rough contest and was a real test, being played on a muddy field that slowed end runs and forced frequent punts. Lineup:

SMASHING ATTACK HELPS LAKE FOREST BEAT LOYOLA, 19-2

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

Showing a crushing attack and defense, Lake Forest academy's smooth gridiron machine flattened Loyola, 19 to 2, before a crowd of 7,500, which overflowed Loyola field. Lake Forest has won in three of the last four years. Lake Forest outweighed the Chicago academy and turned every element of play to advantage. Splendid interference featured the gains.

Lake Forest used straight tactics in the opening quarter, never losing the ball after Loyola kicked off until a touchdown was scored. Macristy led a stead ymarch upfield and bucked over for a touchdown. Throwing Loyola strictly on defense, Coach Brown's machine came back again before the period was ended, forward passes advancing the ball from midfield, and Widmer completing the promenade for a touchdown when he got free around McCahill's end for twenty yards. Macristy kicked goal.

In the third quarter Foyland scored again, this time around right end. Loyola made a spectacular effort in this period, when Schwendau intercepted a pass and raced forty-five yards to Lake Forest's four yard mark. Russell ripped the defense enough to carry the ball over, only to fumble when bumped simultaneously with a wave of Lake Forest tacklers. McCahill of Loyola downed McClintock with the ball for a safety. Lineup:

MORGAN PARK BEATS RIVAL CADET TEAM IN FORM REVERSAL

Morgan Park Cadets turned a season of adversity into a time of elation for alumni by taking the homecoming game from Northwestern Military and Naval academy, its great rival, 12 to 0, at Morgan Park. More than 1,000 alumni turned out. After Capt. Iten threw a pass to Nichols, which gained twenty-five yards in the second period, Simpson scored on a buck.

Northwestern threatened in the third quarter, but was held for downs in the twelve yard region. The last touchdown was lucky and spectacular, and came just before the closing whistle. Morgan Park punted for over fifty yards and Booth of Northwestern fumbled. Godfrey of the home eleven scooped it up on the run, about two yards from the goal, and tumbled over the line. Lineup:

HARVARD COMES FROM BEHIND AND TIES PRINCETON

Touchdown Near the End Averts Defeat in 10-10 Combat.

had a clear field around Harvard's left end for the first touchdown. Strubing kicked the goal.

Long Runs Bring Cheers.

In the second period Princeton gained ground consistently, but several penalties broke up its progressive game, and it was forced to kick. Casey in this period electrified the Harvard contingent by several long runs that helped offset Princeton's gains through excellent punting.

Harvard began to show some of its real form in the third period. Princeton kicked off and Harvard, failing to gain, punted to Princeton's thirty-three yard line. Trimble shot through the Crimson line for nine yards. A Princeton back fumbled and the ever alert Casey, picking up the bouncing pigskin, darted in and out among Princeton's tacklers to the Tiger eighteen yard line. The rest was easy. Ralph Horween dropped back and kicked a field goal from the twenty-eight yard mark.

Later in this period Harvard worked the ball down to Princeton's five yard line, where it was when the quarter ended. There was much excitement as the teams lined up for the final period. Harvard set herself for a field goal, but instead an attempt was made to score a touchdown by way of the aerial route. The ball was fumbled on the line, and as it was the last try, the oval went to Princeton as the Tiger cohorts frantically cheered.

Wild Scene in Stands.

After Princeton had made the score ten points on Murray's field goal, Harvard started her powerful drive. With plunges through center and tackle interspersed with passes the Crimson plugged their way two-thirds down the field until it was over the goal line.

PROPOSAL FOR STANDARD BALL STIRS GOLFERS

Rule Would Meet Hard Opposition in Both the U. S. and Canada.

BY JOE DAVIS.

Although the Royal and Ancient Club of St. Andrews at its last meeting took no definite action on the standardization of golf balls, the matter was discussed. Prior to the meeting it was reported on seemingly good authority that it was the intention of the rules of golf committee to introduce a rule standardizing the floater.

In order to give the golf trade a chance to unload its stock of heavier balls, it was proposed to make the change take effect at the close of the present season.

For the time being the matter seems to be in abeyance, and, while the matter of standardization never has been officially discussed by the United States Golf association, the national body would have to take official action if the British authorities decided to adopt a standard ball.

Where Nations Differ.

Although the U. S. G. A. and the royal and ancient club differ in their interpretation of the amateur rule, the only difference in the playing rules is that the U. S. G. A. sanctions the use of the mallet-headed putter, which is barred in Great Britain.

Commenting on the proposed legislation the Canadian Golfer says:

"It is sincerely hoped that the rules of golf committee will not be so ill advised as to adopt such a radical departure without first consulting the powers that be in this and other golfing countries. In Canada the rules and regulations of the game as laid down by St. Andrews are faithfully followed, but it is a grave question if any such change as that mooted in connection with the standardization of the ball would be acceptable here. The rules of golf committee must 'hasten slowly,' very slowly, before making any such rash decision. It certainly would be retrograde legislation.

Objections to "Live" Ball.

"The chief objections made to the rubber cored ball are that it gives a good response to a half hit shot; that it makes recovery from hazards too easy, so that the bad shot does not receive the punishment it deserves, and that its resiliency makes it much harder to control on a hard green and so introduces an element of luck in approaching and putting.

"All these objections apply most strongly to the floater and much less strongly to the small, heavy ball, which it is proposed to abandon. One thing is sure: if St. Andrews does attempt to standardize the 'floater,' its ruling will not be observed in Canada or the States. It will commit golfing suicide as far as its influence here is concerned."

Local Pros Opposed.

A canvass of the leading local golf professionals last week indicates that all are opposed to the standardization of the golf ball, while the proposal to adopt a "floater" is regarded as a joke.

"Floaters," said Jock Hutchinson, "are all right for the women and old men players, but not for hard hitters. Why, the floater in a stiff wind might blow back to the point it was hit from."

George Simpson of Oak Park asserted that the modern golf ball has been responsible for the great improvement in the courses.

THE DOUBLE BARREL AND OTHER GUN MATTERS.

THE double gun has this one big advantage over the automatic or pump. It permits of two degrees of choke or distribution of shot. This feature should receive a lot of consideration on the part of the man or boy who is going to worry through with only one gun.

The idea of tapering or constricting the bore of a shotgun is of American origin. Some New England Yankee was the first to try it out back in the early part of the last century, but according to Horace Kephart, the modern choking system first attracted attention through the remarkable long range execution done by certain Illinois duck and pigeon shooters about 1870. The English gunmakers produced their first choke bored guns about two years later.

Speaking of English guns, it must be admitted that they turn out some mighty nice arms; arms that show lots of handwork in the fitting and much thought in the balance—you seldom see an English gun that is muzzle heavy—a not uncommon fault with American shotguns. In fact, it might be pointed out that the British believe in a generous amount of substantial heftiness; look at their guns, fly rods, cutlery and jokes.

The American shotgun, however, has advantages other than low price, for Yankee ingenuity has refined machine made guns to a remarkable degree because Americans are natural born gun tinkers.

Coming back to the subject of boring, the two barrels of the double gun and the willingness of American makers to let you specify, at no extra charge, how you want these barrels bored, is a boon to the man or boy who is seeking the nearest thing he can get to an "all around gun."

For instance, a shooter confining himself to waterfowl and the traps can have both barrels full choke; if he does a little upland shooting on the side, he can have the right barrel bored to shoot a little more open; if he does much shooting in the brush his right barrel can be cylinder bored and the left choked enough to take care of the long shots.

The other fellow's gun is a painful subject. The ability of their own particular blunderbuss to "knock 'em as far as you can see 'em," is a delusion almost every hunter possesses. I know at least one man who has been hunting for twenty years with considerable success, yet I honestly believe that he has never owned a first class gun. If I were to tell him so, however, I sure would do it over the long distance telephone and then light out for parts unknown.

Almost every hunter old enough to get a hunting license can remember some old timer who had a brass bound bored out Zulu gun which he stoutly maintained would kill a goose at 105 measured yards, but which, as a matter of fact, would not kill a canary at a third of that distance. Human nature is a funny thing, as Pat remarked when he saw the setter pointing some quail.

Few hunters get enough shooting to get a line on a gun's real worth. The average hunter will miss an easy shot and call it a mystery. Then he will knock a bird at an almost unbelievable distance and base his opinion of his gun on that. If some one else does the same thing he will call it a scratch shot—which most long shots really are. The standard test of a shotgun, as to pattern, is to shoot it at a thirty inch circle at forty yards—measured, not estimated.

A full choke barrel should put 75 per cent of the entire shot charge into the thirty inch circle; modified choke should tally 60 per cent; cylinder bore, 40 per cent, and these percentages apply to all gauges.

Gunmakers show tables in their catalogues giving the number of pellets in certain charges. Taking number 6 shot as a basis we find that: In ⅞ ounce of shot, the standard 20 gauge charge, there are 191 pellets. A cylinder bore should put 76 in the 30 inch circle; modified, 114; full choke, 164.

One ounce, the standard 16 gauge load, has 218 pellets. The cylinder bore should target 87; modified, 137; full choke, 164.

In 1⅛ ounces of number sixes there are 245 pellets. For cylinder bore, 98; modified, 147; full, 184.

In 1¼ ounces of number six shot there are 273 pellets. Cylinder bore should target 108; modified, 163; full choke, 204.

It is best, when targeting a gun, to take several targets and strike an average. The ideal target would distribute these pellets uniformly over the target; patches of shot here and there, with space enough between them for a bird or clay target to get through, indicate a patchy pattern. This can often be remedied by changing the size of shot, for nearly every gun has its peculiarities and will handle a certain charge of a certain size better than any other load.

A few hours of experimenting will reveal a gun's weaknesses and individuality and enable the young shooter to find what load or loads his gun handles best. With this knowledge he is prepared to go afield with the odds in his favor.

For PLAYERS of WHIST

by A. R. METCALFE

GAME in auction corresponds closely to goal in football. The same intense effort should be employed to secure goal in one as in the other. Also, the same desperate play should be used by the defense to prevent the declarer from securing this result.

Too many players do the same thing at all times. Auction can never be learned by memorizing a lot of rules. Players must learn to use their minds and alter the play to meet an emergency.

Those who are constantly talking about major suits and minor suits and who want a precise rule for the next move, whether in bidding or play, never get anywhere.

The deal which follows illustrates the all-too-common play of this sort.

West secured nine tricks.

After the first trick the king of clubs was the vital card for both the north and west players. The latter was obliged to clear his spade suit even at the risk of finding the ace with south. From that time the play was normal until trick eight.

The plan of the declarer was to rob north of his last heart, leave that player in with a diamond, and win the game trick with the king of clubs. All of which worked out according to schedule.

North, of course, should have worked just as hard to defeat the plan of west as soon as the plan could be recognized, which was trick nine. Had north thrown his king of diamonds on the adversary's ace, north and south would have won every other trick. That this would be the result of sacrificing the king, north, of course, could not be certain. He could tell, positively, however, that the game would be lost if the king of diamonds took a trick; therefore, he should not have allowed the king to win.

Unfortunately, north was one who played by rule, and the rubber slipped gently away from him.

WEE DICK KERR FORCES HIS WAY TO BIG LEAGUER

World's Series Slab Hero Turned Down Because of His Size.

BY BILLY EVANS.
[American League Umpire.]

Dick Kerr of the Chicago White Sox was the hero of the 1919 world's series.

Little Dick, however, had a strenuous time getting into that rôle. For some reason major league managers have always looked with disfavor on pitchers small of stature. The dark horse of the recent series is about the smallest major league pitching machine in captivity. Naturally, Kerr had more than his share of trouble getting an opportunity to prove he could make good as a big leaguer.

My first recollection of Kerr dates back three or four years when Jack Egan was managing the Milwaukee team of the American association. For a number of years Egan had been an American league umpire, and I had been doubled up a great deal with him. When he branched out as a manager I was interested in his success and followed the score of the Milwaukee club closely.

Kerr Used in Pinches.

I early noted a fellow by the name of Kerr was doing fine work for Egan. I also noticed that whenever Egan needed a pitcher to hold a narrow lead Kerr was invariably called upon.

About the middle of the season Egan was in Chicago on business, came out to Comiskey park, dropped into my dressing room, and we had a long chat. His club was leading the race, and I thought Egan had a great chance for the pennant. He was not optimistic, and said his pitching was not strong enough to carry him through.

"If I only had a couple more pitchers like Kerr I would win in a walk," Egan said.

Nerve of a Burglar.

"This fellow Kerr is a sure enough big leaguer, but I don't seem to be able to make any one else think that way. He is a better left hander than 75 per cent of the southpaws in the two big leagues. He hasn't so much speed, just enough to carry him through, but he has a good curve, a nice slow ball, and an excellent change of pace.

"And talk about nerve—why, that peewee has the guts of a burglar. A real professional burglar, not an amateur. Any time one of my pitchers gets into trouble, and I look over the bench, Kerr is always staring right at me. Usually he is holding out his hand for a ball, signifying his readiness to go to the rescue, any time I said the word.

Call Him Too Small.

"I have writen a dozen big league managers about him. At least a score of major league scouts have looked him over, but they all shook their heads and said he is too small to even have a slim chance of coming through."

Kerr's chance came when Chicago signed him, but even then no one figured him more than a long shot. He made good with the White Sox, but not in a sensational way that caused him to break into the headlines in black print.

Now for the world's series.

It was the evening of the second game, and the baseball world had been treated to a couple of surprises. The Cincinnati Reds had twice beaten the Chicago White Sox, and both times in a decisive manner. Manager Gleason was hard pressed from a pitching standpoint. Every one was wondering whom he would work in the third game to be played at Chicago.

While listening to a lot of lobby gossip about how a ball club should be managed I bumped into Clarence Rowland, former manager of the Chicago White Sox. Last year Rowland handled the Milwaukee club.

Rowland Boosts Kerr.

"Whom will Gleason work tomorrow?" askd Rowland.

"Can't see how he can consider any one but Kerr," I replied.

"This fellow Kerr will just about beat them," answered Rowland, "for he is the type of pitcher to bother the Reds, while nothing bothers him. He is right at home when the situation is tightest, and I look for him to come through with a whale of a game."

That Rowland had the right dope was proved the following day, when Kerr beat the Reds, 3 to 0, and later 5 to 4 in ten innings.

Chicago.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Is it possible to double up a base runner when first and second or first, second, and third bases are occupied and the batsman hits an infield fly with none or one out? The umpire, of course, calls "infield fly, batter out."

Must the runners protect themselves by returning to their respective bases promptly or does the ball game stop until the ball is returned to the pitcher? Please advise whether or not runners advance at their own risk on a dropped third strike with first base occupied and none or one out. If they start after ball is dropped are they sent back? If a steal is started on the pitch what is the ruling? Do not both rules halt the game temporarily?

R. H. SHAW.

Answer—On an infield fly base runners must protect themselves if it is caught. They can be doubled up if they do not return to their bases before the fly is caught and thrown to any base occupied when the ball was hit. The object of the rule is to protect runners against a cinch double play if the fly is muffed intentionally, but not to protect them against a double play if they fail to return promptly. On a dropped third strike, when the batsman is out automaticaly, the runner may advance at his own risk the same as on a third strike that it caught. The object of this rue is merely to prevent a cinch double play by intentionally dropping the third strike with a runner on first and less than two out. In neither case is play suspended.

TALABER TO WRESTLE MEYERS.

Lou Talaber, middleweight, will meet Johnny Meyers at the Casino theater, Clark and Kinzie streets, Thursday night. It will be the second half of the double windup, William Demetral and Jack Linow meeting in the chief attraction.

1919 SHUTOUTS LOWER THAN IN FORMER SEASONS

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Further evidence that National league pitchers excelled those of the American league in effectiveness this year is found in the record of shutout games for the season, which closed in a blaze of Red.

Slabmen in the veteran circuit whitewashed their opponents in 100 games this year, while those of the junior organization pitched only 87 shutouts. This is a total of 187 for the two leagues, which is considerably below the records of previous years. In 1918, in spite of the fact the schedule was curtailed by a month, there were 202 whitewashes in the two circuits, and in 1917, with a schedule of 154 games for each team, there were 251 blanks pitched in both circuits.

These figures for recent years do not come anywhere near the earlier records in the matter of shutouts, and it would seem to indicate the batsman is gradually gaining on the pitcher in spite of the freak hurling that has become fashionable in the last few seasons.

Jimmy Wilde to Land in New York Tomorrow

New York, Nov. 8.—[Special.]—Jimmy Wilde will hop down the gangplank some time tomorrow morning. This will be glad tidings for such fellows as Herman, Lynch, Burns, Moore, Burman, and "Young Turk," who is the new sensation among the midgets in Philadelphia. Jimmy came away from England under protest of his rooters there. Jimmy could have had a king's ransom had he decided to stay home and mind his P's and Q's. England wanted Wilde to retire unbeaten, and $100,000 would have been his right in his lap had he promised to give up the ring with the honors he already has gleaned.

FIND CHILDREN IN GOOD HOMES IMPROPERLY FED

Conditions Found Worse Among Well to Do than in the Slums.

The children of the well to do are undernourished.

While a survey by the Elizabeth McCormick Memorial fund has just disclosed that, in a school of the stockyards district, 16 per cent of the children are below standard, in several well to do neighborhoods the percentage runs as high as 60.

Ten thousand public school pupils in all were examined, of whom 40.5 per cent were found to be 7 per cent or more underweight—children of a class which, according to the federal children's bureau, are retarded a year in mental development.

Plan Welfare Institute.

The seriousness of the situation has caused Peter A. Mortenson, superintendent of schools, to request the fund to sponsor a child welfare institute of two weeks, directed by Dr. William R. P. Emerson of Boston, one of the leading child specialists of the country. The first meeting will be held tomorrow in the fund's headquarters, 506 Tower building.

As explained by the experts, underfeeding of children in prosperous homes is due, not to lack of nourishing food but to the child's disinclination to eat it. He prefers tea and coffee to milk, cereals, and vegetables; and his parents further indulge him in staying up late at night and in remaining indoors rather than out in the open air.

Typical Cases.

The following typical cases—authentically described except in names—are cited:

Jim Brown, good home in thrifty neighborhood; age 15 years; weighed 83½ pounds; should weigh 114; 37 per cent underweight.

George Long; age 11 years; weighed 53½; should weigh 88 pounds; 38 per cent underweight; 4 feet in height; average height for boy of 11 years, 52 inches.

Frances Jones; age 14 years; weight, 90½ pounds; should weigh 120 pounds; 25 per cent underweight.

Dorothy Walker; age 14 years; weight, 80 pounds; should weigh 111 pounds; 28 per cent underweight.

The children of six schools in a suburban district of pleasant surroundings and thrifty homes were weighed. In school No. 1, 52.4 per cent were found to be 7 per cent plus underweight. No. 2, 45.1 per cent. No. 3, 37.4 per cent. No. 4, 37.1 per cent. No. 5, 55.7 per cent, and No. 6, 57.7 per cent.

In a practice school in a wealthy neighborhood, 26.2 per cent were 7 per cent plus underweight. In a crowded tenement neighborhood, 32.1 per cent were 7 per cent plus underweight, and second school in same neighborhood, 16.2, 7 per cent underweight.

The recent editorial in THE TRIBUNE, commenting on the national shortage in newsprint paper and announcing the purpose of this journal to conserve the supply, in the general interest, by limiting the size of daily issues, brought a response yesterday from Frank A. Munsey of the New York Sun and other publications.

"I have just read," Mr. Munsey wires, "your editorial on the newsprint situation. My newspapers will gladly join in a movement to cut the consumption of newsprint to a point well within the scope of manufacturing possibilities."

QUEEN "MUM" REIGNS IN TWO PARKS

Annual Shows Marked by Elaborate Displays.

Eleanor Scully

The annual chrysanthemum show at Lincoln park opened yesterday. This year the flowers have been arranged according to an elaborate color scheme in two showrooms, the pink and white room and the yellow and bronze room. A daylight effect has been provided by placing frosted incandescent globes at three foot intervals so that night visitors will lose none of the color values.

One of the giant plants raised under the direction of William O'Carroll, head gardener, is seven feet six inches in circumference, and holds more than 700 yellow flowers. The bush had grown so large the door of the green house had to be cut away in order to remove it.

The show in Garfield park will be thrown open to the public this morning under the direction of Head Gardener August Koch. More than 400 varieties will be exhibited, including a number of grafted trees. One tree bears thirty-seven varieties of chrysanthemums of the smaller type, every color being represented except blue. Science has yet to produce a blue chrysanthemumu.

The largest flower there is the Australian, a large white type, measuring nine inches in diameter and from eleven to fourteen inches from "petal to petal," as the florists term the custom of uncurling the petals and making the official measurements between the petal tips of the flattened flowers.

Miss Eleanor Scully, 319 South Oak Park avenue, a chrysanthemum enthusiast, managed to slip into the Garfield conservatory last night and obtain a peep behind the scenes.

Both the Lincoln and Garfield park shows will be open to the public from 8 a. m. to 10 p. m.

EXPLODES IDEA COUNTRY FOLK ARE HEALTHIEST

They Scorn Rules of the City, Conference Here Is Told.

Ways and means of improving the health of the rural communities and of bettering rural life generally formed the topic of discussion at the Hotel La Salle yesterday, where the National Country Life association opened its second annual conference. About 250 educators, ministers, and others interested in the social development of the rural districts are attending this four day gathering.

The most surprising disclosure of the opening addresses was the statement that country people, despite their advantages of fresh air and exercise, are not as healthy as their city brethren.

Shown in Army Records.

"Experience in the army camps has led the medical officers to believe that men from country districts are a good deal less able to resist contagious diseases than are the city bred," said George E. Vincent, president of the Rockefeller Foundation. "The school population offers further evidence. Rural school children in the United States make a distinctly worse showing than the urban pupils."

He was seconded in his observation by Dr. H. E. Dearholt of the University of Wisconsin.

Both of these authorities urged the necessity of educational propaganda to improve the rural health.

Public Agencies Urged.

"An important approach to education and agitation in behalf of better health is through the public school," Said Dr. Vincent. "There the best health literature may be distributed. Valuable demonstrations may be given there. Moreover, their playgrounds are as important as those of the city schools and have an immediate bearing upon the health, recreation, and social life of the country."

Public health agencies were also urged as essential.

Last night Kenyon L. Butterfield, president of the conference, read his address. The relation of rural health to religion and morality will be discussed this afternoon.

Improved Subdivision Properties

Developed Restricted Beautified

Bldgs In Blk. Adjoining Britigan's Second Portage Park Properties

Constantly Building Values

Chicago has grown more rapidly than any city in the world. It is still growing rapidly. It must continue to grow in proportion to the demand not only of its own territory but of the world at large. Its thoroughfares are choked with traffic. Old worn out buildings are giving way to beautiful new structures. Its great arteries of travel must be widened and paved that its commerce may move swiftly. Its railroad yards are growing more rapidly than those in any district in the world. Thousands of people are attracted every year by this mighty industrial magnet which represents America's National Prosperity and serves America's internal commercial wants.

Britigan's Properties Growing in Value with Chicago

The phenomenal investment values found in Britigan's subdivisions are values that come from this overgrowth of America's greatest inland city. Property that lies in the paths of Chicago's growth will be overtaken by that growth and overwhelmed with the values that come from the development of this city. Great business sections in outlying territories are the result of the needs of Chicago's people. In these sections great banks have been built, and these banks have piled up deposits by the millions. In these great sections you will find warehouses, stores, shops, schools, churches and all the other business, religious and social necessities of the people who dwell there. The needs of the people must be supplied, the growth of population cannot be stopped, outlying development will still go on in this city. The men and women with vision and foresight, with faith in the future of this greatest of inland cities, can make independent fortunes by studying Britigan methods and the values that are inherent in Britigan properties.

Our Third Portage Park Property

This beautiful residential section on the Northwest side is modern in development and beautiful in appearance and full of potential profits for its owners. Montrose Avenue passes directly through Britigan's Portage Park properties. The third Portage Park property that we are offering is even more valuable than the second property. The property already sold by Britigan in this district aggregates over $1,000,000, thus demonstrating that those who came and saw the property have been absolutely convinced of its value. If you are in doubt of the investment features of these subdivisions we advise you to go out today and see for yourself the most beautiful district on the Northwest Side, in which there are hundreds of beautiful homes, schools, churches, shops, stores, boulevards, parks, playgrounds—a district in which some of the most substantial people in Chicago dwell in comfort and with every modern convenience.

RAIN OR SHINE, ATTEND THIS SALE!

How to Get There If you come out by automobile, take Montrose Avenue going west to our office at North Central (56th) Avenue and Montrose Avenue. To go out by street car, take Milwaukee Avenue car or transfer to a Milwaukee Avenue car from any other line and go north to the corner of Montrose Avenue, where our salesmen will meet you with automobiles.

A beautiful Portage Park booklet will be given away today, showing views, etc., in this great district and giving the history of this land, which formerly was occupied by the Pottawatomie Indians.

"MOONEY CASE" STUDENT BACKS UP PROSECUTOR

Takes Exceptions to Seibold Article and the Densmore Report.

Some time ago "The Tribune" printed an extensive article by Louis Seibold entitled "Is Mooney Guilty?" in which the author took an attitude construed by many as favorable to Mooney. John M. Olin of Madison, Wis., a lawyer and a student of the Mooney case, takes exceptions to the Seibold article, and his views upon the noted criminal trial are set forth in the following letter:

Madison, Wis., Nov. 6.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I notice in the issue of your paper of Friday, Oct. 24, on page 15, a statement as to Robert E. Minor's conduct at Coblenz. He is the person who is now conducting a new nation-wide propaganda in the interest of Mooney, under an agreement with the so-called "Workers' International Defenseleague," an anarchist, bolshevik, I. W. W. organization, which was formed originally for the purpose of dfeending Haywood and Moyer, charged with the murder of the governor of Idaho, and has since its organization defended the leading criminals accused of murder through the throwing of bombs, such as the McNamaras, Schmitz, and Caplan, Hillstrom of Utah, Billings and Mooney, etc.

His Reception in Kansas City.

You may have observed that under date of Sept. 29 last, Mr. Minor, as reported in the press, "was prevented (at Kansas City, Kas.,) from delivering a soap box oration, urging the bolshevizing of the United States." "Minor declared that the bolsheviki have the best government on earth. He said the American government is becoming 'the most depraved, degraded, and rotten government on the face of the earth.'"

The people of Kansas City, having heard enough of this kind of bolshevik talk, drove Mr. Minor across the line to Kansas City, Mo., where he held a meeting in a public hall. He announced "that the time to strike is on Oct. 8," and urged every one to strike on that day, disguising the plea as an "economic strike" in protest against the Mooney conviction. He demanded that all people convicted of anarchy, sedition, and sabotage be released. The soviet should seize the government, he said.

Finally a patrolman in the audience leaped up and shouted, "That's enough, stop that . . . either quit or go to jail." Minor quit.

More Successful Here.

Minor seems to have been more successful at Chicago, as reported in the New York Times of Oct. 25: "Only this week in Chicago he (Minor) made before the local federation of labor an impassioned defense of bolshevism and the bolsheviki, denounced the capitalists of the world for uniting to destroy the Russian soviet government, and prophesied the speedy extension of that sort of rule to the rest of Europe, and later to his country. His hearers seemed to like his eloquence; at any rate, they applauded it."

Mr. Minor is the person who has prepared the different pamphlets that have been sent out in the interests of Mooney from time to time since his arrest up to the present time. One of these propaganda pamphlets is entitled, "The Frame-Up System," another "Fickert Has Ravished Justice," another, "Justice Raped in California."

Takes Up Seibold View.

Referring to the article entitled "Is Mooney Guilty?" prepared by Mr. Seibold of the New York World and published recently in your paper, thereby giving it a very wide circulation, Mr. Seibold, judging from his article which I have read and studied carefully, has made very liberal use of the work of Mr. Minor. The article impresses one as another report based almost exclusively upon the pamphlets and propaganda of the defense, without an attempt to apply the test of impartial investigation to the statements.

After having made a careful study of the Mooney case and prepared a pamphlet entitled "Review of the Mooney Case, Its Relation to the Conduct in This Country of Anarchists, I. W. W., and Bolsheviki," it is my candid opinion that the Seibold article is one of the most unfair statements of fact that I know of in any case. Let me call attention to a few facts which illustrate and characterize the whole article:

After showing that Mr. Oxman was a most important witness, Mr. Seibold later reaches the conclusion, based upon the writing of two letters by Mr. Oxman to Mr. Rigall, that he, Oxman, was guilty of perjury and his testimony unworthy of belief. Notwithstanding this wholesale charge, Mr. Seibold never alludes to the fact that Oxman was tried for subornation of perjury, prosecuted by the ablest men in the attorney general's office, Fickert having nothing to do with the prosecution, and was promptly acquitted by the jury, and that immediately thereafter he was rearrested at the instance of a sister of Mooney and that, after numerous postponements, the attorney came into court and confessed that the prosecution had no proof against Oxman of the charge made, and the case was dismissed by the court.

Get Clue to Oxman.

Mr. Fred L. Berry, present acting district attorney of San Francisco county, Cal., a person thoroughly familiar with all the facts of the Mooney trial, after having carefully studied the Seibold article, wrote me under date of Oct. 28 on this matter as follows:

"It is to be remembered that upon receipt of a short note from the station master at Durkee, Ore., that a man there would be an important witness in the Mooney case, we immediately learned from him that the man was Oxman, and learned also that Oxman at the time was on his way to Kansas City. We caused a detective to interview him in Kansas City and told a most interesting story and, if true, was important in the case.

"Oxman at Kansas City, however, bluntly stated that he would not involve himself in the case and could not be brought to California by subpœna to testify in the state court. He stated that he was too busy with his cattle and that he intended going home to Oregon in a few days. Upon receiving this information we sent Lieut. Bunner, a man of unimpeachable character and integrity, from here to interview Oxman at his home near Durkee, Ore., in order to persuade him, Oxman, to willingly present himself as a witness.

Impressed by His Story.

"Lieut. Bunner met Oxman at his ranch near Durkee, and after going over Oxman's story was very much impressed with the value of the evidence and the truth of the story. He urged Oxman to come. Oxman refused to be mixed up with a lot of anarchists, urging that they might kill his cattle and destroy his property. Finally Lieut. Bunner pictured to Oxman the condition of the injured children and their mothers blown up in the explosion, and so worked upon his sympathies that Oxman finally consented to come.

"Upon his consenting to come, we proceeded to carefully inquire about him. Gov. Withycomb of Oregon assured us that Oxman stood very high indeed as a citizen of Oregon. Mr. Lynch, vice president of the First National bank, one of our leading banks here, knew Oxman and assured us that his standing in business life was very high and that they had a great deal of business of considerable magnitude, and that he was a man to be relied upon.

"Mr. Huff of the Western Meat company, a very large concern here, had known Oxman for a long time and assured us that he was considered a man of such high business standing that they frequently had large transactions with him on his word alone, and that he was a man in whom we could repose much confidence."

It should also be here added that W. V. Woehlke, managing editor of the Sunset Magazine, who has written a most careful, exhaustive, and exceedingly fair review of the evidence in the Mooney case, closed his discussion of the trial of Oxman in these words:

"Hence this verdict of not guilty either clears Oxman's record and confirms his testimony, or it brands the attorney general, the judge, and the jury as violent and conscienceless partisans of the prosecution."

It should be stated that the judge here referred to is Judge Dunne, against whose fairness and integrity as a judge there has never been a word of suspicion.

That "Unfavorable Atmosphere."

Another point made by Mr. Seibold is that Mooney was tried in a very "unfavorable atmosphere." On this proposition Mr. Berry in the same letter above referred to says:

"The article refers to the atmosphere existent in the court room in the Mooney case. The defense throughout was most unfair in its tactics and practices. These practices were tolerated by the court. The court room was packed with anarchists and a decent citizen of the community would have difficulty in getting into the court room because the radicals had, under leadership, organized and stood in line for hours before the court room door was opened in order that they might fill every seat available.

"Mr. Bourke Cochran, counsel for the defense, ostentatiously stood up before the trial judge and the trial jury and crossed himself in order to appeal to the Catholic members of the jury. The atmosphere of the court room was tense throughout the trial. Friends of the defendant were ready to applaud and express approval or disapproval as they desired unchecked by the court. You will never know what a valiant battle was put up in that case by Fickert and Cunha under conditions that would overwhelm most men.

Attacks the Prosecutor.

"When the trial was ended and as the court adjourned, a woman anarchist, Belle Lavin, struck Cunha, an assistant district attorney, in the face, as he was about to leave the courtroom. We had expected some display, and, not knowing what form it would take, Mr. Fickert found it necessary to defend himself with his drawn revolver."

It is not surprising, in view of the foregoing, that William B. Wilson, secretary of labor, in an address to the American Federation of Labor, at its annual meeting, at Atlantic City, N. J., June 13, 1919, is reported to have said:

"We looked into the Mooney case, and in doing so, came to this conlusion: That so far as the jury was concerned that passed upon the evidence presented to it, it could have come to no other conclusion, under its sworn duty, than to convict Mooney; that so far as the judge was concerned that tried the case, he tried it with absolute fairness."

Another fact: Mr. Siebold refers to the so-called mediation committee and its work, and in that connection said:

"This committee spent some time in going over the evidence and report prepared by J. B. Densmore, who had been designated by Secretary of Labor Wilson to probe into the matter."

This is a plain statement that the so-called Densmore report was before the mediation committee for its use and aid in reaching its conclusions. Now, the fact is that the report of the mediation committee was signed and forwarded to President Wilson on Jan. 18, 1918, while Densmore did not commence his nefarious work until some six months later, and his report was not prepared until Nov. 1, 1918, and was not published or made public in any way until Nov. 22, 1918, over nine months after the date of the report of the mediation committee.

That Fateful Half Hour.

Much is made by Mr. Seibold of the alibi claimed for Mooney, that at the time of the explosion of the bombs Mooney was a mile and a half from that place. This whole matter was gone into carefully by the Supreme court of California in a careful review and analysis of the evidence and the learned from the detective that Oxman court found that no alibi such as claimed had been established. The same conclusion is reached by Mr. Woehlke from an analysis of the testimony without reference to the decision by the court. After showing that the defense accounted for Mooney up to 1:30 in the afternoon of the day of the explosion and from 1:58 until almost 4, he says:

"As for that fateful half hour preceding 1:58 the defense produced only two witnesses," one, Mrs. Hammerberg, a sister of Mrs. Mooney, and the other, Mrs. Timberlake, a cousin.

As to whether or not this fateful half hour furnished ample time within which Mr. Mooney might traverse the distance in question, it is claimed by the district attorney: "It has been done not only by the defendants but by investigators, who found that they traversed the route, allowed time for the transactions described by the witnesses, and still had many minutes to spare."

Cites Los Angeles Case.

Moreover, it is well to remember that in the Los Angeles Times explosion cases, in the Hillstrom case in Salt Lake, and other cases of like character involving these dynamiters, "It has been the rule" (as stated by Mr. Berry in the letter above referred to) "to establish the alibi of the defendant which has been studiously worked out beforehand. Schmitz and Caplan were in San Francisco a few hours after the actual dynamiting of the Times building. Yet it developed that they had worked it out so that they could appear in San Francisco in such time that it would be doubtful if they could have been in Los Angeles. In the Mooney case, however, one could walk hurriedly from the scene of the explosion to the Eilers building in fifteen minutes easily."

Moreover, the proof was that Mooney and his associates did not walk but traversed this distance in an automobile.

Densmore Report Analyzed.

Mr. Seibold places great reliance upon the Densmore report, which claims to be based upon conversations that took place in District Attorney Fickert's office, and reported through the use of a dictaphone that had been secretly installed under the supervision of Densmore. There is a full statement and analysis of this report in the "Review of the Mooney Case," which I have prepared. At the conclusion of this analysis is found the statement in said report, "not one word is recorded pertaining to the Mooney case, that either the district attorney or any of his associates would object to being stated in open court."

The writer has made a careful study of all the different decisions of the courts dealing with the Mooney and Billings cases, and particularly of the statement of the evidence found in several of these decisions. He has also examined with care the evidence contained in elaborate briefs (especially the written evidence), both for the prosecution and defense, filed with the mediation commission, and of still more extensive briefs submitted to the governor of California on Mooney's application for a pardon, and it is his conclusion from all such examination and study that during a practice of the law for some forty years he never has met with so biased, prejudiced, and scurrilous a piece of work as this Densmore report.

Attack on Fickert.

In the foregoing I have called attention to some of the more glaring defects in the Seibold article. But no one can make, in a newspaper article, even of inordinate length, a satisfactory statement of the "Mooney case." For such a statement I must refer the reader to the very able and fair discussion of the evidence of Mr. Woehlke and to the "Review of the Mooney Case" prepared by myself. The aim of this review is to present in an orderly manner, and without prejudice, the facts of the Mooney case in such a way that the reader can draw his own intelligent conclusion as to whether Mooney was fairly tried and fairly and justly convicted. JOHN M. OLIN.

To judge how truly great is Anna Case, hear her outside of her physical presence. Hear her voice as it is literally RE-CREATED by the New Edison. Only then will you be able to appreciate fully its sublime beauty.

It is actually true that music lovers have heard Case compare her voice with the New Edison's RE-CREATION of that voice, and could distinguish no difference.

How My Husband Made Us Independent

(By the Wife Who Helped.)

Dick and I used to talk about saving some money, and time and again we planned just how we would do it.

He made a good salary—more than we actually needed for our modest living arrangements and for the care of the two children.

We were not in debt, and nearly always had a few dollars to our credit in a joint checking account.

But—we never got started on our saving plan!

With each raise of his salary we solemnly promised to put the difference in a savings account. And each time it seemed that a new demand for money defeated our half-hearted purpose.

Then one day we took stock. We owned a house full of good furniture—and that's all. Not another single asset except a few Liberty Bonds.

"Dick, for the mother and father of the two darlingest children in the wide, wide world, you and I haven't enough sense between us to give even one of us an excuse for living."

And I meant every word of it. Dick agreed, but said that I stated the case too mildly.

The very next night he came home radiant.

"Lucy, I have found the way!" He fairy danced in his excitement.

"What is it, Dick; what have you found?" I asked, a little upset by his sudden enthusiasm.

"Found the way to save money," he declared, as happy as a boy with a new jack knife.

Then he showed me.

First came his bank book, with the usual entry of his weekly salary. Then a stub out of his check book, which read something like this:

"H. O. Stone & Co. $10.00
(1st pmt. on bond)"

That was the first check of many that we drew in favor of H. O. Stone & Co. in payment for 6% First Mortgage Gold Bonds. One every month. In fact, the habit grew on us, and we took mutual delight in planning our budget and seeing to it that we never missed setting aside the trifling sums which have grown so amazingly since we began buying 6% Real Estate Gold Bonds.

Now in a downtown Safe Deposit Vault (which one of us visits at intervals to clip our interest coupons) this is what we have put away:

Two $1,000 Real Estate Bonds, which earn $60 a year each.

One $500 Real Estate Bond, a sinking fund to start Esther's education, earning $30 yearly.

Four $100 Real Estate Bonds for Dick Junior's education, which earn $6 each.

(None of which we have missed out of our ordinary living expenses.)

Happy? Of course we are, but no happier than other people can be who will write to H. O. Stone & Co. and get the simple plan of saving and investing money in Real Estate Gold Bonds—the safest investment in the world.

H. O. Stone & Co. will be delighted to give you the details of how to save money without effort and how to duplicate the experience of this happy family. Call or telephone your address or sign and mail the coupon below. Learn how to invest $10 or more at 6% and also become independent.

COUNCIL ROW ON FIRE ORDINANCE TO OPEN SEASON

Mayor's Democratic Aids Plan War if He Vetoes Manager Draft.

Clashes between Mayor Thompson and certain Democratic aldermen who have been among his strongest supporters are predicted for tomorrow's meeting of the city council, the first of the season.

The prediction followed the announcement that the mayor has decided to veto the so-called Cullerton ordinance, which in its own language, "defines" but in effect would increase materially the duties of the fire department manager of properties.

Refuses to Stay Veto.

The manager of properties is John F. Cullerton, a nephew of Ald. Edward F. Cullerton of the Thirteenth ward, who visited the mayor during the day in an attempt to dissuade him from wielding the veto power. Ald. Cullerton's knowledge of parliamentary rules and his ability as a speaker have served the administration many times on the council floor, but the mayor refused to heed his plea.

Ald. John A. Richert, chairman of the finance committee, announced he would make a motion to pass the ordinance over the mayor's veto. He is said to be ready to make the biggest fight of his sixteen years in the council for the measure.

"Jack" Cullerton's settlement of the department engineers' strike last summer has won favor for him with the enlisted personnel in the department, but a number of battalion chiefs and assistant fire marshals object to any increase in his power, declaring he already is "civilian chief."

Four Bodies Ask Veto.

The trouble over the ordinance has been brewing ever since its passage last July. Four organizations have appealed to the mayor to veto it "because of its hasty preparation" and because "it may lead to undesirable conditions in the department." These organizations are the Association of Commerce, the Chicago board of fire underwriters, the Building Managers' association, and the Illinois Manufacturers' association.

Tomorrow's meeeting will be the first of the council season and some of the largest projects ever brought before the body will come up for action this fall.

Among them are Mayor Thompson's plea for $250,000 for a traction investigation on a promise to restore 5 cent fares through municipal ownership; a comprehensive zoning ordinance; west side street improvements which will cost $28,000,000, and the work of redistricting the city in fifty wards instead of the present thirty-five.

DOOMED TO HANG

Forme: Soldier Sentenced to Die on Gallows on Dec. 12 as Wife Slayer.

ARTHUR E. HAENSEL.

Arthur E. Haensel, 28, a former soldier, was sentenced yesterday morning by Judge Hugo Pam to be hanged on Dec. 12 for shooting and killing his wife, Cecilia, on Feb. 4 in her mother's home at 524 North Ashland avenue.

He also shot his mother-in-law, Mrs. Julia Lenarczyak, but she recovered.

Judge Pam said he would ask the governor to extend the time of the defendant wished, and that he wished to give Haensel every opportunity to make pleas for clemency.

Haensel and his wife were married Sept. 28, 1918, and lived together nine days, when she left him. When she refused to return he killed her.

PULPIT TO SOUND ACTORS' PRAISES FOR PART IN WAR

For the first time in the history of the stage the pulpit is to sound the praises of American actors, Daniel Frohman announced yesterday in giving particulars of the Actors' Fund Memorial day, which is to be held Dec. 5 to honor the services of actors in the war. On that day the churches and the schools of the whole country will celebrate in fitting programs what the stage did during the conflict to maintain the morale of both fighting and home forces.

Every theater will hold a special performance, seats of which will be sold by nonprofessional workers. In Chicago the work of selling tickets will be in the hands of trade committees.

The local committee in charge of the day is composed of Charles W. Folds, Samuel Insull, J. Ogden Armour, J. B. McDougal, J. Hamilton Lewis, Edward F. Dunne, Senator McCormick, Cyrus McCormick, R. T. Crane Jr., E. R. Graham, George M. Reynolds, Julius Rosenwald, A. D. Lasker, A. T. Aldis, and E. F. Carry.

Seeks to Make Judge Fry His Matrimonial Agent

Judge Sheridan E. Fry hasn't enough troubles trying to keep quarreling married folks together. Now a David J. Fry, rural free delivery route No. 4, box 1327, Walla Walla, Wash., wants the judge to find him a nice, healthy wife who would be willing "to do a woman's part"

"Judge Sheridan E. Fry," he writes, "I have taken your name from a Chicago paper. As I am in the market for a wife, I thought perhaps you might hand my name to some eligible woman that she might write me. I understand Chicago has more women than men, and perhaps some of them would like to come to Washington to live. Women between the ages of 35 and 42 years, Americans, healthy, and willing to do a woman's part might answer this if they care to."

SUGAR IS PRIZE OF PATRIOTISM IN 26TH WARD

The Twenty-sixth Ward Patriotic league is offering the grand prize of twenty-five pounds of granulated sugar for the best suggestion that is made by a resident of the ward as to the best means by which the people of the ward can in substantial form show their appreciation of the services rendered by those who went from the ward into active military service.

The sugar is to be provided by fifty members of the Ravenswood Woman's club, each one donating a half a pound. John Hoellen, 1938 Irving Park boulevard, is chairman of the committee in charge of the massmeeting which is to be held at the Lake View High school on Armistice day, Nov. 11, at 8 p. m.

A second prize of ten pounds of brown sugar is offered for the second suggestion.

Teeth Do Not Stain

Look in 10 Days

Note how the teeth glisten. You can see that the film is gone.

Learn the Cause of Decay

Dental science has now traced most tooth troubles to a film. To that slimy film which you can feel.

That is what discolors—not the teeth. It is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

The film is clinging. It enters crevices and stays. No ordinary tooth paste can dissolve it. A soapy tooth paste makes it more viscous.

So, despite your brushing, much film stays. Night and day it does its damage. It is the great tooth wrecker.

Science now has found a way to combat that film. The fact has been proved by many clinical tests. The method is now advocated by leading dentists everywhere.

For daily use it is embodied in a dentifrice called Pepsodent. And we are mailing 10-Day Tubes so that every home may try it.

Do This and See

We urge you for your own sake to write for this 10-Day Tube. See the results for yourself.

Pepsodent is based on pepsin, the digestant of albumin. The film is albuminous matter. The object of Pepsodent is to dissolve it, then to constantly combat it.

Pepsin must be activated, and science has discovered a harmless activating method. The usual method is an acid, harmful to the teeth, so pepsin long seemed impossible. Now everyone may apply it, morning, noon and night. And the evidence is that this invention brings a new dental era.

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the slimy film. See how teeth whiten as the fixed film disappears.

Compare results with the methods you use now. Then judge for yourself what is best. Cut out the coupon now.

You Need—Now—This Perfect, Scientific Refrigerator

You need an Alaska Refrigerator now. You need it to keep your food fresh, clean and wholesome. You need it to prevent food waste and to reduce your ice bills.

You need an Alaska now, in a heated home, just as much as you do in your summer place—for there is no closed season for food spoilage. With present food prices, an Alaska Refrigerator is a necessity to the economy of your kitchen. It pays for itself in the food it saves and the ice it saves.

The Alaska Refrigerator provides perfect, scientific refrigeration. It keeps your food correctly cold. Chill dry air constantly circulates around the food. The low temperature is exactly right for preserving food and liquids best. Yet ice actually lasts longer.

The exclusive system of Alaska cork insulation makes possible this perfect preservation of food. Thick walls of "cubed" cork and "confined" air—the two best insulators known to science—give absolute protection to the food compartments. No cold inside air can escape, no heat can get in. Make sure you secure this Alaska superiority; be not content with a refrigerator less efficient.

Linings are of genuine, seamless porcelain, with rounded corners; or durable, immaculate white-enamel. Always clean—easily washed.

Many convenient sizes and styles. One for every kitchen. Attractive cabinets, beautifully finished. But prices are no higher.

SEITHAMIER GIRL THREATENS LIFE OF ATTENDANT

'Try It and We'll Kill You,' Negresses at Detention Home Warn; Near Riot.

BY LEOLA ALLARD.

Margaret Seithamier, awaiting trial in the Juvenile court on a delinquency charge, after being acquitted of the murder of Attorney Benjamin Burr, threatened the life of Miss Katherin Carter, an attendant at the Juvenile detention home, Friday night, it became known yesterday, and a near riot ensued. Several colored girls with whom Margaret had been fighting during the last two weeks, armed with heavy scrubbing brushes, told her that if she made a move to harm Miss Carter they would beat her to death.

As a result of the behavior of the girl, Miss Mary Collins, superintendent of the institution, says the institution is in a turmoil.

"It's been going from bad to worse," she said, "and I have done my best with Margaret. I have argued with her, pleaded with her, talked kindly to her—in fact, tried every kind way I ever heard of to reach the girl.

Margaret Is Isolated.

"It's of no use. She should be put in a strait-jacket. We have no cells here, and I can't lock her up, and tonight I have done the next best thing —I have cleared the first floor, and I shall keep Margaret on the first floor alone."

Miss Katie Wishler is one of the girls Margaret is said to have attacked, and the girl says she will tell her story to Miss Mary E. Bartelme, assistant judge of the Juvenile court.

Miss Collins had thought to send Margaret to a place where there are cells and where she could be locked up. She took steps toward that end yesterday morning, and Margaret got as far as the Juvenile court. Judge Victor P. Arnold, who is to hear Margaret's case on Tuesday and decide whether she must go to an institution, ordered the girl returned to the Detention home "and kept there."

"She is going to stay there until Tuesday when her case comes up," said the judge.

Male Employé Suspended.

It was further announced by Miss Collins yesterday that Maurice Evans, a guard, had been suspended from the home for writing letters to the inmates.

"The letters contained the guard's personal card," said Miss Collins, "and for the good of the institution, I told him he must go. I imagine he will resign and it will not be necessary to press the charges against him. It was a shame that such a thing had to happen, because he has a wife and two children, but the girls here are difficult enough to handle without that added trial."

EXPERT NAMED TO HUNT DOWN MORONS OF CITY

Poison Candy Is Given Children; Health Chief Acts.

Chicago now has a "mind specialist." Health Commissioner Robertson assigned Dr. Alexander S. Hirschfield, health department neurologist, to the investigation of morons and mental irresponsibles, with a view to their confinement, yesterday.

The commissioner's action followed a report from Dr. James Kilcourse, head of the food inspection bureau, that two children became ill a week ago after eating sugar in which mercuric chloride had been placed by a mentally irresponsible person who has been allowed the freedom of the neighborhood around West Sixty-first place and South Halsted street.

Analysis of the sugar showed mercury in large quantities, Dr. Robertson said, but apparently the children ate little of it, for their illness was only temporary.

"The only way to do a thing is to do it," Dr. Robertson said. "There has been too much talky-talk about rounding up the semi-insane, classifying them, keeping tab on them, and laying their cases before the County court if that is warranted.

"Calls are made on the health department daily to investigate cases of morons, persons subject to fits, women rendered temporarily insane by childbirth, half-wits, who have made threats to poison or are feared for other reasons. Dr. Hirschfield will be given authority to investigate all such complaints to this department."

Dr. Robertson's move was approved by Dr. William J. Hickson, head of the Municipal court psychopathic laboratory.

At present there is no official agency for such investigations, as Dr. Hickson's jurisdiction includes only cases brought before the Municipal court.

TRAIN STOPPAGE AND CONFUSION PERIL GERMANY

Railroad Crisis Only One of Many Breaks in Methodic Life.

BY GEORGE RENWICK.

Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.

[Copyright: 1919.]

BERLIN, Nov. 8.—The entire passenger service throughout Germany has ceased. Not a single passenger train will run for eleven days, and after Nov. 15 there will be only the absolutely necessary trains. In the industrial regions workers' trains will not be taken off, and in and around the cities restricted local service will be kept up, but that is all. For eleven days Germany will be trainless. The few trains which have been running during the last month or two have been dangerously packed.

Yesterday I traveled from Dresden to Berlin. An hour before the train started every compartment was packed full, and when the train set off the corridors were so crowded that it was quite impossible to move. At the Berlin station the crowd of passengers arriving and departing was vast, and at all the other great Berlin terminals the conditions were the same.

Excited People in Motion.

There is something like a general flight from Berlin, but that is balanced by the flight into the city. All those who are under the necessity of traveling within the next fortnight have been rushing to their destinations during the last few days, and they were content to trust to luck to get back again.

To make matters worse, the hotels in all the great cities are overcrowded.

The telegraph service is something like chaotic, and the traveler will generally overtake his urgent wire sent days before.

The parcel post officials are endeavoring in vain to cope with impossible mountains of packets. In some parts of the country the parcel post has been suspended.

Congestion in Stations.

Stations throughout the country are congested with goods and traffic, and to make matter worse the canal service is almost at a standstill. The mails will have to be forwarded by freight trains. In fact, the only travel service of which the country will be able to boast for eleven days will be the Zeppelin service running between the capital and Friedrichshafen.

A sudden and early winter has swept all over Germany from the south. Labor conditions are not improved. The iron and steel workers' strike, which has now lasted some weeks, threatens to become more bitter, and there is talk of a general strike. Berlin's gas and electricity, supported by a very small reserve of coal, are again threatened. The bulk of the people have so little light and heat that they are forced to go to bed when darkness sets in. In the West End flats of the wealthy, people sit at meals wrapped in heavy furs

Another Raise in the Price of Meat?

The meat men are face to face with a serious situation. one that affects your pocketbook, and we want your support.

During the past weeks the meat markets have been able to reduce the price of meats very materially.

The action of the Union leaders, however, is attempting to force the members of our organization to raise the prices of meats again.

The officers of the Butchers' Union are demanding an increase of 33 1-3 per cent in wages. The lowest paid butcher in the employ of any of our members is now receiving thirty dollars ($30) a week, and all of our members have offered an increase of ten per cent for the coming year. Most of the men, we are satisfied, are willing to accept this increase as a fair and just one, but the Union leaders have rejected the same.

Owing to the unheard of action of the Union leaders in calling strikes on Saturday, the busiest day for the retail market, without any previous notice, and their failure to carry out the terms of their agreements, our members have determined that it is impossible further to deal with these Unions and our members will therefore run their own shops free from interference on the part of the Unions hereafter and will deal with their own employees individually.

If any of the employees who are now out on strike desire to return as individuals they will be given their places where their positions have not already been filled.

FARMERS CALL LABOR PARLEY, NOT WITH A. F. L.

Plan Conference Here Ahead of Gompers' Scheme.

The Farmers' National council issued a call yesterday for a conference between farmers and wage earners to be held in Chicago on Nov. 21 and 22.

The purpose of the conference is "to adopt a joint legislative plan of farmers' and labor organizations to be used as a basis for a joint legislative reconstruction program." The National Coöperative association, with headquarters in Chicago, will join the farmers in this conference.

Officials of the American Federation of Labor in Washington expressed surprise at this, saying they could see no reason for such a conference, in view of the call for a conference to be held in Washington, D. C., Dec. 13, by chiefs of labor unions and leaders of farm organizations. They indicated that the federation would refuse official recognition of the Chicago meeting. But the opposition is not all on their side.

Letter from Gompers.

A letter written by Samuel Gompers to Milo D. Campbell, chairman of the National Milk Producers' association of Coldwater, Mich., which extends the invitation for the conference in Washington, was made public yesterday by Mr. Campbell, in a note to John M. Glenn of the Illinois Manufacturers' association, together with his answer to Mr. Gompers.

"The conference will consider the critical situation in the industrial and legislative field and endeavor to agree upon fundamental principles and the adoption of a program which all will accept, in performing their duties as citizens and at the same time maintain the right of free men in order to conserve human interests and welfare," wrote Mr. Gompers.

"Among the subjects to be discussed is not only coöperation between the farmers' organizations and the organizations of workers in industry and transportation but also the coöperation in selling of products produced by the farmers and the purchase of products necessary to farmers."

Campbell Fears Effect.

"I have thought that if it were possible to get space in THE TRIBUNE for my reply to Mr. Gompers," Mr. Campbell wrote Mr. Glenn, "that it might head off some of the farm organizations from accepting his invitation and thus save the farmers from much embarrassment. I am sure the move is to gain support for the elements of labor that are holding up the nation at this time. The farmers should be aroused to the danger of such an alliance under present conditions."

"I fully agree with you," Mr. Campbell wrote Mr. Gompers, "that the farmers have many common interests with the toilers of the cities.

"But events of the last year, and particularly of the last few weeks, have, in my opinion, alienated much of the good will toward organized labor that was previously in the heart of the farmers. For this condition you may not be rsponsible, nor other sane and conservative members of the A. F. of L.

The Farmers' View.

"I think that I can appreciate the difficult position you hold; but at this moment your team is running away. We, as farmers, would be glad to aid in stopping them, but not to ride in the wagon. We do want the right to collectively sell our farm products and the right to buy our necessities collectively—but we do not ask the right to impose our collective agent upon any purchaser, nor the right to tell any purchaser that if he does not want our collected products at the price we name, that he must arbitrate, or that he must not supply his wants from any other source if he would avoid trouble.

"We do not through legal enactment, nor in the court of public sentiment, ask any such un-American advantage. There are some radical differences, I fear, and with roots reaching down too deep for affiliation at this time. 'Law and order' are words not yet erased from the vocabulary of the farmer, and cannot be with ease.

Division in Sentiment.

"He believes in the open shop. He is not opposed to labor unions. He may be divided in sentiment upon the right to quit work, to strike and under what circumstances.

"But the right to contract between men is to him a sacred one.

"With the great coal mining strike now on, with the railroad strike threatened, with labor unions at the throat of the nation under present conditions, with starvation and the tortures of winter cold but a few weeks or days ahead, do not offer pleasant contemplation for the convening of such a conference as the one you suggest.

"Farmers do want some relief, but they will only ask such relief through channels provided by the constitution and laws of the country.

"Now, Mr. Gompers, I may be wrong in writing to you of these things, for you have many times protested that the conditions above were not to your liking. But they exist and are in the saddle in the name of organized labor.

Possible Common Ground.

"If your conference is for the purpose of rededicating both labor and agriculture to the support of the constitution and laws of the country, to the preservation of law and order, to needed changes of law through lawful means, to just maintenance of property rights, to fight bolshevism and radical socialism, to punish violence, to suppress the red flag, to justly benefit the condition of labor and agriculture without injustice to others, then I am with you heart and soul.

"In this letter I have only spoken my own opinions and have not consulted any of my directors or others.

"If they differ with me, they will undoubtedly speak for themselves. But as you asked for an immediate reply, I am giving you my own personal views.

"They may be misinterpreted, for no man can express himself as opposed to radicalism in these days without being classed as an enemy to labor."

Fatherless Children's Benefit Show Called Off

The benefit performance of "Daddies" arranged for the Thursday matinée, Nov. 13, in behalf of the Fatherless Children of France, has been called off. Mrs. Walter S. Brewster, chairman of the Chicago committee of this organization, states that she had gratefully accepted the offers of proceeds of one performance of "Daddies," but when she began to count the receipts from the Vanity fête for the same cause, and found that over $6,000 had been contributed, she felt she could not ask her friends to support another entertainment for the same cause with such a short interval between.

ONLY 2 PAYMENTS BRING YANKS' WAR INSURANCE TO DATE

"TWO monthly payments—just two—will put you all straight and in good standing again, no matter how far behind you may be."

This is the message brought to ex-service men by Harry Burlingame, special agent of the bureau of war risk insurance in Washington, on his arrival here yesterday.

"The government has decided that any man who has not kept up his war risk payments has only to pay two premiums," said Mr. Burlingame, "in order to be fully paid up—one for the month after discharge and one for the current month—provided, of course, the applicant is in good health."

He emphasized his personal belief in the activities of the government's insurance bureau and pointed out that the bureau maintains an office in the Rookery building, to which may be sent requests for information about compensation, disability, allotment, and allowances, treatment of diseases or injuries incurred in the service and other matters important to the former fighting men.

Champion Thief Steals 300 Pound Swimming Pool

The man who stole the hot stove was a mediocre thief. Yesterday morning some one stole a swimming pool.

Guy Vance of 6739 Oxford avenue, Edison Park, who built the tank last summer for his grand-daughter, Margaret Simpson, because she likes to bathe and the lake is so far away, reported the theft to the police.

The tank was 6 feet long, 3 feet wide, and 2 feet deep, was lined with lead, weighed about 300 pounds, and was valued at $200.

Two Held on Charge of Posing as U. S. Agents

Joseph St. Pierre and Joseph Prabec came to Chicago a few weeks ago. Now they're in the county jail awaiting a federal hearing for impersonating revenue agents. They visited many saloons on the north side, it is said, collecting both liquor and money. The liquor was to be used as "samples." Deputy United States Marshal Henry J. Deike unmasked them.

Striking Upholsterer Seized on Threat Charge

Samuel Fisher, 1553 South Ridgeway avenue, a union upholsterer now on strike, was arrested yesterday and taken to Oak Park, where he is being held on the complaint of James Spachman, 1315 Harvey avenue, Berwyn, who charges him with making threats because Spachman refused to strike.

GRADE TEACHERS ASK SALARIES OF $1,200 TO $2,500

A petition containing the names of 6,316 school teachers, who ask an increase in salary, will be presented on Wednesday to the board of education. This was decided yesterday at the weekly meeting of the Chicago Teachers' federation in the Masonic temple.

Members of the salary committee, reporting on the salary schedule for elementary teachers in the 1920 budget, told of the petition. Only three teachers are yet to be heard from.

The petition calls for a ten year schedule with a minimum salary of $1,200 for first year teachers and from that point up to a maximum of $2,500 for teachers who have been in the service ten or more years.

According to Superintendent of Schools Peter A. Mortenson, the present minimum is $1,000 and the maximum $1,800. The salary schedule for the 1920 budget, however, has not yet been agreed upon. At the end of June, he said, there were approximately 8,500 elementary teachers, of whom 40 per cent were members of the federation.

Crippled Soldier Editors Seek Printing Plants

Editing a newspaper in bed is the chore that many a wounded soldier has set himself among the 22,000 wounded who are in the United States army hospitals of the country. It is to purchase printing equipment for the newspapers of those hospitals which are not supplied with it that a drive for funds will be made on Friday and Saturday of this week under the chairmanship of Mrs. George A. McKinlock. Mrs. McKinlock has with her 3,000 club women who will sell a souvenir book of the victory parades following the return of the soldiers from France. The souvenir book will be sold for 25 cents in banks, office buildings, stores, and at street corners in Chicago.

CADILLAC
STANDARD OF THE WORLD

A year ago, immediately after the signing of the armistice, we announced to our friends that we did not believe it would be possible to build in 1919 all the Cadillac cars the world would want.

This prediction has been strikingly fulfilled. Our distributors have been unable to accept many of the orders offered them during the past several months.

Under these circumstances, we feel that we owe it to the public to give the facts concerning the present demand for the Cadillac.

We are convinced that this demand is based not upon current conditions, but upon a widespread and wonderful realization of Cadillac value—intensified by its remarkable record in the service of the American army in France.

We do not believe that the extraordinary eagerness to secure the Cadillac arises from the general shortage of motor cars.

On the contrary, we are convinced that it represents a natural, a normal, and a permanent market which is almost certain to increase as time goes by.

Therefore, it is our sincere conviction that the fullest capacities of the Cadillac plant will continue to be taxed all of next year and indefinitely thereafter.

In the light of these facts, those who wish to own this car—the Cadillac—and no other, any time next year, will almost inevitably be courting disappointment if they delay in placing their orders.

Not in our own behalf, but seriously and earnestly, because we wish to guard our friends against disappointment, we urge them to consult their Cadillac distributor and get from him the facts concerning his earliest ability to book and fill their order.

Surely, the pleasure and the satisfaction that arise from the ownership of a Cadillac are worthy of being safeguarded, even if they involve placing now, an order to be filled months hence.

FOREIGN TRADE ENVOYS TO TALK AT HUGE FEAST

600 Chicago Leaders of Finance and Business Give Banquet.

Six hundred Chicago financiers and industrial leaders are to attend a banquet tomorrow night in the gold room of the Congress hotel in honor of the interallied commercial and financial missions.

The heads of the visiting missions are to be the principal speakers at the banquet. The official greeting will be delivered by Gov. Lowden. Those who will speak are Florimond Hankar of Belgium, Sir Arthur Shirley Benn of Great Britain, Eugene Schneider of France, and Ferdinando Quartieri of Italy. Each will tell the needs of his own country and all will speak in English.

View Parks Today.

The trade envoys arrived early this morning and were taken to the Congress hotel, their headquarters during the three days of their stay. This afternoon the visitors, 100 strong, will view the boulevard system and the parks.

The business part of the visit will begin tomorrow, when they are to be taken to large industrial plants. On Tuesday there will be more trips, and the afternoon will be devoted to conferences with business men.

The Chicago committee which has charge of arrangements for entertaining the visitors is made up of more than one hundred men active in financial and industrial affairs. Samuel Insull is chairman and Charles Piez vice chairman. Brig. Gen. Charles G. Dawes is chairman of the reception committee and E. D. Hulbert is at the head of the finance committee.

Banquet Is Big Event.

As the sessions of the recent foreign trade conference in Atlantic City for the most part were secret, it is expected that interesting announcements will be made at the banquet. Following the eastern conference, the delegates started on a tour of the industrial centers of America and are now working their way back east.

Decisions reached during the visit of the various missions are expected to determine foreign trade relations between the various allied countries for many years to come.

SERGT. FULLER DEFENDS CRONIN TO OWN ILL LUCK

Detective's Tale Prompts Coffin to Demand Data.

Testimony of Detective Sergeant Joseph W. Fuller in defense of Capt. Thomas F. Cronin before the city civil service commission yesterday may prove a boomerang to the detective which will bring him before the trial board on charges of neglect of duty.

After the detective had told for two hours of raids on vice resorts in the Warren avenue district, but had been unable to answer many questions put to him on cross-examination, Capt. Percy B. Coffin, president of the commission, ordered him to furnish a complete list of his arrests, convictions, and the locations of all disorderly houses in the district by 2 o'clock tomorrow.

Coffin Wants to Know.

"Fuller proved ignorant of many matters which should have been familiar to him," said Capt. Coffin. "We want to know more about him. There may be charges against him as well as Capt. Cronin."

Friends of the accused captain, who is charged with failure to suppress vice and gambling, declared that Capt. Coffin's action shows clearly the attitude of the commission toward Capt. Cronin.

"After this display of the commission's feelings toward any one who tries to defend Capt. Cronin there can be no doubt that there is little hope for a vindication of the defendant," said one of them.

Cites 160 Arrests.

Fuller testified that he made 160 arrests in the Warren avenue district in ten months. He said that the raids were made on the explicit orders of Capt. Cronin to clean up the district and keep it clean.

On cross examination it was brought out that most of the 160 arrests were made in ten raids during the ten months between Jan. 1 and Oct. 22. Fuller said the raids were effective. He told of returning to hotel and buffet flats which he had raided and finding them vacant.

Gambling Incident.

Fuller admitted that he knew that Tony Raggio, proprietor of the Leonard Athletic club, 1715 West Madison street, was a gambler. He said he called at the club, found out that Raggio was running a handbook, but failed to arrest him. He declared, however, that as a result of the call Raggio closed up the club.

"What is the reputation of the King Edward hotel?" asked Assistant Corporation Counsel Bugee for the commission.

"It is known as a disorderly house," was the reply. "I made two arrests there."

"Did you search all the rooms when you were sent out to suppress vice?"

"No. I didn't bother the rooms on the third floor because the proprietor told me they were filled with steady roomers."

"Did you take his word for it?"

"Yes."

More Cars Ordered to Sugar Producing States

Release of additional cars to the sugar producing states as a means of relieving the sugar shortage, which became more acute in Chicago yesterday, has been ordered by Hale Holden, a regional director of railroads, according to a statement by Maj. A. A. Sprague, chairman of the Chicago fair price commission.

Without Complications for the Woman Who Drives

THE Holmes Improved Air-Cooled Car offers no complication, worry or necessity for unusual attention, even in winter.

The motor has nothing to freeze. Turning on the ignition switch starts the motor, and the starting system keeps it running under conditions where other motors would stall. The power flexibility of the air-cooled motor eliminates necessity for frequent gear shifting in traffic.

Light, flexible chassis construction and full elliptic springs smooth out the roughest streets and eliminate driving fatigue. Special attention has been paid to easy steering.

That such service may be obtained in a car of comfortable seating space and at a gasoline consumption of 18-20 miles to the gallon, and tire service better than 10,000 miles to the set is proof that—

High operating costs are no longer necessary in cars of proper size, and

The price of economy is no longer cramped discomfort or restricted seating capacity.

HOLE WORLD S GONE "DIPPY" OVER DIAMONDS

rice Jumps from $100 to $600 a Carat; Farmers Big Buyers.

New York, Nov. 8.—[Special.]—The rld has gone mad over precious nes. Diamonds that sold at $100 a rat five years ago are selling now $600.

Gems are moving from market to rket in a volume never before own and the demand is increasing ily. People that never before in ged in such jewelry are buying with eagerness that mounting prices do t even dampen. Countries that were rdest hit by the war are taking their ces in the forefront of the gem buy s. Countries that have been tradi nally indifferent are now enthusias e purchasers.

Authority for these statements was und today among the principal im rters of New York. Demands upon em, it was said, were steadily in easing in insistence, but fulfillment as steadily becoming more difficult. Some extraordinary details were me upon in the course of the in iry.

Workmen and farmers in the United ates are buying large quantities of amonds, and diamonds of the first ality. The increase in this country almost entirely confined to this class. artly this is due to high wages and gh prices for products during the ar; partly it is due to a desire for ery that still has an absolute invest nt value.

Until six months ago the United ates was buying more precious stones an all the rest of the world put together. It was taking, to be specific, 65 per cent of the cut and uncut gems that came into the market. Now the tide has set in against this country, and while the percentage is still more than half, it is failing, and another year may see the situation entirely changed.

Six nations chiefly are responsible for this change—Germany, Russia, Turkey, India, China, and Japan.

Germany, Russia, and Turkey are buying because currency in those lands has depreciated so heavily and because securities have suffered in keeping with currency.

'UNCLE JOE' FOR RETURN OF DAYS OF REAL COURTIN'

Would Bring Back Safe and Sane Marriage Ideas, He Says.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 8.—[Special.]—Here's a classic from ex-Speaker Cannon, who always gets an audience whether in the cloakroom, on the floor, or at his favorite "hangout," the National Press club. Mr. Cannon was discussing modern marriage the other day. He said:

"The young fellow of today doesn't know what courting means. In the old days a young man would walk ten miles through the rain or snow, freeze his ears and fingers, and face the danger of wildcats to see his girl. And when he did see her it was in the general living room, with the rest of the family present. The man who courted in those conditions knew what courting was. And I may say that such conditions were the rule and not the exception.

Long Tramps Through Snow.

"The young fellows would start out Sunday afternoon. It might be too cold or the snow too deep to take a horse, but in that case they went on foot. They faced hardships to see their sweethearts, as did the knights of old to rescue fair maids from castle holds. And when such a youngster won his girl he kept her, too.

"Divorce was not the popular pastime then that it is now. These couples stuck through thick and thin, obeying the scriptural injunction that what God hath joined together no man shall put asunder.

"There were no marriages of convenience and mighty few hasty marriages in those days. The young folks knew each other before they were wedded, and the young man knew his bride's people and all about them. There was less chance for mistake.

"All the courting was on Sunday night, and it was a ceremony religiously observed. The swain remained at his sweetheart's home until after midnight, even though the rest of the family sat up with him. When he went home through the storm or in the bright starlight he walked the earth as a conqueror, for he had been in the presence that to him represented the real poem of life.

Then They Will "Stick."

"He had been courting, and that is all we need in these days to bring back safe and sane ideas of marriage—courting—courting in the true sense of the word—the man seeking, if not serving like Jacob, seven years for the object of his affections. Then he will stick to her and she to him through life.

"Some of the old fashions have never been improved upon, and one of them is the old fashioned courting."

Gov. Frank O. Lowden and Mrs. Lowden, and their secretaries, arrived from Springfield yesterday morning and are at the Blackstone hotel for the week end.

HEARS ROBBERS PLOT HIS DEATH; SAVED BY RUSE

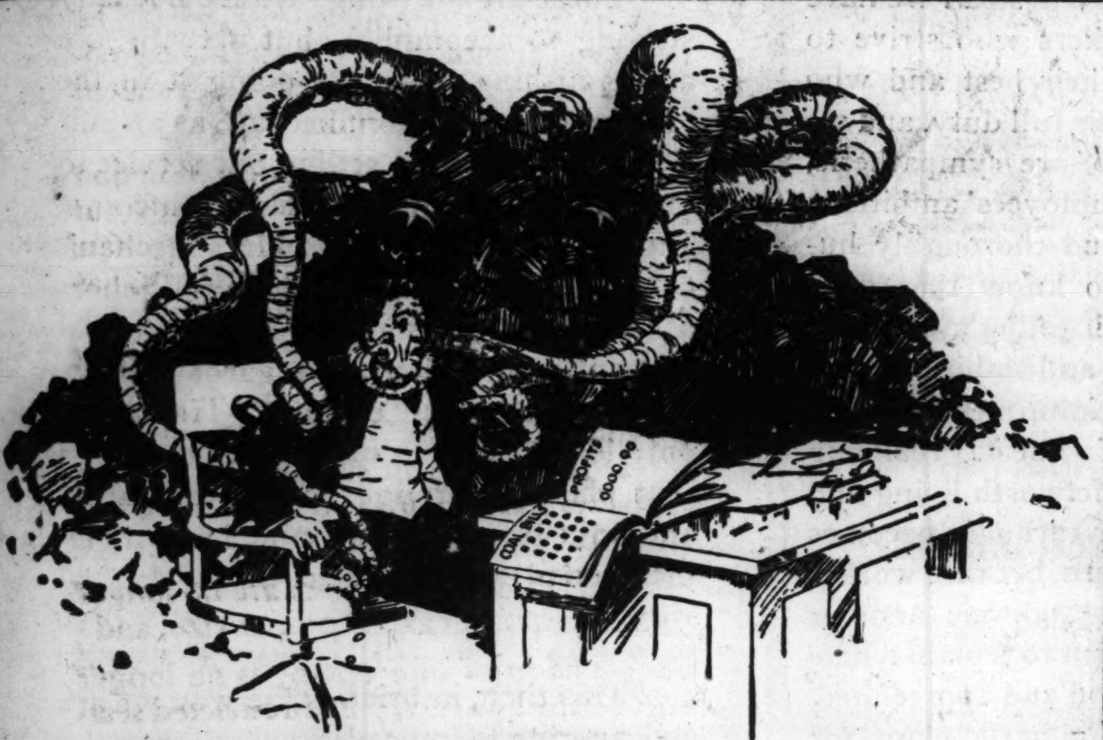
Michael Miller of Canton, O., had he unusual experience of hearing plans for his own murder discussed by four armed robbers while he played "possum" to avoid further beating.

Miller, a railroad worker, had been lured to Fair Oaks avenue and Division street, Oak Park, thrown from an automobile, and beaten. He pretended he was dead and after he had been robbed of his two suitcases and $200 he heard the robbers talk over the advisability of stabbing him to make sure he never would appear against them.

"The man's dead—what's the use?" said one of the robbers. They left the "body" in the road and drove away.

As soon as the car was out of sight Miller hurried to the Oak Park police station, swore out a warrant for the arrest of Joseph Minneci, 2312 West Ohio street. That was Thursday. Minneci was taken into custody Friday night. He refused to name his companions.

Miller and Minneci, whom he met at a West Madison street hotel, had promised to get him free transportation back to Canton and had called for him in the automobile.



Are Your Coal Bills Stealing All Your Building Profits?

This poor building owner has just figured his profits and they look like this—00000000. He thought his building was going to make money for him and now he finds that his coal bills are stealing all the profits from his pocket.

He didn't "Look in the basement first" and so he is stung with a finicky boiler that demands "Bellins Baby Food"—and there isn't any more.

He has to beg to get any coal of any kind. He has to take the kind of coal he can get. But his boiler was never made to burn that kind of coal and so he is in a rotten fix.

There is one, and just one, safe and sane solution—and it isn't the coal; never has been; and never will be. A Kewanee Smokeless Boiler burns any coal that was ever dug out of the ground anywhere. And it burns it so completely that none of it is wasted up the stack as smoke. The real solution of your coal question and the real insurance of building profits is a Kewanee Smokeless Boiler.

There are thousands of building owners in every part of the country who are making their buildings pay them money every day. But they are the wise owners who "Looked in the basement first" and are heating their buildings with boilers that burn any kind of coal.

Successful Farming Secrets Disclosed

How the World's Greatest Farming Authorities Got their Sensational Results—Told in Simple Language So Any One Can Understand and Apply Their Plans and Methods.

If everybody did things in the same way year after year there would be no progress except through accident.

Fortunately for the world there are people who try new things, and even if only one new thing out of a thousand succeeds we have progressed to an extent which more than justifies the 999 experiments that failed.

This is particularly true on matters of farming. Take corn production, for example. There are 3,556 hills of corn on an acre planted 3 feet 6 inches apart. If you could increase your corn production by an average of two ears to every hill you would get 90 bushels of corn per acre. Many men are doing it by following the methods used by the country's leading farming authorities described in FARM KNOWLEDGE.

In Indiana there is a farm where the land was so poor that much of it had been abandoned. Clover had not been grown on it for twenty-five years; wheat never yielded more than 12 bushels per acre and sometimes as little as 4 bushels per acre. All other crops were just about as bad in proportion. Along came a man who decided to farm with his brains as well as with his hands, and in a remarkably short time increased his yield of wheat to 47 bushels per acre, getting 83 bushels of oats per acre, as high as 250 bushels of potatoes per acre, and there are nearly 300 acres of alfalfa on land that formerly only grew sheep sorrel.

This is but one example of what can be done and is being done throughout the country by farmers who are taking advantage of what specialists have learned about various farming operations.

A $50,000 Work.

At an expense of over $50,000 for the editorial material alone, the successful farming experiences of recognized authorities in all parts of the country have been collected and placed within the covers of FARM KNOWLEDGE—a complete manual of successful farming, written by recognized authorities in all parts of the country; based on sound principles and the actual experiences of real farmers. Never before has a work of this scope and value been produced. There is nothing else like it. It is by far the most complete and the most practical work ever prepared for the farmer. It helps to eliminate the costly personal experimenting. It is a clearing house of answers to the problems you must solve every year.

Just think of having at your finger tips the help of Hugh G. Van Pelt, one of the foremost authorities in the country on dairy matters; just think of having the help of Prof. F. C. Minkler on hog raising—

100 Experts on Your Farm.

—Minkler, who is Live Stock Commissioner of New Jersey; think of having the advice of Prof. C. B. Hutchison on corn, the man who organized the Corn Growers' Association of Missouri and was head of the department of farm crops at Missouri College of Agriculture; think of having, in your own home, the boiled-down knowledge of men like Dr. A. S. Alexander on the diseases of live stock; of Prof. Eckles on the handling of milk, of Alva Agee on soil fertilization, of J. K. Wright on the silo, of J. C. Hackelman on small grains, of Raymond Olney on the farm tractor, of H. H. Neimann on barn construction, of over a hundred others of equal prominence on subjects they have specialized on.

Free Booklet Explains All.

Farm Knowledge contains over 2,000 pages in all. 128 full page photographic reproductions, frontispiece in each volume in colors and over 3,000 other illustrations scattered throughout.

We want every farmer who is interested in increasing his production and profits to send for a copy of this free booklet called "The Secret of Success in Farming," illustrating and describing Farm Knowledge. Read what Farm Knowledge must mean to you. Read about the new farming secrets which have revolutionized old results, doubling and trebling profits. Don't miss this valuable booklet. Mail coupon or write a postal card or letter. Sears, Roebuck & Co., Dept. 666-A, Chicago, Ill.

Above all, FARM KNOWLEDGE is practical. It is not a collection of theories; it is not an idle treatise on "why you should farm better," it is not technical; it is not made up of extracts; it does not present plans and methods which are out of reach of the average farmers. Instead FARM KNOWLEDGE contains the results of actual experience in improving methods and increasing profits; it was specially written in interesting and easy to understand language.

only a water laxative really flushes

WATER is the greatest cleansing agent known to man.

"Dry cleaning" may be effective for suits and dresses, but it is insufficient to rid your intestinal tract of accumulated disease-breeding waste matter.

It requires a water laxative to flush your system completely.

Pills, powders, tablets, and other "dry" cathartics cannot give you the benefit of the internal bath that the colon needs at regular intervals to rid itself of poisonous accumulations.

If you are constipated you need a water laxative—an effective flushing agent like Pluto Water, which is America's physic.

Pluto Water gently, pleasantly, but positively and completely flushes the small and large bowel and restores your entire eliminative system to its normal activity.

STREET FLUSHER

Municipal health authorities have been quick to recognize the undoubted sanitary advantages of flushing as compared with dry sweeping.

Pluto Water is bottled at French Lick Springs, Indiana, and is a recognized curative agent for kidney, liver and stomach troubles, rheumatism and nervous disorders.

Your physician prescribes it.

LANDIS QUIZZES PANDOLFO UPON JURY SHADOWING

Denies Defense's Motion for Instruction to Acquit.

Judge Landis, who is hearing evidence against the officers of the Pan Motor company, who are accused of using the mails to defraud, yesterday denied motions requesting that he order the jury to return verdicts of not guilty. The judge questioned S. C. Pandolfo, head of the company, concerning the hiring of the Jones, Ind., detective agency to shadow members of the jury.

"Tell me particularly what this agency engaged to do in connection with the jury," said the judge.

Pandolfo hesitated.

Advises Lawyers to Use Care.

Addressing the lawyers for the defendants, the judge then said:

"After fifteen years of experience in this court, I would advise you to look up the character of this man in the defense of your own good names. I don't know where you got your schooling, but for your own protection, you should busy yourselves about discovering what kind of an environment you are working in."

Then addressing Pandolfo he asked:

"Why was a woman employed in this case?"

"I didn't know a woman was working in the case," said Pandolfo. The question concerned the activities of a female detective who had admitted following the jurors.

"Did the Jones company's agents visit the offices and homes of the jurors?"

"I can make an explanatioon of all that," said Pandolfo, but the judge interrupted.

Motions Refused.

"I've become impatient," he said. He then denied the motion of Fletcher Dobyns, attorney for Norman A. Street and George Heidman, directors of the company, in which the attorney asked a verdict of not guilty.

The judge also recalled to Mr. Dobyns' mind his prosecution of John R. Walsh, who was charged with offenses similar to those involved in the present case, when the attorney was assistant district attorney. Judge Landis reminded him that Walsh was convicted.

BONDS "TOURED" U. S. IN CLOTHING UNION AID, CLAIM

Uncover $75,000 in "Floating" Liberty Securities.

Seventy-five thousand dollars' worth of Liberty bonds have been used as floating collateral by officials of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, according to a discovery yesterday by Assistant State's Attorney Nicholas Michels.

Whenever union tailors got into trouble in promoting or maintaining strikes, Prosecutor Michels said, the Liberty bonds were rushed to the point and used as security for bail.

Made Several Trips, Claim.

The collateral already has made several round trips between Chicago, Cincinnati, and New York, the assistant state's attorney alleges.

Copies of letters written by Cincinnati lawyers who defended clothing workers in that city charged with throwing pepper will be sent to Judge Robert Buckwalter in order that an investigation similar to that in Chicago may be started in the Ohio city.

Mintz Alleges New Threat.

Louis Mintz, 15 North Jefferson street, who charges that he was put out of business by the union officials, told Assistant State's Attorney Michels that a threat had been made to kidnap his son unless he kept away from the Criminal Court building.

Mr. Michels made public a letter written by a manufacturer who did not sign his name saying that Cæsar and Napoleon never ruled with such an iron hand as the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America.

"Millions of people must suffer because of the unreasonable demands of this outfit," the writer said.

Playing with Matches Costs Baby Girl's Life

Hossana Dilman, 3 years old, 6565 Yale avenue, died in Englewood hospital yesterday of burns received when her clothing ignited while she was playing with matches. She had been left in care of the janitor, George Koenig, and his wife, while her parents went shopping. Mr. Koenig beat the flames with his hands and was burned in an attempt to save the child's life.

CRUSHED IN ELEVATOR, DIES.

A verdict of accidental death was returned by a coroner's jury yesterday in the case of James J. Lee, 2913 North Clark street, an operator injured in an elevator at the John M. Smyth company store, 703 West Madison street. Another worker testified Lee stumbled, accidentally pulled the cord which operates the elevator, and was crushed.

What Is Sherman Service?

During the month of October an official form known as an "Assimilation Test" was sent to all employees of Sherman Service. Its purpose was to determine to what extent each individual in the organization had mastered our principles, objects and methods.

The replies, of which the following from an employee (not an official) is quite representative, prove the clear conception held regarding Sherman Service:

"Chicago, Illinois.
"October 28, 1919.

"What we are striving to accomplish is a decided increase and betterment in production. To accomplish this, men and women—employee and employer alike—must be taught to think right, and this is the real basis of our work.

"They must be taught the underlying principles of industry, the necessity of capital and the necessity of labor; they must be taught to know that they, as individuals, are a link in the great chain of industry, and that no chain can be stronger than its weakest link; they must be taught that they have a duty to perform, not alone toward themselves but toward the community, the state, the nation, and toward all humanity; they must be taught to abandon selfish interests and broaden their vision, coming to a realization of the fact that every other human being has certain inalienable rights—be he employee or employer—and that the equality of man is the coming creed, and that justice is the only sound foundation upon which civilization can be built if it is to endure; they must be taught to reason for themselves and to base their reasoning upon the idea of a square deal to everybody, and not mistake for logical reasoning the fanatical ravings of radical agitators and soap-box orators who have not lived in this country long enough to appreciate its opportunities, or else are too lazy themselves to work and take this method of gaining a livelihood at the expense of someone else's labor.

"Love of home and family; love of country; a desire to excel in their particular work—all of these things we must teach.

"No body of men will act contrary to their own interests when they know what their interests are. And we are endeavoring to teach both employee and employer what their interests are, and that in reality they are identical, and that the welfare of the one means the welfare of the other, and that there can be no dividing line drawn between them, but that they must work together in harmony and true co-operation. Profits in money, progress and happiness are the goal of business and industry.

"If the radicals had their way and legislated capital and monetary profits out of existence what we now know as modern business would completely disappear, and with that would go progress and happiness.

"We are endeavoring to bring capital and labor together, so that each may enjoy the fruits of the other, and when we accomplish this by teaching men and women to think right we have dealt a deathblow to labor difficulties and misunderstandings, and in their stead we have earnest, efficient workers who strive to give their employer their best and who are happy in doing their full duty, and we have employers who are sympathetic, considerate of their employees' ambitions and honest desires, and thoroughly human. Each learns to know that deep down in the heart of the other are hidden away certain longings and ambitions, and that the yearning for fulfillment of these desires and the hope of some day realizing them is what makes life worth living and labor possible. Labor turnover becomes a matter of little concern, because worker and employer understand one another and the worker is content to remain where he feels he is understood and appreciated. Everyone can take pride in the plant, for each knows he is doing his share to make it a real, throbbing factor in the great industrial world, and he knows that there is no room there for a laggard, the Bolshevik, or the fellow who tries by any means to sow the seeds of discontent or to hamper production, or to lower its quality. The employees are as much opposed to his presence as is the employer.

"Our work is efficiency work—not the stop-watch kind which deals merely with the cutting down of time on the various operations in a plant, but efficiency work in its broadest sense; efficiency work which itself is efficient, and really accomplishes what it sets out to accomplish and actually does increase production and at the same time betters its quality. It is a constructive work from start to finish.

"We deal with the human rather than with the mechanical element in a plant, and we deal with it constructively—determining the spots which are not functioning properly; analyzing the weaknesses; learning just what is wrong and what the cause is which makes the wrong; and then we study out a specific remedy and apply that remedy. The result is that when that portion of the human element in a plant which was wrong has been made right, and every part and parcel of that element in the plant is functioning properly, there will be the very maximum of production and a high quality of production. It is not possible to think of a work more beneficial to industry, to both employer and employee.

"These are the things we are not only striving to accomplish, but actually are accomplishing. We are doing it in the interest of production, because as an efficiency organization selling our service to our clients it is our business to increase and improve production. Mere mechanical perfection in a plant alone falls short of the true results sought. The most vital element in any plant, as regards production, is the human element. Hence the only logical way to increase efficiency in that plant is through proper regulation and adjustment of that same human element—and we have chosen the logical way.

"This then, in brief, is the way we are endeavoring to improve production in the plants of our clients. We do it through a force of well qualified, well trained men and women who are loyal to our organization—loyal because they themselves get a square deal—and who have the welfare of humanity at heart, and who know that our Service brings a lasting benefit to all who come under its influence.

"No business in the world is founded on stronger, saner principles. No business in the world is giving more in return for money received for its service. And who can say that the world is not being made better by its work, for as conditions are improved in a single plant the community in which that plant is located is improved, and the community improved means an improved state and nation.

"And so is it so far fetched to say that we really are striving to better conditions throughout the world and make it a better place in which to live and labor, bringing contentment and happiness and hastening the day when all differences between labor and capital shall have been adjusted and a square deal shall be guaranteed to all, while justice and not might shall rule supreme?"

This and other advertisements have been published at tremendous expense in order that our principles, our aims and desired accomplishments may be more clearly conceived, and so that our position will be correctly understood.

We have an abundance of further constructive material from which we could write full pages daily for many months—but need we say more?

STORK AND DEATH SIDE BY SIDE ON SIBERIA TRAINS

Child Life Pathetic Part of Migratory Life of War Exiles.

BY FREDERICK A. SMITH.
[Foreign Correspondence of The Chicago Tribune.]

FOURTH ARTICLE.

PEKING, Oct. 4.—Eighteen to twenty trains of refugees from the near front moved eastward daily. In some freight cars several families were huddled. In one a piano was making sweet music.

In one death, stealing a ride, had taken hence the tired spirit of a child who had spent most of her life fleeing to and fro in Russia with the advance and recession of Lenine's line of liberty.

In yet another car was a wall so very tiny that you knew the stork had overtaken the train.

It is perhaps a trite reflection that baby's cry, as well as baby's laugh, is the some world over. You may say what you like about the sad mess, the Russian older folks are making of their wonderfully resourceful native land, but the youngsters will always bob up to appeal to your sympathy.

Don't Know Why They Travel About.

You think of the happy kids in your home country and you wish you could take thousands of these refugee children on ships and give them their chance. They do not understand what it is that compels them to travel about, living in box cars and caves and under tarpaulined wagon tops. They only know that for some reason Russian keeps on interminably fighting Russian and they must move on interminably.

I gave a package of chocolate to a little raggedy girl whom I found cuddling a raggedy doll as she sat on a pile of boards, safely near the side door of her home freight car. She gave me a grateful smile and arose to make me a curtesy, as most little Russian girls seem to know very well how to do. Then she put her warm little hand on mine and said something that had a suggestion of a tear in it. A tear and a tremor of pleasure, too.

Courteous, Grateful, Raggedy.

Little waif of the railroad, you ran away from me to share your rare fortune with other raggedy little ones, so many of them that I feared you would have no sweets left for yourself except the loveliness of your own heart.

Little girl, you have several cardinal virtues. You are courteous, you are grateful for kindnesses. You are generous. You are a pretty little raggedy in the bargain.

Now tell me, who sent you and your doll traveling homeless across a continent? Who will be to the judgment if the cruel Siberian winter sends you on a still longer journey? Who will make amends if the dreaded typhus comes to you from one of those death trains that rumble up to drown the lullaby you sing to the precious waif of a doll?

I will never forget my last look of you. I will never forget that you are a sweet type of unoffending thousands of other tiny mothers. And I will never forget you, Mr. Lenine, sinister genius of a world where children may not stay.

Red Cross Doing Wonders.

One day in Chicago a woman came to THE TRIBUNE office and gave a 50 cent piece to the city editor, asking that it be sent to the Red Cross fund. I asked her to whom the contribution should be credited, and she said, "O, just say it's from a working woman."

I remember how faded her dress was and how evident her sacrifice had been. I wondered how and when her reward would come.

Would it be worth while to you, my friend of the true heart, to know that hundreds of waifs like my freight car girl are being cared for and mothered and saved from death, or something worse, by the American Red Cross people here in Siberia? There are men giving the last ounce of their strength to the task. There are women, young and old, who wear the Red Cross blue into the places of danger and despair.

Two of these women have died of typhus. Several of the Red Cross men have survived the hateful fever and are again giving all they have—just as you did.

One Safe Way to Aid Russia.

No one may say surely where our American responsibility begins or ends in Russia, but, putting aside political considerations, we are safe in reaching a hand across the Pacific to these pitiable by-products of a nation gone stark. Russia m y grievously misunderstand our efforts in her behalf, but her boys and girls will understand.

In Harbin I met Edith E. Judge, an English woman who has joined the American Red Cross. She was inconsolable because the bolshevik advance had driven her unit away from Omsk, where she had been a ministering angel to sixty orphan boys and girls. One girl she had found in a cave weeping at the side of her mother and father, who were dead of typhus.

Pleads to Go Back to Danger.

This trained nurse wanted to go back to her children, regardless of danger. When forbidden she would have left her unit and have gone back, paying her own expenses. Still prevented, she told me the other day that she would have her children again some day, she felt sure.

What a world of contradictions in which a mob with an ideal will not only scatter children over thousands of miles but will destroy tracks and bridges ahead of these freight car refugees to make even of their flight a peril. And when a woman will plead with wet eyes to undertake all those perils to get back to "my children in Omsk."

Girl Keeps Date with Man Only to Have Him Arrested

Joseph Drobin, 2556 West Division street, was to meet Miss Anna Gutterman, 2635 Division street, last night at Clinton and Monroe streets and take her to a theater. The young woman met him, but had with her two special agents of the American Express company, by which concern both she and Drobin are employed. They arrested Drobin on a charge of disorderly conduct. Drobin, Miss Gutterman said, had threatened to take her life if she did not meet him. Drobin said he was practically engaged to Miss Gutterman.

ROBERT E. HOGAN, JUVENILE COURT VETERAN, TO QUIT

Robert E. Hogan, for six years assistant state's attorney, assigned to the Juvenile court, is severing his connection with that office on Dec. 1. Announcement was made yesterday that Mr. Hogan would start in private law practice at 1040 National Life building.

There is no one in the Juvenile court who takes a keener interest in the welfare of the young people brought there. He will not admit it, but many times he has, from his own pocket, paid the tuition of girls that they might stay in school and be supervised until they were old enough to look after themselves, the girls having no parents, and no excuse for being committed to a corrective institution.

One girl in particular came to his attention through her young brother. Both parents were dead, and the girl, who was 17, came to Mr. Hogan to ask advice about the little fellow. He saw that the girl herself needed help, and he has aided her for several years.

Before going to the Juvenile court Mr. Hogan was a member of the firm of Hoyne, O'Connor & Irwin in the Stock Exchange building.

A Letter to the People of Chicago About the Red Cross

By MARQUIS EATON, President Chicago Chapter

Less than four years ago the total membership of the American Red Cross was but 30,000, as against Japan with its two million and France and Britain a million each. Today we have in Chicago alone more than four hundred thousand members, while the total for the National Organization is close to twenty millions.

As a citizen of Chicago I take real pride in the fact that we had the foresight to set the pace, and that when war did come it found us the best prepared Red Cross unit in the country for the unprecedented responsibility which a state of war imposed.

Twice during the war period it became necessary to appeal for war funds of staggering proportions. The appeal was met through your reliance upon a remarkable committee of business men headed by Frank O. Wetmore, and we of the Chicago Chapter became trustees for nearly twelve million dollars. The bulk of this fund, the proceeds of two previous campaigns, was forwarded to Washington and 25 per cent was retained for local administration. Supplies of a value of upwards of four million dollars were made by patriotic women of Chicago from raw materials furnished by the Chapter and delivered to the men in cantonments, at embarkation points and in the fighting lines.

The million dollar War Fund we now seek to raise in Chicago is to be divided $600,000 to National Headquarters and $400,000 to Chicago Chapter treasury. The first item represents our proportion of the fifteen million dollars which is the objective in the country-wide drive.

To enumerate only a few outstanding items in the National budget:

(a) The demobilization of the Red Cross forces overseas began with the armistice. It was determined as a matter of policy that there should be no new undertakings and that the work in hand should be closed as promptly as was consistent with orderly and economical administration. You will bear in mind, however, that American soldiers are still in service overseas, and that as to them Red Cross service must be available until the last man embarks for home.

(b) By Congressional action the Secretary of War has turned over to the American Red Cross highly specialized supplies of the nature of medicines and surgical equipment stated to be in excess of the requirements of our army and navy to the value of something like thirty-five million dollars. These are to be distributed through the Red Cross abroad, where they will accomplish most in the alleviation of human suffering and in advancing the good will of our country among the nations.

(c) For some time to come the Military Hospitals in this country will be filled with wounded men, and these men will continue to receive the Red Cross service, which is provided wherever men in uniform are in special need.

(d) The disaster relief function of the National Organization was shown in connection with the recent floods at Galveston. Within eight hours after the first reports of casualties three trainloads of Red Cross supplies were on their way. In Chicago Mayor Thompson was requested to make a general appeal for contributions, but he wisely refrained after being assured that the Red Cross had taken the situation immediately in hand.

I would like now to answer specifically, and with a due sense of the responsibility, the question of why the Chicago Chapter is today spending over $60,000 per month and has established a budget of $700,000 for the year 1919 I have concluded that this question can best be answered by giving the results of a typical week of service. This week—June 20 to 26, 1919—is not unusual; it merely happened to be the period selected for a detailed tabulation of experiences. In this week the Chapter was called upon for 17,308 instances of service. Here is an analysis.

Type of service.	Instances of service.
I. Financial aid	1,029
II. Material relief not included in above	541
III. Service involving advice, inquiry, correspondence, filling out forms, making affidavits, etc.	15,738
Total	17,308

Now let us examine a specific case in each of the twenty-one different types of service involved in classification III.:

1. INSURANCE—

Years ago Mrs. O'Mara took a baby boy from an orphan asylum in New York. The child grew to manhood without knowing that Mrs. O'Mara was his foster-mother. He enlisted and after some months became insane, was sent home and confined in a state asylum. At this point Mrs. O'Mara came to the Red Cross for assistance in securing her foster-son's insurance. Our legal department examined the papers she had received many years before from the orphan asylum, found them genuine and had her declared by the courts guardian of her son's person and conservatrix of his estate. She therefore became eligible to his insurance. (There were 1,324 such instances handled in the week of June 20-26, 1919.)

2. BONUS—

A discharged soldier went to the Red Cross in Los Angeles, asking to have his bonus sent to that address. Before it arrived he came to Chicago to seek employment. Upon receipt of the bonus Los Angeles wired Chicago to search for the soldier. After following many clews we were able to turn the money over to him at a time when it was most acceptable, as he was on the point of refusing a good position in Milwaukee because he had no funds to finance him until his first pay day. (There were 271 such instances handled in the week in question.)

3. BONDS—

Lieut. West died in San Francisco, estranged from his family and in debt to his brother here in Chicago for his uniform. Among his effects were two Liberty bonds. The Chicago Chapter was asked to find the officer's brother and learn the amount of his debt. Upon our verification of the loan the bonds were sent here and the estate closed. (There were 318 instances of similar nature.)

4. COMPENSATION—

Stanislaw K., a recent Polish immigrant, was discharged from the American army in November, 1918, because of a serious heart condition. He returned to Chicago and dropped from sight. Later the government requested the Red Cross to search for the soldier, believing that he needed medical attention and was eligible to compensation and re-education. The search covered a wide area and included previous addresses, places of employment, former friends and Polish saloons. He was finally found. (There were 2,013 instances of compensation help.)

5. EMPLOYMENT AND VOCATIONAL ADVICE—

While Private S. was in service he married, and before his return his wife gave birth to a child. He came home feeling that he could never realize his ambition to become a master mechanic, as he had now neither the time nor money to continue his studies. He even contemplated divorce, thinking thus to free himself from his family responsibility. Through the efforts of the Red Cross the young man was enabled to continue his training and still has his family with him. (1,468 instances handled in this week.)

6. TRANSPORTATION—

Vernon H. was discharged from Camp Custer. The following day he was brought to the Red Cross office in Chicago by a motor corps driver who had found him unconscious in the railway station. His discharge papers showed he had been released from the service for disability, due to a constitutional psychopathic state. We assisted him to a hospital, placed his money, amounting to $250.00, in safe keeping, and when he was able to travel sent him to his home Chapter. (278 instances under this heading.)

7. LOCATION OF RELATIVES—

Lewis W., an Englishman, enlisted in June, 1918, and was killed in action in September of the same year, leaving a wife and two children—Andrew not quite 3 years old, and Baby Olive, 13 months. The Red Cross was loaning money to the family pending the arrival of the allotment and allowance check. In January, 1919, the children developed diphtheria, and following their discharge from the hospital the mother and both children contracted pneumonia. The mother and baby girl both died, leaving 3-year-old Andrew alone. After a protracted search the Red Cross was able to find the aged grandparents in England. While this search was going on it was discovered that Andrew had a tubercular condition of the hip. He is now in the Children's Memorial Hospital. A guardian had been appointed for him, who received the money from his father's insurance and who will restore him to his grandparents in England as soon as his condition will permit him to travel. (522 instances handled.)

8. GENERAL LEGAL PROBLEMS—

Before his enlistment Roy B. had conducted a storage establishment for pleasure craft. He entered service allowing the owners to leave their boats in his building. Upon his return several of the men refused to pay for the storage privilege they had enjoyed for many months. The soldier applied to the Red Cross for assistance and through our intervention the delinquent owners paid the proper sums. (339 instances of legal help.)

9. HEALTH PROBLEMS.

Roy M., a colored boy, was discharged from the service mentally and physically sound. He returned home and showed signs of mental aberration within a few months. He lived over again his life in the trenches, awoke the family at night leading an attack, screamed in horror at phantom sights and suffered mental torture. The Red Cross persuaded the soldier to go as a voluntary patient to the Psychopathic Hospital, where he has been successfully treated. He is now receiving compensation and will be released as cured in the near future. (There were 1,490 instances of health help.)

10. ADJUSTMENT OF PERSONAL AFFAIRS—

When Private Olsen went overseas he left his wife with her sister. The young couple had nothing saved, so when Mrs. Olsen became too ill to work, and when her allotment and allowance failed to arrive she was taken to the County Hospital, where she died of tuberculosis. The sister made a desperate effort to borrow enough money to cover the cost of the funeral, but failed. She asked the County Hospital to bury her sister. Word of this reached the soldier, who appealed to his Red Cross representative in camp for help. A cable was sent to the Home Service Section in Chicago. A visit to the County Hospital revealed the fact that the young woman's body had been given to a medical school for the purpose of dissection, but had not yet been dismembered. After Mrs. Olsen had been properly buried by the Red Cross a cablegram was sent to the soldier assuring him that the body of his wife had been cared for in a fitting manner. (1,064 instances of such service.)

11. DISCREPANCIES IN DISCHARGE PAPERS—

Anton B. lost an eye and index finger, bore a wound of hand grenade on his shoulder and a shrapnel scar on his side from the battle of Chateau-Thierry. His discharge papers showed only the loss of a finger. The Red Cross sent a copy of his discharge papers to the Adjutant General at Washington and asked for a true copy of service record.

This soldier is now receiving treatment at the Marine Hospital and is getting compensation of $30.00 a month from the government. He is not physically able to enter vocational training and therefore cannot enjoy the benefits of the monthly sum offered by this department. After investigating the home of the soldier, the Red Cross decided that $30.00 a month was wholly inadequate to meet the requirements of the wounded man and his family. The government allowance is being supplied by the Red Cross until the War Risk Bureau adjusts the family's claims. (301 instances of service of this kind.)

12. TRAVEL PAY ADJUSTMENTS—

Some years ago a young Greek left his wife and mother in Macedonia and immigrated to this country. When war was declared he was inducted into service, suffered a disability, was discharged and granted compensation. while he was waiting for his award his wife died, making his need for money more acute. In one of the daily papers the soldier saw the announcement that travel pay had been increased from 4½ cents to 5 cents per mile. He immediately applied to the Red Cross and through our efforts received the money due him. (140 such instances.)

13. ALLOTMENT AND ALLOWANCE DIFFICULTIES—

A Jewish woman went to our office in the heart of the Ghetto not long ago, taking with her a newspaper account of the sinking of the Tuscania. Among the survivors she found the name of Jacob G. Her husband of the same name had deserted her and their four children eight years before and this was the first clue she had of his whereabouts.

The Red Cross visitor secured identifying information among relatives, employers and friends and it was sent to the Adjutant General's office in Washington. The man proved to be the deserting husband and father.

Mr. G. was obliged to make an allotment, and since this time his wife and children have been enjoying the aid and protection which the government and the Red Cross provide for the family of a soldier. (1,944 instances of this service.)

14. FOREIGN SERVICE CASES—

A British East Indian in the Canadian service found himself stranded in Chicago, due to the delayed arrival of the gratuity check. The Red Cross communicated with his commanding officer in Toronto. He recommended a loan and authorized transportation to Canada and these services were extended to the soldier. In a short time he returned the entire sum loaned him. (194 cases.)

15. PERSONAL EFFECTS OF DECEASED MEN, FUNERALS, ETC.—

"BLACK DEVIL TO BE BURIED IN POTTER'S FIELD." This news headline came to the attention of the Red Cross a few weeks ago. The reporter had recorded merely the fact that a Negro soldier had been asphyxiated in his rooming house, and as no one claimed the body, a pauper funeral would follow.

The Red Cross learned that the man, Thomas Anderson, had been released from Camp Grant the day before the tragedy and had remained over night in Chicago before resuming his journey to his home in Alabama. He was a graduate of Tuskegee university, the son of a minister in a small southern town. He had been decorated for bravery and wore the insignia of the "Black Devils."

The father was communicated with and the boy's body was sent home. The Red Cross helped in the adjustment of the insurance and traced the boy's Liberty bonds. (89 instances of service under this heading.)

16. DISCHARGES—

Charles —— enlisted in August, 1917, leaving behind a wife and two children. A year later he was wounded and sent to a base hospital in France. Upon his discharge he was given transportation to the town where his company was supposed to be stationed. Due to a confusion in directions, the soldier sought his outfit for six weeks, was finally attached to a casual company, and sent back to the United States with an order to report to the adjutant general in Chicago. En route his purse containing the order was lost. The soldier arrived in Chicago and presented himself to the adjutant general's office without identifying papers. A clerk in the adjutant general's office had misfiled the correspondence concerning the man. He was declared an impostor and reported to the army intelligence department as a deserter.

At this juncture, the soldier's wife, to whom he had given assistance, appealed to the Red Cross to help her husband. Submitting to the adjutant general a resume of our case record and a letter the soldier had written us from France concerning his allotment and allowance, we were able to satisfy the department of his identity. He was restored to his former good standing and received an honorable discharge. (686 instances.)

17. IDENTIFICATION AT BANK—

A discharged soldier came to the Red Cross office with a check for $90.00 which he had been unable to cash, as he was a stranger in Chicago. We established communication with his Home Chapter, learned that he was responsible and thus were enable to safely assist the soldier in cashing his check. (45 instances.)

18. INVESTIGATION OF TELEGRAMS—

A few weeks ago the Salt Lake Chapter wired Chicago to investigate addresses given by a stranded soldier who was attempting to borrow money. In referring to our files, we discovered that the boy had applied to us twice, giving false addresses both times. A visit to the addresses given in the telegrams found them to be vacant lots. We telegraphed these facts to Salt Lake City. (208 instances.)

19. REFERENCE TO OTHER AGENCIES—

A native of British East India, following some slight trouble with the English government, left the University of Calcutta and entered school in New York. He was inducted into service of the United States and upon his return applied to the Red Cross to assist him in securing employment by which to work his way through the University of Chicago. The boy was sent to the Jewish Welfare Board, with the result that he is being sponsored by that organization, and his interrupted education is again proceeding smoothly. (409 instances.)

20. WORK ON COLLECTIONS—

The case of Mrs. A. came to us in October, 1917. For months it was necessary to give financial aid in the form of a gift until the allotment and allowance was received. After a period of six months the allotment was again delayed. According to our budget, we found a deficit of $12.00 a month when the allotment and allowance came regularly. We decided to give the deficit as a grant, and the amount of delayed allotment and allowance as a loan.

When a check for $426.00 was finally received we called at the house, and Mrs. A. was very proud of the fact that she was able to return $325.00 borrowed money to the Red Cross. (746 instances.)

21. MISCELLANEOUS SERVICES TO SOLDIERS AND SAILORS—

Secured refund of $100.00 on a pedigreed hog which soldier had bought just before his induction into the army.

Traced guitar left in Union Station by a soldier en route to camp; found instrument, had it packed and shipped.

Traced a soldier's purse containing $130.00 and secured it for him.

Secured an escort for a young French bride who had been left behind when unexpected sailing orders separated her from her soldier-husband.

During one week met sixteen people at trains and cared for them until outgoing trains took them to their destination.

Located many people for the War Risk Bureau, whose allotment checks had been returned to Washington by mistake.

(That week 1,318 such cases.)

I can not take the space to go into any detail of the work of our teaching center. The community has received many instances of its value during the influenza epidemic; 900 women who had had this training came to the rescue of families who could not secure nurses. On the occasion of the recent fire at the Yards we were able to call promptly into service one of our trained Sanitary Detachments, consisting wholly of people who spoke one or more of the foreign languages. A unit of different personnel could not have served in this emergency. When the Black Belt was under martial law we made use of our auxiliaries of colored women, whose training through the Red Cross proved of great value to their own people, and to the community at large. I must mention, but avoid elaboration of, the junior program, merely saying that the Red Cross service to and through the children in the public schools was never more important than now, maintaining the stability of our fundamental institutions.

We have studied our problems from all angles and have reached the conclusion that our membership renewals in 1920 will adequately cover any peace-time budget that needs to be made for 1921. We must, however, provide for the twelve months that lie ahead. We must continue in this country the forms of service which we rendered yesterday, are rendering today, and will tomorrow be asked to render to from eighty to one hundred soldiers who have not sought our help before. We must see that the twenty-two thousand families which are under our care in some form today are in due course discharged, just as the twenty-six thousand families have already been discharged, enlightened, rehabilitated and encouraged. We are giving material relief, as distinguished from service, in less than 10 per cent of the situations presented for our attention, but it costs to render, ever so economically, constructive service in upward of 17,000 cases in a single week. The cost must be borne by this community, whoever does it, but it will cost much less under the thorough and business-like methods of the Red Cross than if it is attempted by any inexperienced agency.

The Red Cross is sympathetic, but it is not sentimental. It is adequate, but it is not emotional. We feel sure that Chicago, purse-worn and war-weary as we all are, will not withdraw the sanction of its support from the one agency which must continue, after all other war agencies have demobilized, to be a definite arm of the government for the honorable completion of a noble and necessary task.

And so the Red Cross presents its case, believing that once the people of Chicago realize the scope and the volume of the work in hand there will be no deficit either in the number of members renewing their enrollment for 1920 nor in the Third War Fund subscriptions so urgently needed.

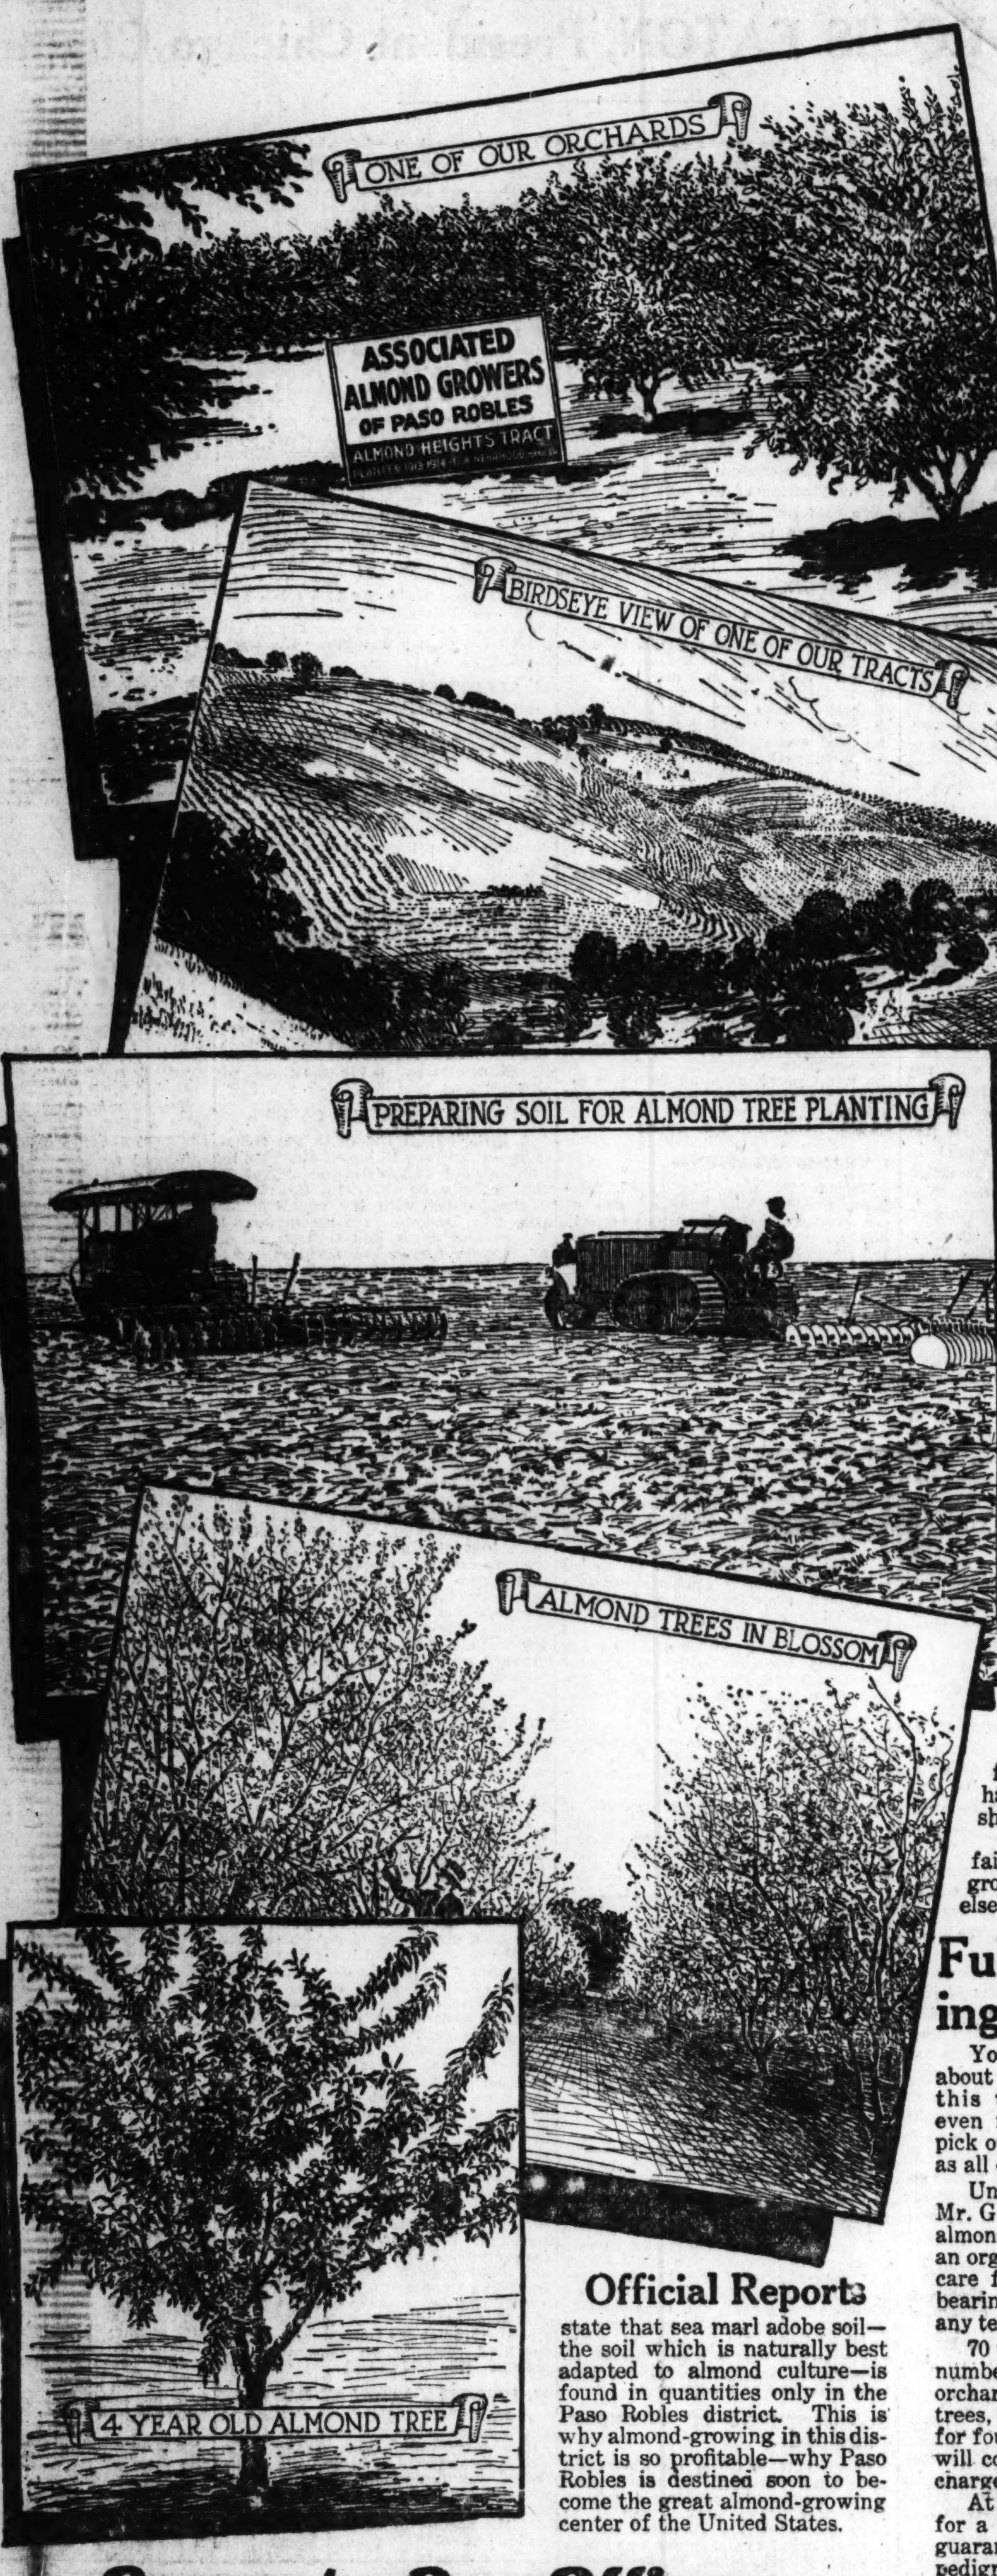
Almond Orchards Must Advance In Value

The Time to Buy is Now



ONE OF OUR ORCHARDS
ASSOCIATED ALMOND GROWERS OF PASO ROBLES
ALMOND HEIGHTS TRACT
BIRDSEYE VIEW OF ONE OF OUR TRACTS
PREPARING SOIL FOR ALMOND TREE PLANTING
ALMOND TREES IN BLOSSOM
4 YEAR OLD ALMOND TREE

Nature has unalterably fixed the acreage of desirable almond land in California.

California produces 99 per cent of all the almonds grown in the United States. There is practically no land in this country suited for almond growing commercially outside of California. With a thorough understanding of these fundamental facts it is easy to see why the value of California Almond Orchards and also of land adapted to the growing of almonds must necessarily have a continuous upward trend. And it is just as obvious that the time to engage in this profitable almond-growing industry is NOW.

It's simply another case of history repeating itself. A few years ago raw land in California adapted to the growth of oranges, lemons, figs, walnuts, etc., could be bought cheap. Today bearing orchards on these lands command anywhere from $2,000 to $4,000 an acre. What little raw land there is left suitable for these crops is being held at from $1,000 to $1,500 an acre. Desirable almond land gives promise of even greater and more rapid rise in value. There is less of it—it is being taken up more rapidly. This is only one of the reasons why you should make your reservation of at least one of our ten-acre almond orchard tracts now while the price is so low and terms so easy.

$2,500 a Year for Life

Net profits of upwards of $2,500 a year from a ten-acre almond orchard in the Paso Robles district are based not upon remote and speculative possibilities but upon facts—upon what almond growers are now actually making.

A ten-acre orchard consists of 700 trees. Comparatively young trees yield 20 pounds of nuts each, or 14,000 pounds from the 700 trees with an ever-increasing yield.

Last year the price per pound for almonds paid to growers was 25½ cents. This year the price will be much higher. The California Almond Growers' Exchange, which fixes the price of almonds in advance, has given notice that the price this year will be at least 32½ cents. The price may go even higher and touch 35 cents. Figure the increased profits.

Great Profits from a 10-Acre Orchard

The year to year profits of from $250 to $300 an acre are what you begin to realize when the trees are only eight years old.

As the trees become older, their yield becomes greater. Each year sees a greater money return, and don't overlook this fact—that almond orchards constantly increase in value. Once you have an orchard started, your land value goes up. It is conservatively estimated that the increase in value is $100 per acre each year for at least 15 years. You never would have to sell at your purchase price, if you should ever want to dispose of the property.

In 35 years there has not been an almond failure at Paso Robles. Every year the growers have gathered their profits. Where else can you find such an opportunity as this?

Official Reports

state that sea marl adobe soil—the soil which is naturally best adapted to almond culture—is found in quantities only in the Paso Robles district. This is why almond-growing in this district is so profitable—why Paso Robles is destined soon to become the great almond-growing center of the United States.

Full Stand of 700 Bearing Trees Guaranteed

You do not need to know the first thing about almond growing in order to engage in this thriving California industry. It's not even necessary for you to go to California to pick out your land. We attend to that as well as all other details for you.

Under the direction of our Field Manager, Mr. G. A. Nehrhood, regarded as the foremost almond authority in California, we maintain an organization of experts who will plant and care for your trees until they come into full bearing and then harvest your crops—this for any term of years you may desire such service.

70 trees to the acre—700 trees in all—is the number we put into one of these 10-acre orchards. You pay nothing extra for the trees, the planting or the care of the orchard for four years, after which, if you so wish, we will continue the service for merely a nominal charge to be taken out of the crop.

At the completion of your contract with us for a 10-acre orchard we turn over to you a guaranteed full stand of 700 bearing trees—pedigreed almond trees, the sturdiest, best bearing varieties that have ever been grown.

Best Almond Land at Paso Robles

We picked Paso Robles as the location for our properties because the soil and climatic conditions in that district produce the most abundant crops and the "meatiest" almonds grown in California.

The soil is what is known as sea mar. adobe, highly impregnated with lime and potash—the two elements which are absolutely essential to growing hardy almond trees and producing a rich and heavy nut meat content. The soil needs no fertilizer—in fact it automatically fertilizes itself from year to year owing to the abundance of the marl adobe. Moreover, the soil does not wash away no matter how heavy the rainfall may be.

No irrigation is required. The rainfall is ample to keep the trees in perfect condition. During the past 15 years Mr. Nehrhood, our field manager, by whose advice this land was selected, has traveled all over the state, tested the soils and inspected the almond crops produced. As a result of his thorough investigation and of his vast experience as a planter, he chose the Paso Robles district as the best for almond growing, and his opinion is backed by that of other experts. After this land is all sold and planted in orchards, it will naturally command the highest price of any almond land in the state.

Small Payment Down

The closer you investigate the big profits others are making in the almond-growing industry at Paso Robles the more eager you will be to invest a part of your surplus earnings in this enterprise. It is the one BIG opportunity in California now open to you—an opportunity such as seldom comes to the man who wishes to make a safe investment yielding large returns, to safeguard his future with an income of from $2500 to $3000 a year for life and to provide a valuable estate for his family.

No large amount of capital is required. A moderate payment down will secure one or more of these 10-acre unit tracts and small monthly payments will take care of part of the balance.

Crops Pay Half

You pay only half the cost of your orchard in cash. We accept payment for the balance out of the crops from your orchard. This arrangement is decidedly to your advantage because naturally it is to our own interest to select only the finest trees, give the young orchard the best of care and bring the trees into profitable bearing in the shortest time possible. Yet we are not speculating on results. We know for a certainty how quickly almond orchards in our lands develop, how heavily they yield and what a big cash market there is waiting for every pound of nuts that can be grown.

This Season's Planting Soon to Begin

Last year a number of people waited until too late to have their trees put in when the planting season was on—because even with our big force of men and our large mechanical equipment, the early sales required all our planting capacity. We simply had "our hands full" getting the trees in for the people who saw the big opportunity and grasped it on sight.

This year will very likely see the same condition—some acting early and getting their orchards started in advance and others hesitating and missing this planting season.

Your Interests Safeguarded by $2,500,000 Trust Co.

Your investigation of this association will show that it was organized and is backed by responsible men. However, to safeguard the interests of all buyers, one of the largest Trust Companies in California (Capital $2,500,000) is trustee of the development fund and holds title to the ground for the purchasers' benefit—the title being transferred to the buyer when the contract is completed.

Our Money Back Guarantee

If you visit our property or select some one to represent you and do not find this investment to be exactly as represented in our booklet, "A Life Income Plus California"—and you will have thirty days in which to make your investigation—we agree to refund the initial payments you have made, together with your railroad and Pullman fares paid to inspect your purchase. See for yourself, therefore, at our risk. We know what you will find at Paso Robles and willingly give this guarantee—your protection against any loss whatever in making an investigation.

Beautiful Acre Homesites

We have secured a splendid tract of land on the hills overlooking the city of Paso Robles and divided it into acre units. These we also offer on the easy payment plan. We will plant half of each acre in fruit and nut trees—cherries, apricots, figs, plums, prunes, grapes, nectarines, apples, peaches, almonds, walnuts—and care for them for four years without any extra cost to the buyers.

These homesites will have cement sidewalks, telephone and electric lights—all modern improvements. Here is an ideal spot for either an all-year-round or a winter home. Quick action should be taken to secure one of these homesites, as they are rapidly being sold.

The art of complimenting friends with the coffee you serve

A PLEASANT little custom has arisen for complimenting one's inner circle of friends when they call. It is the serving of coffee of rare and exquisite flavor.

In Chicago, where the social life is perhaps more friendly and intimate than in any other city, Yuban is the coffee most often served in the afternoon.

We have heard a charming Chicago hostess say, when she served Yuban in this way, "I remembered that you especially liked this coffee of mine." And her guests were quick to understand the compliment of her thoughtfulness.

The cheering aroma of Yuban, its rich, unusual flavor, make it peculiarly expressive of friendliness and good will.

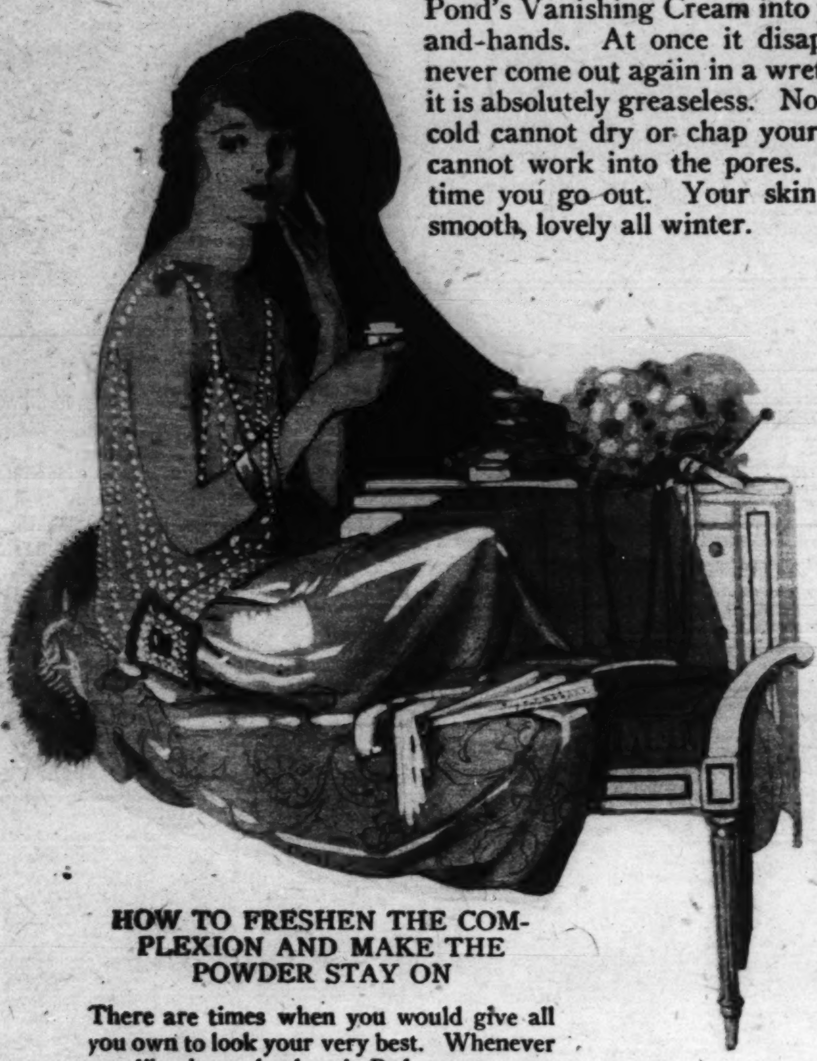
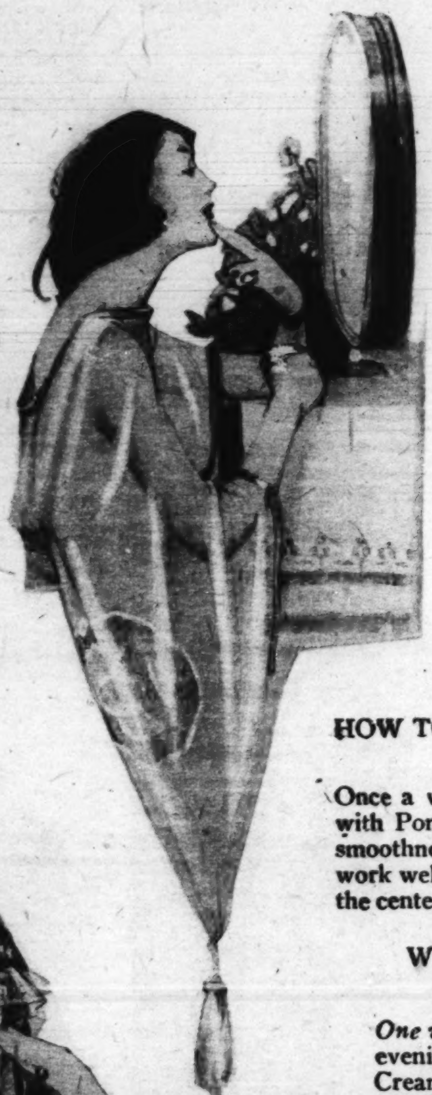
HOW TO PROTECT THE SKIN FROM COLD, WIND AND DUST

Every "hike," every motor trip you take, your skin pays for. The cold dries it. The wind robs it of all natural oil. The dust flies into the pores and coarsens them. Then, the next day your complexion is florid, harsh, rough—altogether unlovely!

You can protect your poor skin from this punishment. Before going out, rub a little Pond's Vanishing Cream into your face, neck and hands. At once it disappears. It can never come out again in a wretched shine, for it is absolutely greaseless. Now the wind and cold cannot dry or chap your skin; the dust cannot work into the pores. Do this every time you go out. Your skin will stay soft, smooth, lovely all winter.





HOW TO FRESHEN THE COMPLEXION AND MAKE THE POWDER STAY ON

There are times when you would give all you own to look your very best. Whenever you like, it can be done! Before you powder, take a little bit of Pond's Vanishing Cream on your finger tips. Smooth it lightly over your face. At once the cool, fragrant cream disappears. You can feel the tenseness around the eyes and mouth relax. Your skin is smoother, fresher. Now powder your face as usual. The powder will stay on two or three times as long. Do this always before powdering. It makes the powder look more natural. It gives your skin a new transparent loveliness, an exquisite softness that makes you look your very best. And it will never embarrass you by coming out in a wretched shine!

HOW TO CLEANSE THE PORES AND KEEP THE SKIN CLEAR

For cleansing, your skin needs an entirely different cream—a cream with an oil base. Before going to bed or whenever your face has been especially exposed to dust, rub some Pond's Cold Cream into the pores of your skin and wipe it off with a soft cloth. It is amazing how much dirt comes out. You will get a new idea of how important this cold-cream cleansing is. The formula for Pond's Cold Cream was especially worked out to supply just the amount of oil required to give it the highest possible cleansing power.

HOW TO KEEP THE FACE SMOOTH AND UNLINED

Once a week, massage your face and neck with Pond's Cold Cream. It has the exact smoothness and body required to make it work well into the skin. Always work from the center of the face outwards and upwards.

WHY YOUR SKIN NEEDS TWO CREAMS

One without any oil, for daytime and evening needs—Pond's Vanishing Cream. It will not reappear in a shine.

One with an oil base, for cleansing and massage — Pond's Cold Cream. It has just the amount of oil that the skin needs.

Neither of these creams will encourage the growth of hair on the face.

TIMOTHY COLE'S BOOKPLATE—A notable example of the work of the great wood engraver, embodying a portrait of himself and the names of some of the artists whose work he has reproduced since he left Chicago in 1871. The Vassar college library is the repository of the diplomas, decorations and other treasures collected by Mr. Cole during his long career. An exhibition of his work opens tomorrow at the Art institute. (From the collection of Nicholas J. Quirk.)

TWIN FIGHTERS—Arvid and Albin Anderson, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Anderson of Lockport, Ill., were born on the same day, enlisted in the Marines at the same time, and fought with the same kind of gallantry at Chateau Thierry and Belleau Wood. Arvid received the French military medal and the Croix de Guerre with three citations. Albin has the Croix de Guerre with palm and the Distinguished Service Cross. (Photograph by Harrington.)

Pro-phy-lac-tic HAND BRUSH

No. 400

Costs a Dollar, But Read How Much It's Worth

We'll let a user tell you—Mr. George H. Chapin, of Boston. He wrote this letter to us recently:

"The hand brush for which I paid one dollar is the best thing of its kind that I ever owned. During the several months that it has been in my possession it has received the very hardest kind of use, for I own an automobile and make my own repairs, and generally my hands are a sight after work of that character.

"To get them in presentable condition I have used Old Dutch Cleanser, Gold Dust, Naphtha Soap, ammonia solution, etc., and a vigorous application of the brush, and today the brush is as good as when I first used it—the bristles just as firm and stiff, the wood back just as solid and resistant against water as ever. Five times the price paid for it could not tempt me to part with it if another was not available."

The Pro-phy-lac-tic is for sale by the leading drug and department stores. Go to your regular store and buy one today sure. Always sold in a Yellow Box.

Your Complexion tells a story to the World

HOW fearlessly, how confidently, the girl with a fresh, soft, lovely skin meets the eyes of the world! Nothing to conceal! For almost always a clear, radiant complexion is an indication of a buoyant, well poised nature, healthful living, and fastidious habits.

Nothing so quickly creates an impression of your personality as your skin. By keeping it soft, clear, radiant—you can make it speak instantly, unmistakably, of fastidious freshness and charm, of dainty care.

Don't let your skin tell a story of neglect—of unhygienic or thoughtless habits. Even if through the wrong kind of treatment your complexion has lost the smoothness and freshness it should have—you can give it back the color and clearness that make other girls' complexions so attractive.

For your skin is constantly changing—it changes every day in spite of you. Each day old skin dies and new skin takes its place. And you will find that this new skin, if given the care its particular need demands, will respond instantly and gratifyingly.

Blackheads are a confession

Perhaps you feel at a disadvantage in meeting people because your skin is constantly marred by disfiguring blackheads. Blackheads are a confession that you are using the wrong kind of cleansing for your type of skin. Oil and foreign matter have solidified in the pores—and if neglected, this condition may lead to serious irritation.

The only way in which you can guard against blackheads is to keep the pores exquisitely clean and sufficiently stimulated to do their work thoroughly and carry away any waste matter before it hardens.

Every night use this treatment and see how easily you can keep your skin free from this trouble.

Apply hot cloths to the face until the skin is reddened. Then with a rough washcloth work up a heavy lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap and rub it into the pores thoroughly—always with an upward and outward motion. Rinse with clear hot water, then with cold—the colder the better. If possible, rub your face for thirty seconds with a lump of ice. Dry carefully. To remove the blackheads already formed substitute a flesh brush for the washcloth in the treatment given above. Then protect the fingers with a handkerchief and press out the blackheads.

After using this treatment regularly for a few weeks, you will be surprised to see how your skin has improved—how much clearer, more attractive it has become.

Each one of the famous Woodbury treatments is worked out with reference to the special needs of different types of skin. By giving a few minutes every day to the special treatment your skin demands—you can make it tell of health and dainty care.

The booklet containing full directions for all the famous Woodbury treatments is wrapped around each cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap. Get a cake today—begin your special treatment tonight. Woodbury's Facial Soap is on sale at any drug store or toilet goods counter in the United States or Canada. A 25 cent cake lasts a month or six weeks.

Would you like us to send you a trial size cake?

For six cents we will send you a trial size cake (enough for a week of any Woodbury facial treatment), together with the booklet of treatments. Or for 15 cents we will send you the treatment booklet and samples of Woodbury's Facial Soap, Facial Powder, Facial Cream and Cold Cream. GREEN LANTERNS

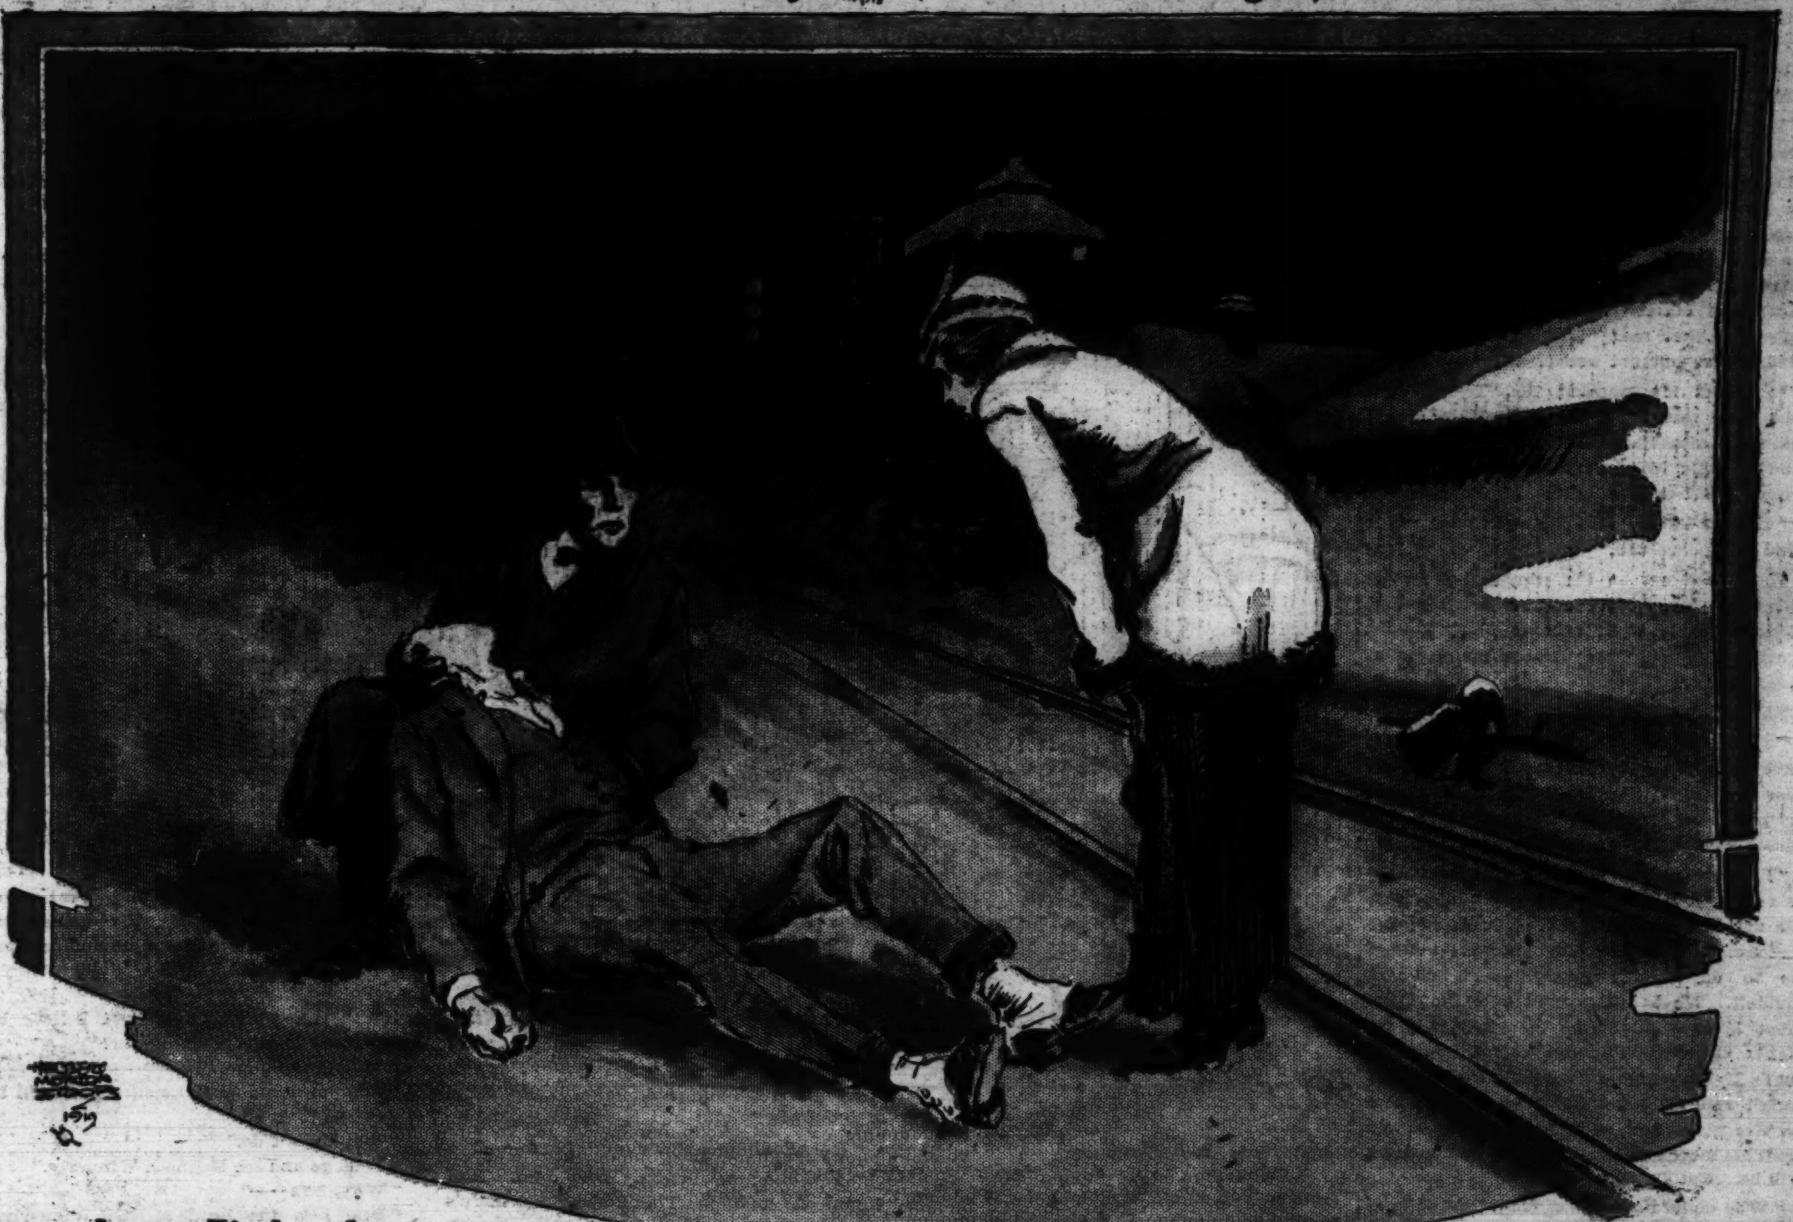
by MARY SYNON

Illustrated by Herbert Morton Stoops



When he said, "Don't look, Edith. It's Benedict," an icy hand closed over my heart. I stood stupidly staring, while the semaphore signal lights changed color.

Young Love Finds the Way in the Shadow of an Old Man's Tragedy.

NEITHER of us, Justin Terry nor I, remembered until afterward how the switch targets had shifted from green to red in the semaphore arms at the North Branch bridge while we watched over John Benedict's dead body; and yet there had been something balefully ominous in the sudden flash of the lanterns from emerald to ruby as we stood there in the storm, gazing at each other with the stupid astonishment of people who stumble upon death in the midst of life. So mechanical did the operation appear, however, so removed from human impulse, that we never thought to associate it with the drama on which it blinked until circumstance shoved us into a corner from which we had to grope back through every instant of those portentous moments. Then it was not we, but Kenneth Winnerly, who found its significance in the chain of events that began for us when they ended for John Benedict.

The Sunset Trail Limited had gone by in a swirl of snow as I passed the gate of the Benedict plant on Carpenter avenue, a square distant from the station, and I knew that I had time enough to reach the local that follows the other train out of the terminal beyond the bridge. I had been coaching the Wednesday evening drama class at the Carpenter settlement, and I left in good season, since there is no later direct train to Glenwood, but I remembered, as I came by Doane street, that Rita Kubal had told me that Mrs. Foran was dead. I had not known her even as well as her husband, whom I had met once in a while in my comings and goings, for she was a strange, furtive creature, resenting her neighbors quite as much as she resented us settlement helpers. The Forans had lived in almost defiant seclusion, childless and friendless. The thought of the old man's loneliness in his grief rather than any feeling of acquaintanceship with him had turned me down to the shack by the river.

Had I not known the neighborhood quite as well as I knew Glenwood, where we Hagars had lived since Natalie and I were children, I might have drawn back in terror from the darkness of Doane street. Carpenter avenue is forbidding enough on those nights when the Benedict plant is plunged into darkness, but occasional motor and street cars pass, and there are always the broad bands of lights from the settlement windows and the narrow stream from the watchman's box at the gate of the plant. Doane street, however, plunging through lumber yards to end at the river, is a blind alley so unlighted that only the whiteness of the whirling snow guided me toward the Forans' shack.

Through one of the windows, as I came abreast the house, I saw the gleam of tapers. I tried the door and found it locked. I knocked upon it, but no one answered. I turned away with the thought that Mrs. Foran had in death, as she had in life, kept out the little world of her neighborhood. It was not the way of the poor, and, since comradeship is one of the compensatory blessings of poverty, I sighed over the pathos of the old man who denied it to himself while he brooded over his dead.

All thought of the Forans went from my mind, swept like flakes in the growing gale, however, as I went down the long platform of the railroad station. The Carpenter station is deserted at nightfall and used only by work belated commuters, who signal the few trains that stop there. With a single oil lantern hanging before it, the place has the aspect of some little way station in the west, for all it is set in the heart of a city's factory district. In the three years of my work at Carpenter house I had come to know it too well to regard it with fear, and I had swung down the full length of the platform before I glimpsed a scene which pierced me with a cold beyond the storm.

On the roadbed toward the bridge a man bent over a huddled heap. Something within me kept saying that the heap was a dead man. It said, too, although I tried to put away the thought, that the scene was not a casual accident. Tragedy brooded too near to be denied. But, with all my forebodings, I was not ready for my part. For, when I steeled myself to step from the platform and go down the track, the stooping man turned toward me. I was near enough to touch Justin Terry before I could see his face. Afterward it seemed strange to me that I never questioned his presence there any more than he questioned mine. But when he said, "Don't look, Edith. It's Benedict," an icy hand closed over my heart. I stood, stupidly staring, while the semaphore signal lights changed color.

"Is he—dead?"

"Yes."

"How?"

"I don't know. The Sunset Trail struck him, I suppose."

"What can I do?"

"Go back to the gate and call the watchman. I can't leave him here. We must get him off before the local comes."

I sped down to the street and stumbled on through the snow toward the ribbon of light at the watch box. John Benedict dead—killed! Only those of us who had worked in the shadow of his great plant could be so numbed by his passing. It was as if the ship engines had stopped in the night without warning. For Benedict, ruthless, rugged, dominated the district as a monarch. Upon him depended lives and livelihoods. Ever since I had come to Carpenter house I had been forced into admiration of the man's energy even as I had held hatred of his means and methods of using it. Only tonight the hatred had flamed anew when I had heard the gossip of his quarrel with Justin Terry. Rita Kubal, Benedict's stenographer, had told me the story as she had waited for her rôle in "The Shadow of the Glen." "Mr. Terry was right," she said, "and Benedict was wrong. But he's so strong, Miss Edith, you forget how wrong he can be."

The epitaph was writing itself on my mind as I ran down the avenue. So strong—and

THE TEENIE WEENIES

GIVE AN OLD FRIEND A LIFT. BY WM. DONAHEY

"WELL, Doctor," said the General one evening as he dropped into the hospital office, "how is your patient getting along?"

"You mean the old squirrel who lives over in the big woods?" asked the Doctor.

"Yes, the old chap who has been so sick so long."

"Well, he is getting along in pretty fair shape, but he's got to take mighty good care of himself for quite a while," said the Doctor. "He has a very bad case of neuritis and it will take some time for him to get well again. I have done everything I can think of to help him and I think I have helped him some. I examined his teeth and they seem to be all right. I performed an operation on him last week and took out his tonsils and I think that will help him a lot. We have—that is with the help of the Lady of Fashion—we have given him a good rub every day for the last two weeks with alcohol, and I think that will help him too."

"Where is the pain located?" asked the General.

"It's in his front left leg," answered the Doctor. "He had to give up his house in the top of the big tree and move into an old hole near the ground, for it hurt him dreadfully to climb so high."

"And, by the way," continued the Doctor, "the poor fellow is too lame to lay in his regular supply of nuts for the winter and I was going to speak to you about it. Don't you think we ought to give him a little lift and fill up his store room?"

"Certainly! Of course!" exclaimed the General. "Glad you mentioned it. He has been a very good friend to us and I'll have the men go over tomorrow and start to work."

The next morning the General ordered the Teenie Weenie men to go over to the squirrel's home and fill his store room with nuts.

Big tears of gratitude gathered in the squirrel's eyes when he heard what the Teenie Weenies intended to do for him; in fact one large tear rolled off his hairy cheek and splashed all over the Turk, and that little chap was forced to go home and put on a dry suit of clothes.

The Sailor climbed up the tree and fastened a pulley to a limb while the rest of the Teenie Weenies rolled up the nuts, which they found under a hickory nut tree near by. The Cowboy tied the end of the rope, which ran through the pulley, to the nuts and then several of the strongest Teenie Weenies pulled them up to the squirrel's home.

The squirrel was able to reach out and get the nuts into his hole, where he pulled off the rope with his teeth and the Sailor would then send the rope down for another load.

The little men worked hard all day and by supper time they had quite filled the squirrel's store room with nuts.

"You certainly have been very kind to me," said the squirrel when the work was done, "for I couldn't possibly have filled my store room, and goodness knows what would have become of me this winter!"

"Oh, that's all right—don't mention it," said the General. "Come on, boys, we'd better get home to supper," and the little folks set off with the Dunce in the lead, for that greedy fellow was always first when there was anything to eat in sight.

GREEN LANTERNS

to be snuffed out like a candle flame! So intent was I upon the thought that I came to the gate without noticing the limousine at the curbstone until a voice from it spoke to me as I pounded upon the sentry box. Then at my stammered words Benedict's chauffeur leaped from the car. "Killed!" he repeated. "Old Benedict killed! And on the tracks! What was he doing there? He left me nearly an hour ago and told me to wait. I thought he'd gone inside."

The watchman, summoned by our pounding, declared that Benedict had not gone into the plant. "He went out at 4 o'clock," he insisted, "and he never went back. Mr. Terry, the sales manager, left at a quarter to 10. He went off toward the settlement house. He's the last one out."

"He found Mr. Benedict," I said. "He's there now."

The chauffeur and the watchman mounted the car after helping me within, and in a moment we had come to the railroad. They ran up the stairs before me and had come to where Justin stood guard over the dead man when I arrived at the platform. Justin's cry halted me. "But it can't be! He's dead, killed, but not murdered!"

"I think it's murder, Mr. Terry," the chauffeur was insisting. "See, his coat's cut right over his heart. A knife did that. And where's his overcoat? He had it on when he left the car. Sure, it's murder."

"It looks like it," said the watchman. "I'll send in a police call."

He passed me on the run, and I moved closer to Justin. "You'd better go home, Edith," he said. "I'd take you, only I must see this through. They'll want me as a witness."

"Won't they want me?"

"I hadn't thought of that. I shouldn't have let you go for the watchman. Otherwise you could be kept out of it." He began to pace the platform restlessly. As he passed me for the second time he stopped.

"I quarreled with Benedict this morning," he said. "The quarreling was nothing new. We did that once a week at least, but the occasion for this was different. He ordered me to do something that—well, that I couldn't. We had it out, all over the office. Then I quit. I cleared up everything tonight. Queer, isn't it, the way things work out? If I'd waited till tomorrow—I wish I hadn't said all I did. I've worked for him for five years, and——" He drew himself up from his meditations. "O, well, what is to be, will be. But I'm sorry."

"Who could have killed him, Justin?"

"Who knows? He had plenty of enemies, but I can't imagine one of them doing it. It may have been for money. He probably carried a wad of currency. He had that trick. And yet a knife in the back——"

"But his family? Who'll tell them?"

"He has no family. The only relatives of whom I've ever heard are distant cousins in Omaha."

"Is there any one to notify?"

"Parsons, the secretary, will know."

He went back to his pacing, apparently oblivious to the immediate problem of the manner of Benedict's death in his regret over having quarreled with the dead man. It was I who remembered the coming of the local and cried warning to the chauffeur. Justin sprang to help him bear the burden from the tracks. They had just succeeded when the train, unsignaled by the platform lantern, rumbled past us, leaving the three of us there with Benedict's body. Then, once again, the switch targets shifted from green to red.

Four officers, guided to the place by the watchman, came with a scurry of authority. One of them, McGrath, Justin called by name. "It's an awful thing," the policeman said, "the way these holdups are killing——"

"I don't believe it's a holdup," Justin said, "Benedict has been stabbed."

"Who found him?"

"I did."

"Was he dead?"

"Yes, I thought the train had struck him. It was passing as I came up the stairs. I saw something on the roadbed and ran toward it."

"Did you see any one running away?"

"No one. I did not know it was murder until Lane, the chauffeur, and the watchman examined the body. His wallet is there, with $200 in it."

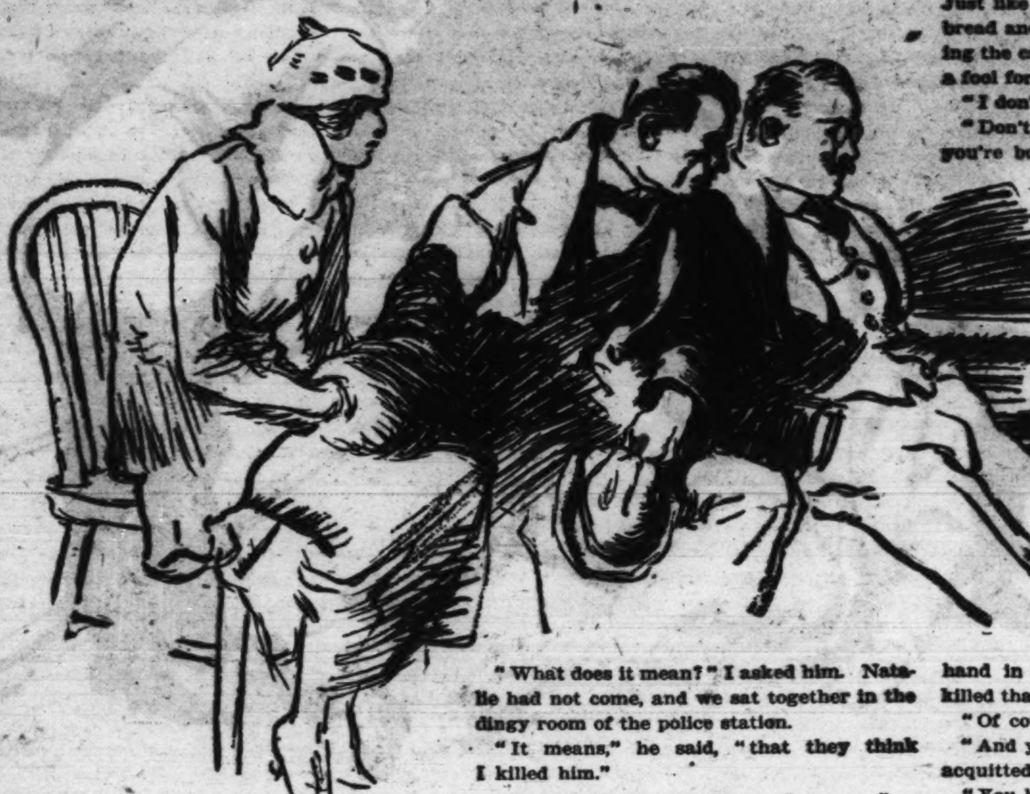
"And the lady?" He looked at me.

"Miss Hagar came up to take her train, the local that follows the limited. She found me just after I had discovered that the man was Benedict."

"I see." He gave an order to the other officers, then one to us. "You'll have to come with me to the station," he advised us.

We went, driven in Benedict's car, and with a strange sense of the incongruity of our presence in it under the circumstances. At the police station a startled captain put us through a routine of queries, then bade us hold ourselves in readiness for summons to the inquest. Afterward Benedict's chauffeur insisted upon driving us to Glenwood. "It's just as easy as going back downtown," he declared, and I accepted with a realization that he wanted to work off the nervous tension of the tragedy.

Through the long ride, as we whirled beyond the outskirts of the city and into the first of the suburban towns, Justin was strangely silent. I knew, however, that it was not Benedict's death as much as his own problem of living that troubled him. He had held to the Benedict plant, in spite of its disagreeable altercations that all John Benedict's men suffered, because of his desire to marry Natalie. Somehow, no one could imagine Natalie marrying any one who was not assured. I could have done it, and gladly, for a man whom I loved and who loved me as Justin loved my sister, but to expect sacrifice in Natalie was to look for sturdiness in an orchid. Now, with his job gone, flung away for whatever reason had precipitated his conflict with Benedict, he was facing a long wait—and a hurt, disappointed Natalie. "Don't worry, Justin," I strove to reassure him. "It will all come right."



... knew why Justin set his hand over mine and why tears glistened in Kenneth Winnerly's eyes.

He patted my hand, as if in gratitude for the comforting, and I realized anew how much of a boy Justin Terry was, for all his record of hard and successful work.

"I should have thought of all it meant before I went off," he confessed.

"It's done, however, and it may be for the best. But, even aside from that, I'm sorry, Edith, that I said to him all those things I'd stored for years. They are true, as I see them, but I'm not the judge."

We had come to our house, and I saw a light in the library. "Won't you come in?" I asked him. "We can put you up for the night, you know."

"No," he said. "Lane is going back downtown, and he'll take me. It's pretty late."

Because I realized that Natalie would, with reason, be angry at him for not coming in, I refrained from telling her that he had come out with me when she came into the hall to meet me. "What on earth kept you?" she demanded. "Martin met the train, and was going back for the midnight. Why didn't you telephone?"

I told her the story hastily. She listened with wide open eyes that began to flash ere I finished. "Do you mean to tell me," she cried, "that Justin quit the plant today just because he didn't like something Benedict told him to do? Why should he care? It's Benedict's plant, and he has a right to order anything he wants in it, hasn't he? And now Justin, because he——" She broke off one line of thought to rush to another. "And of course the two of you will be wanted as witnesses, and the newspapers will have stories and photographs, and we'll have tribes of reporters on the veranda, the way the Harmons had when Elsie ran away, and we'll be gossiped about and laughed at, and I suppose people will confuse me with you, and start asking what I was doing at Carpenter with Justin at midnight. And it all comes of your going to the settlement, Edith! You know that mother always said that trouble would come out of it."

"Well, it hasn't come yet," I said as I went upstairs.

But I was wrong. It had come, though I did not yet know it. It was only when the inquest ended the next afternoon, with the evidence of six people presented, Justin's, Lane's, the watchman's, McGrath's, the coroner's physician's, and my own, that the coroner called Rita Kubal. Wide eyed, puzzled, the girl told the story of Justin's quarrel with Benedict. Ten minutes later the jury brought in the verdict that John Benedict had met his death by stabbing, and requested the holding of Justin Terry to the grand jury.

"What does it mean?" I asked him. Natalie had not come, and we sat together in the dingy room of the police station.

"It means," he said, "that they think I killed him."

"But it's absurd, ridiculous. I saw——"

"You saw me bending over him. Rita heard our quarrel. That's about all there's to it, but it's enough for indictment with no other motive established. But don't worry, Edith, and don't let Natalie worry. It's just a tangle, but we'll get through. I've telephoned Carmichael to get me bail. I'll have to wait till he comes."

"Can't I do anything for you?" I asked him.

"Nothing," he said, "but keep up Natalie's courage."

The keeping up of Natalie's courage would have been a possible though difficult task had she felt for a moment the need of that virtue. As it was, I found when I reached home that the newspapers had carried the verdict before me. As I went into mother's sitting room I knew that another verdict had been passed. Mother, whiter and tenser than Natalie and looking far more grim than grandmother, announced it. "We feel that your part in this affair is unfortunate, Edith," she said, "but not of your own making. We believe, though, that Justin brought this upon himself, and so we have decided that it is only fair to Natalie that he shall have nothing whatever to do with her until this cloud is removed."

"But you don't believe, you can't believe, that he killed Benedict?"

"Hardly that. But can't you see how unfair it is to Natalie that she should be associated with him under the circumstances?"

I looked at Natalie, expecting from her an outburst of denial, for I had thought that with all her false standards of people and things she really loved Justin; but she was gazing out of the window at the snowy landscape as if she were not under discussion. "Can't you see," I burst out, "how unfair to him it is that you should not stand by him now when he needs us, Natalie most of all?"

"I see that you are as absurd and quixotic as ever," mother said hotly, and went out of the room. Natalie followed her without a word. As I rose to go grandmother halted me. She was seated in the wing chair by the window that we sometimes call her throne because of her magnificent air of command in her utterances out of it. Even though she had seemed to be reading the newspaper, I knew that she had missed nothing of our words, and I expected from her a revised and more direct version of mother's unjust point of view. I braced for it as she spoke. "Sit down," she bade me. I obeyed. No one disobeys Mme. Marshall, who has ruled three households in turn, her mother's, her own, and her daughter's.

"I suppose," she said, taking off her spectacles and transfixing me with her bright little eyes, "that, after you think it over, you will decide that, while your family is wrong, peace must be purchased."

"I didn't do that about the settlement," I combated her.

"No," she said. "That's why I have hopes for you now. To begin with, Edith," she counseled me, "that Terry boy is a fool."

"He is not."

"A fool," she repeated. "Here he goes mooning over Natalie, thinking he's crazy over her, and all the time depending on you for sympathy and comradeship and loyalty. Just like a man," she snapped, "wanting his bread and cake at the same time, and thinking the cake will make the meal. And you're a fool for loving him."

"I don't!"

"Don't lie to me, Edith. But, seeing that you're both fools, I suppose I must take a hand in this game. You don't believe he killed that Benedict man, do you?"

"Of course I don't."

"And you want to make sure that he'll be acquitted?"

"You know I do."

"Then go and see Kenneth Winnerly."

"Why, he's——"

"Yes, he's the head of the Winnerlys. Tell him that Mary Marshall, your grandmother, sent you. And remember to tell me what he says when you say it."

"Thank you, grandmother," I told her.

I sought Kenneth Winnerly the next morning. As I went into the offices of the world's most famous detective agency I thought that access to the head of the institution might be difficult, but the messenger at the railing came back for me at once when he had taken in my card, leading me to an inner office, where a big man was seated at a huge table, from which he arose at my entrance. Pleasant voiced, keen eyed, reassuring, he held out his hand with more than passing friendliness. "You are Frances Marshall's daughter, aren't you?" he asked me.

"Grandmother told me to say I was Mary Marshall's granddaughter."

"That's just like her," he laughed. "She was my first love, you know. Not a sentimental valentine love, but a real one. She was a young married woman with three little girls, and I was a boy of 11 or so when she came to live next door to us. She gave me cakes, and cookies, and gingerbread, and scoldings, and advice, and a lot of good mothering. My mother was dead. And I loved Mary Marshall. I still do. Now, what can I do for her granddaughter?"

I told him. He listened without looking at me, but staring at the ivory paper cutter which he twirled. "And you want evidence to acquit young Terry?" he asked me when I had ended the telling of all I knew of the case.

"Do you think you can get it?"

"Well, if Mary Marshall sent you to me, I suppose I must. It'll never do to let her know I couldn't." He pressed a buzzer beneath his desk, and the messenger came in. "Send Rothan," he ordered. A moment later a tall, lean man appeared, giving me a casual glance that I felt recorded me beyond possibility of later mistake. "Get all the existing evidence in the Benedict murder," he bade times white clouds go by on it. And sometimes I see black clouds there, and at night I see the stars."

The reporter sat silent, baffled. This old woman, who could find comfort in clouds and stars against a background of sky "almost as big as a little carpet," sat unmoved by her side, looking with eyes that saw not on the new world opened before her. The car turned out of the park and began the journey up Riverside drive. Below lay the river, warm in the sunlight, but rippled by a light wind. On its blue bosom were innumerable craft—yachts, row boats, and the stately river steamers whose passengers could be seen leaning idly over the deck rails. All this color gleamed against the rich background of the magnificent Palisades looming protectingly behind. Mrs. Risser gazed upon it with a listless eye.

"I got a cat at home, too," she said, suddenly. "She catches mice. She caught one under my bedt yesterday. She catches all wot she wants. We don't haf to give her nothing to eat."

Miss Underhill preserved an eloquent silence. She saw her "story" fading to a dim outline of what it should have been. She thought she saw, too, the cynical smile on the lips of her arch enemy, the city editor. The voice at her side babbled on.

"Sometimes it's cool in my room," it said. "The buildings iss so high the sun can't get in, and I ain't on that side, anyhow. And Mrs. Eckmeyer she brings me a pitcher of water in the morning, and sometimes I wet a towel and put it on my head. It's cool."

Miss Underhill continued silent. A satisfactory paragraph for the "story" had just occurred to her. She rehearsed it mentally:

"She looked out over the expanse of water, and tears filled her dim old eyes, those eyes which for thirty years had gazed upon nothing but the grimy walls of the opposite tenement and a tiny patch of blue sky which the great building could not quite shut off.

"'When I was a girl,' she said, softly, 'my husband and I used to sit on the river bank and watch the boats go by. That was long ago—but this makes it seem yesterday.' Her lips quivered a little."

Miss Underhill was conscious of a sudden interruption. The real Dora, not the Dora of her "story," was sobbing again at her side.

"Where are we going?" she whimpered. "We have been so far. Are we in another city. I don't feel well. I think I catch cold. I got some good medicine wot the Salvation girls give me. It always makes me well. It cures anything wot I got."

Miss Underhill addressed the chauffeur.

"Drive back," she said, curtly. Then she turned to old Dora with her charming smile. She had recovered her good humor when the reflection occurred to her that her story could tell what Dora Risser should have felt during that drive. No one would be the wiser, and Dora herself, once back in her tenement room, would no doubt corroborate any recital in which she had played a touching and admirable rôle.

"We're going home now," said the reporter, cheerfully. "We will be there in three-quarters of an hour."

Mrs. Risser looked doubtful and her suspicions were intensified by the fact that the chauffeur returned by a different route, kindly desiring to give the old woman all possible variety. He, too, was more cheerful. The drive was almost over and Miss Underhill's prospective tip pleasantly in the foreground of his thoughts. He suddenly remembered with a twinge of conscience that she was invariably very generous on these occasions. Mrs. Risser seized the side of the car with a firmer grip, sat as near the edge of the seat as she dared, looked at the unfamiliar route with scared eyes, and contributed another copious flow of tears to the collection of stains on the borrowed shawl. Beside her the reporter, whose mind was now at rest, mentally outlined telling bits of her "story":

"The car turned into the evil smelling tenement street, from whose refuse covered cobblestones the heat seemed to rise in a perceptible haze. Old Dora Risser gave one last long backward look at the world she was leaving—the beautiful world that lay so near and yet so hideously far from that little tenement room. Then her gaze rested on the crowded streets, the half-naked children playing in the gutters, the swarming life of the tenement. A change passed over her face; her features twisted for a moment, but with a mighty effort she forced them into calm. This was her life: she must return to it, for He who put her there had some good purpose in it. She seized the reporter's hand and kissed it.

"'Good-by,' she said. 'Thank you, and God bless you. You have shown me today a glimpse of what I hope awaits me after I take my next—and last—long drive.'"

"That will do pretty well for an ending," reflected Miss Underhill, comfortably, "when I've polished it up a bit. Of course I must make her an educated woman who has seen better days."

A movement beside her aroused her from her pleasant reverie. The car had reached the tenement region and was rolling swiftly through its swarming streets. It was growing late and the push cart men and peddlers were coming home after their day's work. Some Chinese laundrymen had left their ironing boards for a breath of air and were sitting on the curb exchanging repartee in pidgin English with a little group of hoodlums. A few feet away a street organ was grinding out an ancient waltz, and several ragged little girls were dancing to the music.

A long gasp of delight fell on Miss Underhill's ear. It came from the lips of Dora Risser, who was sitting up gazing around her with shining eyes. She craned her neck to look at the tenements that fell behind them. The car turned a corner sharply and entered another street, a shade filthier, more crowded, more evil smelling than the last. Two drunken men lurched uncertainly along the sidewalk. Dora Risser sent her glance wide eyed down the street until it lit and rested on a scrubby tenement in one of whose windows bloomed a red geranium. She clutched Miss Underhill's arm with quivering fingers and uttered a shrill cry. Her face was transfigured. The listless, sick little old woman had become an ecstatic creature, hysterical with joy.

"Ach Gott!" she shrieked. "Ach Gott!—there's my little home. I'm back again, I'm back." She closed her eyes and struggled for breath. "Ach Gott!" she gasped. "Gott sei dank!"

The nurse and the bearers were waiting, and they carried the happy old woman up the dirty stairs. Her exclamations of delight and her beaming face left no doubt in their minds as to the success of Miss Underhill's experiment. That young lady herself lingered for a confidential last word when the others had departed. She had given the friendly Mrs. Eckmeyer money for the purchase of an evening meal, and the little room was full of the smell of frying meat. Miss Underhill held out her hand, which old Dora Risser did not hasten to kiss. She put her own into it, limply.

"Come now," said the girl, "say you've had a good time."

The old woman hesitated. A shiver passed over her as memory brought up for an instant the terrors of the day. Then her nostrils caught and drew in the mingled odor of frying eggs, bacon, and hot coffee. After all, it was over, and she was home. Why bear malice. She grinned good naturedly.

"Ach, yes," she said, handsomely. "I hat a goot time. Sure!"

It was a very "teary tale" Miss Underhill turned in to the city editor. New York wept over it the following morning. So many letters poured into the Searchlight office offering the old woman homes of all degrees of luxury that Miss Underhill was forced to write a brief supplementary article explaining that Dora Risser was "permanently and happily provided for" through the Searchlight's efforts.

To the writer of this simple narrative she told the plain, unvarnished facts, and generously added the moral lesson the episode had taught her.

"I think of it," she said, "when I go to all these sociological meetings and hear people worrying about relieving the condition of the poor. I sympathize heartily with that work. But I have learned this lesson very well: there are times when what the poor want more than they want anything else on earth is simply to be let alone!"

Green Lanterns

rich while I've seen Lily growing poorer and poorer. I was never a man that could make money. I work, and work hard and faithful, but money don't come to my kind. I'd have made it for her, if I'd known how, but all I could do was hold the tower job, and watch that big plant crawling down the street. Day after day I'd see John Benedict passing, first in his carriages, then in his automobiles. Sometimes Lily saw him, but not often. She kept to herself so that she wouldn't be in danger of meeting him. She'd watch me when I'd go out at odd times, as if she were asking me not to do anything that would hurt her."

"Did she care for Benedict even then?"

"Care for him?" He turned on Winnerly with a sudden flash of fire in his embered eyes. "She hated him as I couldn't hate him, for once she'd loved him! No, she'd have killed him if she'd dared, but she was afraid. She was always afraid after she'd been with him. That was what he did to people."

Justin nodded assent to Winnerly as Tom Foran returned to events from analysis, falling back into that strange clairvoyant manner of narrative.

"I used to sit in the tower there of nights, waiting for the limiteds and locals, and look out on the lights of the plant where men and women worked to make John Benedict richer. I'd think how he had everything, and Lily had nothing, and I'd say to myself that the day would come when he'd pay me for what he'd done to her. The day came when Lily died."

"That was——?"

"That was three days back. She'd been sick for a long time, but she was never one to say much about it. I tended her as best I could, but the doctor told me a week back that there was no hope. Then I knew that I'd soon have the reckoning to make. I had to keep her from guessing it, though. She might have made me promise not to touch him. But she went away without asking me. All she said was, 'I'll be waiting for you, Tom. Come soon.'"

His old eyes seemed to be looking beyond us, beyond the bare walls, beyond space, as if they gazed into other eyes that met and answered their tenderness. Some power so impelling brooded over us all that I knew why Justin set his hand over mine and why tears glistened in Kenneth Winnerly's eyes. We knew that, for all the simple candor of its telling, we stood in the presence of a great love, twisted though it would prove to be into a great revenge. We were all silent for a long time. Then Tom Foran went back to his story.

"I telephoned to Benedict that morning. I said to him, 'I'm Tom Foran.' He gasped and spluttered into the telephone. 'I live in the shack down Doane street, next to the river,' I told him. 'I want you to come at 9 o'clock tonight. If you don't come to me then, I'll go to you another time.' He didn't say a word, but I knew he'd come.

"It was half past 9 when he came. The Timber Wolf Special goes through at 8:51. I let her by, and set the signals. The Sunset Trail Limited comes next, at 10:06. I was wondering if he'd come in time to let me back to give her the bridge, when I heard the knock on the door there. I opened it, and, after twenty-seven years John Benedict came back into my house.

"He stood there, in front of the window. You know how big he was. In the light from the candles around Lily's coffin he loomed like a great shadow. He looked gray as he stared at me. 'Then she's dead?' he said, and his voice was no more than a whisper. 'She's dead,' I told him; 'but her heart died on the day you sent her away.'

"'I've meant to do right by her, Tom,' he said. 'I've always meant it. I've made out my will, leaving every cent to her.'

"'What good'll it do her?' I asked him.

"'She wouldn't take money from me,' he said. 'Can I look at her?'

"'No,' I told him.

"He edged nearer to me. 'Tom,' he said, 'you know I'm rich. There are plenty of women I could have married. If I didn't marry any one of them, it was because of Lily. Won't you let me look at her?'

"'No,' I said.

"He flung back his head at that. 'I never begged anything of any man,' he said, and he started to the door. 'I'm not through with you,' I told him, and stepped in front of him. 'You're going to listen to me.'

"He listened. I told him how Lily had come back to me, broken and beaten by life and him. I showed him how she'd come creeping up in the night from the town below the Bend because she couldn't face the crowd at the station. I told him how she'd sobbed and clung to me. I told him how she'd turned to me, and hated him. I told him how I'd planned to go down to Denver and kill him, but how she'd held me because she was afraid of life without me. 'That's what you'd done to her,' I said to him, 'to the girl who had never feared anything in this world or the next before you took her. That's why I didn't go after you twenty-seven years ago. I had to wait till Lily died. And now——'

"He'd been listening to me with a queer look in his eyes while I talked of her, a look of pain and remorse. It changed when I moved toward him. 'You're not—not going to kill me?' he asked me. 'Not while she lies there?'

"'Because she lies there,' I told him.

"'We're old men, Tom,' he said.

"'Not too old to pay the price of our youth,' I cried.

"He moved back toward the window, slipped off his overcoat, then made a lunge at me. I'm agile, and he wasn't, and I slipped under his arm. Around and around the room we went, with no lights but the tapers over Lily's coffin. Over there, by the little flower stand I'd made for her geraniums, he slipped. I sprang on him, and killed him. It was queer, it was so easy. He died easier than Lily had.

"The clock in the kitchen struck 10. I'd forgotten to stop it when Lily died. I remembered the Sunset Trail, due at the bridge at 10:06. I had to go to the tower, but I couldn't leave him, dead though he was, and dead though she was, in the room here with Lily. And so I carried him out.

"I dragged him, step by step, to the tracks. I'd thought I'd take him to the river so that they wouldn't find him for a day or two, not until she was buried, but I hadn't the time. The limited had left the terminal and would be at the bridge in two minutes more. I had to let him lie on the roadbed while I went up in the tower. Burgess was whistling for the targets when I got there. I set the green, and let him through.

"I'd thought I'd go down and take Benedict off the tracks when I saw a man come off the platform and go to where he lay. Then I knew I couldn't go back. Then a woman came. I watched them, then remembered to shift back the targets to red. Then I came back to the house here, got Benedict's overcoat, and took it out with me when I went to signal the local. There isn't another train for two hours then. I came back here, and all night, between the trains, I kept watch. Just before dawn I felt that Lily knew and understood.

"I told them today I was leaving the tower and to send another man. As soon as he came, I meant to tell the police. Do you want me to go with you now?"

I looked at Winnerly for an answer, but it was Justin who spoke. "If you want to get away, Foran," he said in a strangely husky voice, "you'd better go now."

"What about you?" Winnerly asked him.

"I'll take my chances," he said.

Winnerly stood up. "You can't do that, my boy," he said, "and there's no need. I know a lawyer who can make him tell that story again so that no jury will send him down. And if he doesn't take it—but, by God, I'll make him!" His square jaw snapped. "Will you be willing to come with me?" he asked Foran. "I think I can save you, confession and all."

"It doesn't matter," Tom Foran said. "I've always planned to pay the price." He turned to me, as if seeing me for the first time. "If anything happens to me, miss," he said, "will you put some geraniums in the spring on Lily's grave?"

Justin and I stood in the darkness of Doane street while Foran locked the door of the little shack. I was struggling to keep down my sobs when Justin spoke to me. "After all," he said, "the love that holds through the dark is the only one. Isn't it?" I felt the clasp of his hand on mine. "O, my dear," I said, "we can't——"

"Not now," he said, "but some day——"

"Perhaps," I told him, as we followed Winnerly and old Tom Foran down the street. Beneath the rays of light from the widows of the Benedict plant the old man strode on, not fearfully, as if he were going to trial, but trustfully, as if he knew the end of the road and were setting forth upon his right of way.

him. "Can you come back tomorrow at this time and bring Terry?" he asked me.

"Will they let him come?"

"O, yes, he's on bail," Rothan said.

Winnerly twinkled. "With Rothan interested already," he said, "we've turned one corner." The lean man smiled as I went out.

I telephoned to Justin at his apartment, asking him to meet me at the Athletic club. He came, I think, for news of Natalie. He looked so worn and troubled that I hesitated to tell him the truth. "Mother thinks," I tried to smooth it down, "that it would be better that you didn't see Natalie just now."

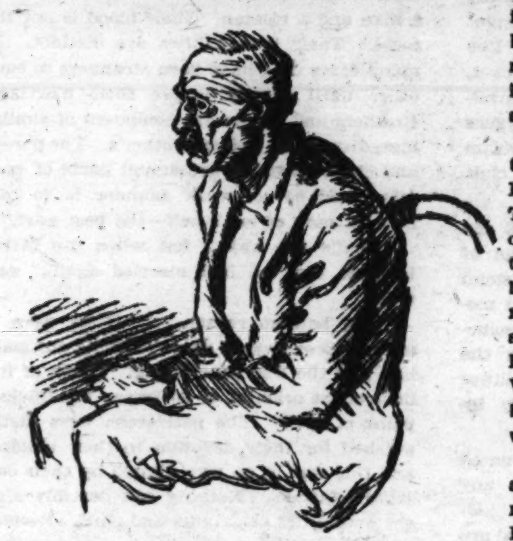
"What does Natalie think?"

"She's so distressed and troubled that she is letting mother think for her. She isn't much more than a child, you know."

"But you came in—and saw Winnerly."

"But I'm——"

"Yes, you're different." He gave me a strange look that sent the blood pounding up to my ears. "I don't want Natalie to worry," he said after a moment's pause. "Tell her I leave the full decision to her. If she wants to see me she'll let me know. I'll do nothing until she does. I'll have enough to think about," he said bitterly. "in fighting this charge."



"But Winnerly——"

"What can Winnerly find out that we don't know?" he protested. "It's good of you and Mme. Marshall to interest him, but here are the facts: John Benedict is murdered, and his body set on the tracks near the bridge. I am found stooping over him. No one else seems guilty, so a jury of my peers picks me."

"O, if I hadn't seen you!"

"Some one else would have."

"But will they make me swear that I found you there?"

"That'll make no difference. Hanner, the watchman, will testify that I left the plant at 9:45. Lane will tell that Benedict left the car about 9:30. Hanner knows he didn't go into the plant. Rita Kubal and a dozen others will testify that Benedict and I quarrelled bitterly that morning and threatened each other. Men do, you know, when they are angry enough, and Benedict and I were angry. He had ordered me to run in substitutes, low grade stuff, in the sales. I refused. One word led to another. He was ugly, anyhow, that morning. Something—a telephone call, I think—had upset him."

"Who called?"

"I don't know. And, anyhow, I'm the one held. It all pieces together against me."

"But there's the knife. It hasn't been found."

"It may be lost in the snow."

"Winnerly will find something."

"I haven't your faith, Edith," he said as I left him, but the look he gave me lingered in my heart.

I went out to Carpenter house, only to meet there a definite and general opinion that Justin had killed John Benedict. They all deplored it, of course, wondering how he could have committed the crime, and, in a way, since Benedict was unpopular and the murder not sordid, rather hoped he would come out free; but the impression of his guilt persisted in spite of my defense of him, and I went to the weaving room to be alone.

Rita Kubal's sister followed me there with the news that a man wanted to see me. The hope that some one might bring us a peg on which to hang hope led me to tell her to bring him in. When he came my heart sank to see that my caller was Tom Foran.

The old man looked crushed by the grief of his wife's death. "I heard that you came over night before last," he said, twirling his battered old cap in nervous hands. "I want to thank you, miss, for coming."

"I am sorry I couldn't get in," I said. "Is there anything I can do now?"

"Would you want to come to the funeral?" he asked, watching me with wistful eyes. "It'll be this afternoon. A few of the men who have worked with me will be there, but I thought—I thought perhaps she might have liked to have a woman come. And I don't know any women."

That was how I happened to go to the funeral of a woman whom I had hardly known in her lifetime.

I had seen death more than once in the course of the years I had worked at Carpenter house, but it seemed to me that I have never seen it in so lonely, so tragic a guise as it wore when it came to the Forans. The little shack, pitifully bare, made gloomy setting for the simple service through which poor old Tom Foran sat in a trance of grief while the minister, shabbily threadbare himself, read the solemn words. "I am the Resurrection and the Life," he ended. Then four men lifted the bare coffin to the waiting hearse, and they, the old man and I entered a big black car and drove to one of the new cemeteries to the westward. Under a gray sky that drooped with threat of another storm, we watched the box lowered into the snow of the broken ground. Perhaps it was because my own worries brought me closer to the sorrows of others, but nothing in all my life saddened me as had that somber scene.

I left the men at the cemetery gate and took the street car back to the settlement. I could not face mother and Natalie then. They seemed too detached from the realities of life, too sheltered for understanding of them, and so, to avoid them, I waited until late before I started for home. Natalie and mother had gone to bed and apparently to sleep, but grandmother called me as I passed her door. I went in and told her of Kenneth Winnerly and his talk of her. "He certainly liked cake," she chuckled. "Well, maybe it was cast on the waters."

Justin and I went to Winnerly the next afternoon. Rothan had given him a summary of the evidence, but the finding of Benedict's coat on the side of the tracks and the declaration of McGrath that the footprints in the snow had been obliterated by the shifting of the icy particles was all that had been added to what we knew. Winnerly went over them like a man scanning a column of figures, and I was reminded by his method that he was a great executive rather than a great detective of the sleuthing school. I began to wonder if he were really the man to climb this stone wall of mystery when he swung around to question us.

Over and over our story he went, leading us in and out of the telling, but apparently unsatisfied with our meager tale. "Benedict went back that night with a definite purpose," he reasoned. "Rothan finds he left the plant at 4, attended a conference at the Manufacturers' association, and had dinner alone at the Union club. Then he rode out to Carpenter. He left his car and did not go in the plant. Whom had he come to meet? That's the question."

"Some one telephoned him that morning," I said. "Justin and Rita Kubal have both said the call seemed to make him more than usually ugly."

"Did the switchboard operator notice the call?"

"There were a hundred a day for Benedict," Justin said. "All she remembers is that a man called who seemed unused to telephoning. He used a pay telephone because he had trouble about the coin."

"H'm," said Winnerly. "That begins to look as if we'd have to go back quite a distance to piece the puzzle. Perhaps Rothan has."

Rothan, while he had already delved back into Benedict's life, had no clew out of his information garnered from the storehouses of the Winnerly officer. Benedict, born in Missouri, had gone west with the extension of one of the transcontinental railroads. From track construction laborer he had risen to the superintendency of one of the contracts. He had gone into railroad construction contracting, starting the work on a small scale that grew with rapidity under his sledgehammer driving. For a couple of years he had lived in a little town named Staley's Bend, up in the Colorado mountains, leaving it for Denver. He had lived in Denver for six years. Then he had come east.

"Did he ever marry?" Winnerly asked.

"Denver wires no record, but some gossip," Rothan answered. "Woman came to Denver with him, but disappeared in a short time. That was twenty-seven years ago."

"Was there anything in his papers to give a line on a revenge motive?"

"Nothing, except ordinary business transactions. Some of them are fairly ugly, but they don't fill the bill."

"Have you seen everything?"

"Everything but the will. His attorneys hold that for probate."

"Watch it. And if nothing develops here within forty-eight hours, send an operator to Staley's Bend." He turned to us as Rothan went out. "I may be wrong," he said, "but a knife suggests vendetta."

"It's queer, isn't it," I speculated, "that he should be killed on the tracks after the years he has spent in building railroads?"

Kenneth Winnerly focused on me a blade-bright look. "Are you sure, quite sure," he demanded of me, "that you saw nothing else, no one else, while you stood over Benedict's body?"

"The switch lights shifted. That was all."

"Where are they?"

"In the semaphore arms on the Carpenter side of the bridge," Justin explained.

"From where are they operated?"

"From the tower near the bridge."

"On the Carpenter side of the river?"

"Yes."

"How are they operated?"

"There's a tower man."

"Could he have seen you from the tower?"

"Why, of course."

"And he didn't come?"

"He gave no sign."

"Who is he?"

"An old man who'd had the job for years and years. I think his name is Foran. He lives in a little hut on Doane street."

"Perhaps he didn't see us at all," I said. "His wife had died that day. It was to their house I went, Mr. Winnerly, when I left the settlement."

"And you didn't get in?"

He rose with alacrity surprising in so big a man. "We're going out to look over the ground," he said. He reached for his ulster as Rothan returned. "One of the men telephoned to me from the Probate court," he said, "that the Benedict will has just been filed. It leaves everything he had to a woman named Lily Davis."

"Relative?"

"Apparently not. It directs that $20,000 be spent within six months to find her."

"You might go to Benedict's lawyers, Rothan, while I'm out, and ask them if they want us to take the job for ten thousand."

"It might cost us more than that."

"It might," he said.

He drove his own car, a powerful roadster, steering it with amazing skill while he kept up a running commentary on the panorama of the city that unfolded itself as we went northward. Like grandmother, he had known its beginnings. Unlike her, he knew its ramifications, and his comments gleamed with knowledge of events and men, touched by a certain dry humor.

I was glad to see that his talk was taking Justin out of himself, for he had been strangely gloomy when I had met him in Winnerly's office, and I dreaded lest he lose his fighting spirit. Why, oh, why didn't Natalie come to him? I revolved the thought as I tried to keep my attention on the older man's conversation. Until I realized that I had brought myself into blazing anger against her. Then, with a sigh, I told myself that their adjustment of their lives was her and Justin's affair, not mine. All that I could do was hold faith in him and give help to him until he had proven to the world and Natalie what he need not prove to me.

We ran through the park to Carpenter avenue, then westward to the railroad station. It was not yet dark, but the factories along the way were great fortresses of light, facading the dusk. The light from the Benedict plant radiated to the railway roadbed as we came to the platform. Step by step we went with Kenneth Winnerly, living again those moments when we had found Benedict. He measured distances with his eye in the way of engineers ere he watched down the track to the bridge. He halted again, looking up at the tower. He beckoned to us, and we followed him up the stairs.

A stout, middle aged man opened the door grudgingly. "What do you want?" he growled at us. "Are you the night tower man?" Winnerly asked him. "No," he shouted. "Who is?" "Tom Foran," he exploded, and shut the door in our faces.

Justin and I started back to the platform, but Winnerly halted us. "This is a short cut," he said, and led us across the stretch of ground that backed to Foran's shack.

The old man flung back the door in answer to Winnerly's knock. He looked at Winnerly and Justin without curiosity, and took the hand I held out to him. "Mr. Winnerly is trying to find out more about the murder of Mr. Benedict," I explained, "and he thought that, since you are on duty in the tower at night, you might have seen something that will lead us to the truth about it."

He motioned us to the few chairs that ranged around the room where his wife had lain dead when I had been in it only the day before. He had the queer, burned-out look of a man who has lived his life and who waits with sodden patience for death to claim him. His eyes seemed to be looking far beyond us as he answered Winnerly's question of what he knew of Benedict's murder.

"I know all about it," he said.

"Will you tell us?" Winnerly asked him.

"There's not so much to tell," he said, his toneless old voice striking against the bare walls of the room. "I've known Benedict since he came to Staley's Bend. That was twenty-nine years ago in April. I was the contract inspector for that section. I'd been married just the year before, and we'd fixed up the house the way folks do when they're young, and happy, and loving each other.— Lily—she was my wife—and I had known each other since we were boy and girl in Iowa. She——"

"What was her name?" Winnerly inquired.

"Lily—Lily Davis."

"Oh, yes," said Winnerly. "And then Benedict came?"

"He was one of the contractors. He seemed to take a liking to me, and we grew to be friends. He used to come up to the house because we were sorry for him, living in the camp and liking it none too well. I never thought anything about it. It was the way of the west in those days, anyhow, and Lily and I said to each other that we had happiness enough to spare a little bit for the lonely fellows who drifted along."

He paused, as if he pondered upon the too brief spell of those days, while Winnerly watched him with considering attention and Justin and I with breathless wonder. "One day I went home from work," he went on, "and found that Lily had gone away—with Benedict."

"What did you do?" Winnerly questioned.

"What can a man do? I hadn't made her happy, I figured, and he might, and so I left them to work it out. I got a divorce and notified her of it, and let her know she could take back her name of Lily Davis."

"That was why Benedict left her the money under that name," Justin murmured to me.

"I thought he'd marry her when he heard he could. But he didn't. He tired of her, and he offered to give her ten thousand dollars—he was making a lot of money by that time—if she'd leave him. She left him, but she wouldn't take any of his money."

"Where did she go?"

"She came back to me."

"And you took her?"

"What else could I do?" He stared at us each in turn. "I always loved Lily."

"And Benedict?"

His old face hardened. "The night she came back, I told her I'd kill him. She begged me not to. It wasn't that she loved him then. But he'd broken her in the time she'd been with him. She'd grown afraid, afraid of everything in the world but me. She'd say to me, 'Tom, if you kill John Benedict, they'll take you for it, and hang you.' I used to tell her that I didn't care, that I'd be willing to die as long as I'd sent him out ahead of me and he knew why I'd done it. But she'd say, 'Tom, if they hang you, there won't be any one in the whole wide world to care about me, and what'll become of me?' So I didn't say anything to her after awhile about killing Benedict, but I made a vow to myself that, if Lily died before me, I'd give him the death he deserved."

"Why didn't you kill him when he'd first taken your wife?" Winnerly asked.

"I thought she loved him, and he loved her, and would be good to her. When he treated her the way he did, flung her away when he tired of her, as if she'd been——God, I had to kill him!"

"When did you come here?"

"Twenty years ago. I always kept my eye on Benedict. We moved out of Staley's Bend because I knew that Lily couldn't stand it there after every one knew about her and Benedict. We went to Denver. Then Benedict moved east, and I followed him. Lily guessed why I came, but she wasn't sure till I got this job in the tower and settled down here in front of Benedict's factory.

"For twenty years I've watched it grow, stone on stone, and acre on acre. For twenty years I've watched John Benedict grow

In the Case of Dora Risser

Proving a Point for the Man Who Wrote About Pleasures, Palaces and Home, Sweet Home.

"IF you wish a story of human interest," said Miss Underhill, distinctly, "I think this one would do. It is unique and has fine possibilities of pathos. It might almost evolve into a 'teary tale.'"

She leaned her elbow on the city editor's desk as she spoke, and regarded that awe-inspiring young man with a serene eye. She was not easily impressed, and she wholly declined to look upon him with the reverential wonder which the other members of his staff affected. It happened, therefore, that the city editor had days of but lukewarm enthusiasm over Miss Underhill's work, and this was one of them.

"Don't see much in it," he said, tersely. "Old woman, old attic, old story. We've done it too often."

Miss Underhill smiled in the slightly superior manner that invariably got on the city editor's nerves.

"O, but this is so different," she said. "This old woman—my discovery—has spent twenty-nine years in one tenement room on Forsyth street. During those years she has never left that room. She is a cripple, and she sits in a chair by the window, and all day long, with her hands folded in her lap, she looks down on the festering street and thinks. She is absolutely alone. If the neighbors remember to bring her something to eat during the day she has it. If they forget, she doesn't. Usually one of the tenement women comes in at night and puts her to bed. Sometimes they forget that, and then she dozes in her big chair until morning. A little Jewish society pays her rent and has paid it for many years, but no one else except the tenement women does anything for her. She has become to them and to their successors during these years a kind of legacy, passed from one to the other. She goes with the rooms and the occupants must look out for her."

The city editor looked bored.

"Can't see it yet," he announced, brusquely. "Can't see more than a few paragraphs at the most."

Miss Underhill passed over the interruption with her usual blithe unconcern.

"What I want to do," she continued, cheerfully, "is to take the old woman for a drive. I want to get her out of that tenement room—for the first time in twenty-nine years, remember—and show her the world. I want her to see the park, and the trees, and the sky, and the river, and the boats on it, and the elevated trains, and the tall new buildings, and I want to write a story telling what she thinks of New York after her Rip Van Winkle sleep."

The city editor's lips relaxed in an unwilling smile.

"That'll do," he said, briskly. "Go ahead."

Miss Underhill went ahead with characteristic energy. She had, also characteristically, made all her arrangements before she consulted the city editor, in serene assurance that the story would "go," as she put it to herself. She even remembered to mention to the old woman her share in the program. A small detail like that Miss Underhill sometimes forgot.

"I'm going to take you for a drive," she said, cordially. "I want you to get a breath of fresh air and to have a good time. Then I'll make a story of it."

Old Mrs. Risser looked worried. It was a vast undertaking to her—this drive—and not to be lightly assumed. She listened without enthusiasm to Miss Underhill's rapidly outlined plans of nurses to carry her down the stairs, rubber tired wheels, and kindred comforts. Neither did the beauties of nature, held up to her imagination, inspire her with interest. Once only her faded old eyes showed a gleam of satisfaction, and this was when Miss Underhill dwelt on the commotion the proposed drive was already creating in the tenement.

"They'll all be at the windows to see you off," she announced, and Mrs. Risser listened with a satisfied quiver of her loose old lips and unconsciously drew herself up in her chair.

The next day Miss Underhill drove down Forsyth street with a comfortable sense of satisfaction in her breast. She was getting a good story and she was at the same time doing a kindly act—a combination not so frequent as it should be in her reportorial career. She had borrowed the motor of a wealthy friend for the occasion, and as the car rolled quietly through the filthy street the chauffeur held his head unusually high. He did not approve of these slum excursions.

Miss Underhill smiled serenely at the dirty waifs of humanity drifting behind and running beside the car. The odors arising from neglected ash barrels and decaying refuse offended her nostrils, but did not affect her high spirits. She ran lightly up the three flights of tenement stairs leading to Mrs. Risser's room and tapped gayly on the door. The noise of moans and lamentations from within broke upon her ear, mingled with another more rhythmic sound. She hesitated a moment and walked in.

In her accustomed chair sat Dora Risser, stiff in the unusual freshness of a new gingham waist. Her hands and face offered mute but eloquent testimony to the efforts of a trained nurse who had scoured them enthusiastically and was now energetically at work brushing into smoothness the old woman's gray hair.

Big tears fell unchecked on the smooth expanse of gingham over the victim's breast, and great sobs shook her thin figure. At intervals a moan burst from her, mingling dolefully with the cheerful voices of two Salvation army girls who stood beside her singing a hymn with great vigor. The nurse looked harassed but undaunted. Her eye brightened a little as Miss Underhill entered. "She's ready," she said, tersely.

Perhaps it was the curt professional tone, or possibly a sense of entire helplessness in the hands of others, that made Mrs. Risser break into another anguished wail. The Salvation Army lassies, ignoring both this interruption and that of Miss Underhill's appearance, fell on their knees and offered up a short prayer. Then one of them volunteered a kindly explanation to the reporter, who stood still, reverent but puzzled.

"She thinks you and the nurse are going to take her to some home for old ladies," she said, "where she cannot see the tenement people or have her own home. She wishes to stay here. She likes her home."

Miss Underhill smiled her thanks and crossed to the weeping old woman. Sitting down before her, she took one of her subject's unwilling hands in hers.

"Now, Mrs. Risser," she said, "I want you to enjoy this ride, so I'm going to say a few words to you before we start. I give you my word of honor that this is to be only a ride and that I will bring you back here safely in three hours at the most. You shall return and stay here, and your life will go on as usual. I am glad you like it. I do not intend to interfere in it. But I want to give you one good ride. Are you satisfied?"

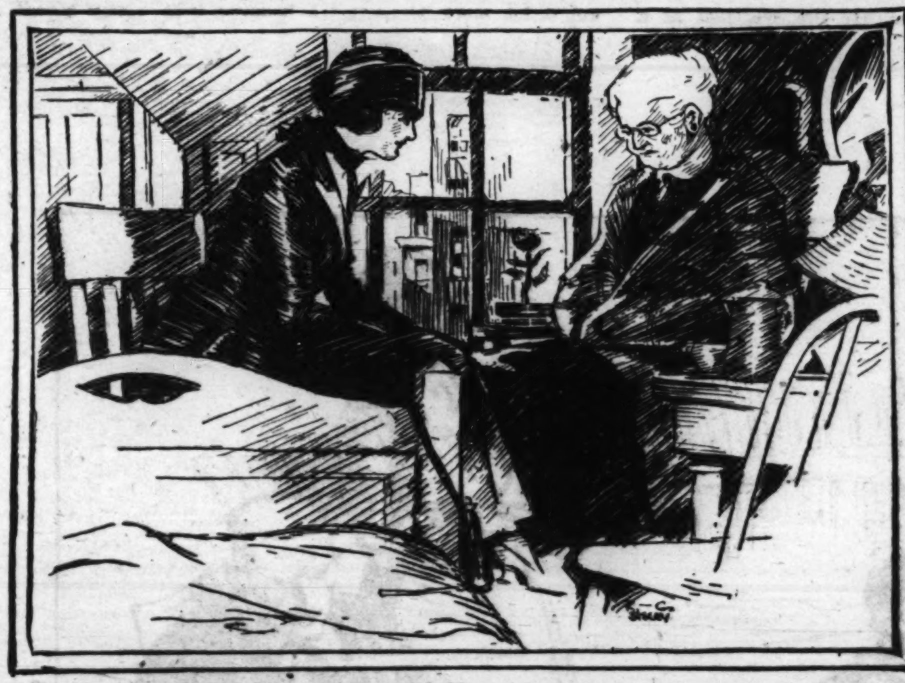
Mrs. Risser looked doubtful.

"You sure bring me back—sure?" she asked.

"I surely will," the girl answered.

"Tell her so, too," she said, turning to the Salvation lassies. They bent over the old woman and whispered to her quickly for a few moments. Miss Underhill caught the words "kind lady," "nice time," and "fresh air" in occasional staccato tones. Dora Risser wiped her eyes, sniffed drearily, and announced her willingness to go. The men Miss Underhill had engaged to assist the nurse in the difficult work of getting her patient downstairs entered and the descent began.

The task was a formidable one, but an unexpected factor made it less painful than Miss Underhill had dared to expect. That factor was the simple vanity that blossomed suddenly in Dora Risser's heart. On every landing was an impressed group of tenement women gazing at the scene with wide eyed awe, and their interest in the episode of which she was the central figure soothed the old woman to serene unconcern as to her own danger or discomfort. She smiled patronizingly upon her friends and nodded innumerable farewells, which they returned with the stiffness of unwonted ceremony. Miss Underhill's glowing face shone radiantly from the group as she directed and advised in her practical, assertive manner. Once on the street it was a simple matter to lift the woman into the low motor and settle her comfortably among the soft pillows. As she yielded to their invitation, Miss Underhill was pained to observe the dark cloud returning to her brow.



She listened without enthusiasm to Miss Underhill's rapidly outlined plans.

The car moved forward smoothly. The early afternoon sun blazed hotly on the baking street and was thrown back in waves of heat from the grimy tenement walls. Ragged and dirty children followed her triumphal progress with shrieks of friendly interest, but all this escaped Dora Risser. She had turned her head and was looking up at the dirty windows of her own little room and as she looked the tears welled forth again and splashed drearily on the light wrap her new friends had thrown over her old shoulders. Miss Underhill observed them, but wisely said nothing, trusting to the charm of the new impressions and experiences awaiting her companion in the next three hours.

The misery and the squalor of the tenements dropped behind them as the car rolled into wider, cleaner streets. Miss Underhill drew a long breath as it reached lower Broadway, where the air, though heat smitten from the asphalt walks, was at least free from disease breeding odors. She chatted cheerfully to the unresponsive figure at her side, pointing out the tall new buildings, the black line of the elevated road in the distance, and the dark shadows of moving trains; but for these things Dora Risser had no heart. She cowered in a corner of the car, casting furtive, frightened glances out of her tear dimmed eyes and clutching the side of her seat with a feverish grip. Sometimes she whimpered a little under her breath.

All this, Miss Underhill reflected calmly, was but natural. The great city had grown up around the old woman as she slept, and not even the sound of its heart throbs found their way through the four thick walls that sheltered her. How could she be other, at first, than nervous and a little frightened? Once out of the business center, away from the noise and the roar of traffic and among quiet streets with beautiful homes, she would begin to look about. And when the soft green avenues of the park unrolled before her, and the gorgeous panorama of the Hudson and the Palisades met her view, the old woman would awaken and rejoice, and on the horrible walls of her beloved room would hang for all time the pictures of memory she brought home from this drive. Miss Underhill, preëminently matter of fact though she was, felt a lump in her throat as this occurred to her. It was a unique privilege to open such a vista to a starved human soul and mind.

As they turned into the park at the Fifty-ninth street entrance a wave of coolness and freshness rolled to meet them, and, to Miss Underhill's excited fancy, the great old trees seemed to bend and whisper a welcome to her protégé as the car rolled under their spreading branches. The newspaper woman's voice was a little hushed as she pointed out to the old woman the cool, green vistas opening at every side as they passed on. The ripple of water was heard in the distance, mingled with the laughter of little children. Through the trees they got glimpses of the lake and the swan boats and their happy freight. Tame squirrels sat by the roadside and chattered at them fearlessly. Over the park brooded the silence and green restfulness of an August afternoon whose intense heat made humanity take its outing lethargically.

Old Dora Risser gulped down a heavy sob and lifted her voice in the first remark of the afternoon.

"I got a geranium," she said, "in my winda." She was looking with a patronizing eye on a bed of that flaunting flower.

Miss Underhill, encouraged by this tentative advance, showed a polite interest.

"Yes," the old woman rambled on. "It's awful pretty. It's got red flowers. Miss Callahan she waters it for me most efry day. I hope it ain't dying now."

She wept afresh at this sad thought, and Miss Underhill hurriedly called her attention to a group of children playing happily on the carousal.

"We got nice little children in our house," said old Dora, still harping on the joys of home. "Little Josie Eckmeyer iss only 4 yearss old, but she comess to me efery night to kiss me when she goes to bedt."

Her tears burst forth again, and the occupants of passing cars looked with curious interest at the artless abandon of her grief. When the newspaper woman spoke it was a little more incisively than she intended.

"You must be very uncomfortable in that place," she said. "How can you bear the noise and the smells and the awful heat of it?"

Her companion looked frightened and ill used.

"It's a very quiet place, our house," she said, quickly. "We don't never haf such noices like they haf across the street. Of course the womans and the mans has little troubles, but that iss not my business. Mr. Rooney he threw Mrs. Rooney out a winda last week. She was hurt awful. She showed me the black marks on her back, and she had a arm broken. All the mans and womans has their troubles," repeated Mrs. Risser, philosophically.

"But they come in and they talk to me in my little room," she continued, eagerly. "They tell me about all the other neighbors, and they ask me what they must give the little childrens when they are sick, and they bring me little things what they cook. They don't often forget me—not often; they nefer left me without anything for more than two days. Most always they come in four or five times efery day. Sometimes"—here the old woman's voice quivered in reminiscent ecstasy—"sometimes one of the womans brings me a glass of beer."

For some reason she began again at this point to weep with great bitterness. Miss Underhill moved impatiently in her seat. This would be indeed "a teary tale," she reflected, if she put into it half the tears old Dora Risser had already shed. Somehow this "special" for the Searchlight was not developing quite in accordance with her wishes. She turned to the cowering figure at her side.

"Well," she said, briskly, "You're going back to all those joys very soon. But just this moment you are having an experience you will probably never have again. Try to get the benefit of it. Breathe deep and get some fresh air into your lungs. Look about you and see the grass and the trees and the blue sky overhead. When have you seen the sky before?"

Old Dora drew herself up with a little suggestion of hurt pride in the gesture.

"In my little room, my little room—" she repeated the words, dwelling upon them lovingly—"by the winda where my chair iss. There I can see a big piece of sky, 'most as big as a little carpet. It is blue, and some

SPICE

BLUE RIBBON FICTION

SYNOPSIS.

Sydney Penfold Isham Chester Elting, whose initials won him at school the obvious nickname, "Spice," comes back to America and a friend's studio expecting to find life a humdrum affair after his adventures as an aviator in France. On the morning after his return a pretty girl waves at him from a window across the way, whereupon Spice promptly falls in love with her portrait, which he discovers in the studio. Shortly afterward his father, an admiral, arrives with the disconcerting news that he has married a widow and that Spice now has a stepsister of great beauty and impressive accomplishments. That night Spice sees three men breaking into the house across the way, which, he has learned, is the home of Bernardo Aria, a famous financier, and his daughter Esther, the girl of the portrait. He helps Aria shoot down the maurauders and volunteers his aid in fighting a band of anarchists against whom Aria proves to be secretly operating on behalf of the government. The next day Spice receives a call from his stepsister, Marcia Step, whom he greets with marked coolness. Marcia refuses to be abashed by his deliberate discourtesy, and shows eager interest when she gets from a newspaper an inkling of Spice's encounter with the supposed burglars.

SECOND INSTALLMENT.

The 101 Club.

"MERCIFUL heavens, Spice," she cried, "I flattered you!"

Don't be too sure. That's a yellow rag you've got. Organ of the hurdy-gurdy species."

She looked at him with a sudden flame of admiration, cheeks crimson, fresh lips parted, and the seductive qualities of her nymph-like face so generally enhanced that Spice was obliged to look at the portrait of Esther Aria in order to steel his heart against her radiant loveliness. "I did, though," she cried. "I thought that you might have gone out innocently to welcome yourself home and been requested to drop in and say good-morning to the judge. But here you've gone and massacred three poor burglars who had dropped in to relieve a rich banker of a little of his superfluous profiteering. I'm ashamed of you, buddy, and I've a good notion to give you a sisterly hug that will crack your ribs."

Again the importunate woodpecker rapped on the door. "Come in," called Spice, and Katie entered, followed by two well dressed young men with copy written in their faces. Spice shook his head.

"Nothing doing, boys," said he. "I'm under orders to keep my mouth shut. Besides, I've got to beat it for police headquarters." He turned to Marcia. "Come on, sis. I'll drop you on the way."

They hurried down and scrambled into a taxi. "Ill drop you, Spice, and keep him on," said Marcia. "Now tell me all about it, please."

Spice gave her a bald account of his night's adventure. Marcia did not interrupt. Something appeared to have silenced her barrage. They reached headquarters and Spice stepped out.

"Where shall I tell him to go?" he asked.

"O, tell him to—to Philadelphia," murmured Marcia.

. . . . .

The 101 Club, which under the name of the Strugglers had attracted the attention of the A. P. L. during the war, had been disbanded and was now reformed under its new name. The club rooms were in a small brick house on a side street which led down to the water front not far from the Erie basin.

On the whole the street was well ordered, its inhabitants principally composed of the better class of artisans. On one side of the club was a rooming house with table board, which catered to its members. On the other side the premises were now vacant and offered for rent, the extra workers which it had housed during the war having gone their ways.

One entering the club would have found it precisely as expected. Downstairs a small writing room with a telephone in front and a reading room in the rear. Upstairs, a lounge or clubroom in front and billiard room in the rear. The top story had four bedrooms, bathroom with two showers, and a large closet for baggage with clothes lockers. The place was very neat and clean, comfortably furnished and kept in order by a janitor and his wife who lived in the basement.

Men came and went from the club at all hours of the day and night. The delivery of a local liquor merchant made frequent visits and left a keg of beer on Saturday nights, when the gathering usually consisted of a dozen or more. Women had been seen to enter escorted, and the parties on these occasions were sometimes noisy and prolonged.

On a sultry night in the middle of June four men were engaged in earnest conversation around a table in the clubroom, and despite the heat the windows were closed. From time to time they refreshed themselves from a tall glass pitcher of iced rhine wine which was frequently replenished by the buxom black eyed woman, of whom none took the slightest notice.

Perhaps the most peculiar feature of this quartet was the markedly different type of each. They were also rather distinctive in portraying their respective nationalities and occupations. Thus "Big Mike" would have been classified anywhere as a seafaring man in his early life and a dive proprietor in his later. At his elbow a sinewy man of about 40, with smooth shaven face, "sideboards," and a shifty eye, had all the earmarks of a ship's steward. Next to him sat a spruce, swarthy young fellow with a compact frame and a keen, intelligent face, known to the others as "Tony," a South American, and an expert airplane machinist. The fourth, a deserter from the Austrian army before America entered the war, was also a skilled airman who had been recently employed in aircraft construction. His name was Lorenz and at one time he had been a tutor of applied mechanics in a technical college.

Each of this precious four had dabbled in crime to some extent, Mike in his capacity of divekeeper, Steward Johnson as petty thief and accomplished forger, Tony as a courier and swindler of the travel routes of central Europe, and Lorenz, the most sinister and daring of the lot, had a murder to his account, its object the plundering of a Viennese nobleman half drunk and returning to his hotel incautiously laden with the fruits of a coup at baccarat.

The topic of their conversation at this moment was that of ways and means for the assassination of Bernardo Aria, the banker. They were in fact what might be called deputies of the murder committee of their organization and the successful accomplishment of their task meant the making of their individual fortunes. There was about these men something horrible, more so because they were lacking in those qualities which lend to certain forms of anarchy, nihilism, or even mere criminality a certain touch of romance and a thrill of partly admiring dread. They were not terrible as savage beasts are terrible, man eating tigers, or ravening wolves, but with the sinister loathsomeness of crocodiles or octopi, other cold blooded creatures of the slime and ooze.

Such as these do not charge or even stalk to tear or rend either for food, or self-defense, or idea, or even hate. They had not, like many anarchists and nihilists, the weal of their fellows at heart. Like the saurian, they drifted stealthily upward from their bed of filth in stagnant pool or sluggish backwater and dragged down their helpless prey with minimum risk and to fill each one his greedy paunch.

At this moment they were discussing the failure of the last attempt on the life of Aria. Formerly seven, they were now reduced to four, but this fact was not entirely displeasing to them, there being three less amongst which to divide the promised premium. Nevertheless, the fatal bungle gave them pause, for here obtained no spirit of self-sacrifice to a devoted though mistaken cause. None of them took the pains to make any such pretense to his fellows, let alone himself. They left that part of it to college professors and other fanatics of lop sided intelligence.

"Well, any'ow," said Steward Johnson, setting down his glass, "'ere they've garn and fluked it, so now it's up to us."

"Your turn next, mate," said Big Mike, heavily.

"And you've got to be quick about it," Lorenz warned. "If Aria gets this stuff of his across we might as well quit. The immigration thing alone would cripple us. Our trouble is in not having enough of the right people over here, and these damned Yanks are not as easy going as they used to be. The day is past when a Trotsky got his papers and a warm shake of the hand and was told to go to it with the best wishes of Uncle Sam."

"It's not going to be any cinch," said Tony, "especially now that we've got him scared."

"Don't you myke any mistyke about the blighter bein' scared," said Johnson in his cockney whine. "There ain't scare enough in that 'Ebrew to chivvy an 'are. 'E's artful, that's all. Artful and sly like all 'is ryce. A man can be cautious without bein' afr'id, and that is just the 'ardest sort to 'andle because he don't take any unnecessary risks."

"What's this stuff about his buying airplanes?" Tony asked. "Did you see them, steward?"

"I saw the 'angar built for them. What's more, I saw the lad 'e's tyken on to operate them, this 'ere young Oakes."

"The British ace?"

"That's 'im. Of course, this stuff about 'is sufferin' from h'asthma and wantin' to try goin' up when tyken with a spell is all bull. Aria's deeper than that. Once up, who's going to know where he's off to?"

"When are you going to see old Elting?" asked Big Mike.

"Tomorrow morning at the yacht broker's. I don't trouble myself any about getting the billet, thanks to my 'abit of alw'ys keepin' a little of the stationery of the yachts I've served aboard." He reached in his pocket, drew out a wallet, and produced two envelopes, each of which bore the crossed burgees and penants of well known American steam yachts and the New York Yacht club. "Carst your eyes on those, mytes."

The recommendations forged were to the same effect, one in the unsteady hand of age and signed by a famous old yachtsman since deceased, the other by one at that moment serving on his own armed craft somewhere in European waters. In each the steward's excellent and efficient capabilities were warmly though not excessively indorsed.

"That ought to turn the trick," grunted Big Mike. "You don't think there's any doubt about Aria bein' often aboard?"

"No bloomin' fear. 'E and the admiral are thick as thieves, and besides the old cove's daughters 'ave their summer 'omes thereabouts, so the yacht will no doubt be lyin' off the place a good bit of the season. Now that young Elting 'as dug 'is oar in, there will be family parties and the like. It's the charnce of a lifetime."

"What do you propose to feed him, steward?" Lorenz asked, in his haughty and rather cultivated voice.

"I'd thought of toadstools, sir." There was positively no reason why Johnson should have tacked the "sir" to his answer, the whole idea of the organization of which they were but one of the many poison stings being the total levelling of class distinctions. But the crisp, curt voice of the Austrian brought it out of him as though reflexly.

"Toadstools?"

"Yes, poisonous mushrooms. They are always to be 'ad in the summer if one looks about the woods a bit. I 'appen to know the different varieties, 'avin' myde a bit of study on the subject. Certain kinds are as sure death as potassium cyanide, and nothing could be proved on me. A toadstool or two in the mushroom sauce of the vol-au-vent or in a purée of mushroom soup, and there you are. The market people would be blamed, or the chef, maybe."

Big Mike looked a little skeptical. "Are them things that p'isenous?" he asked.

"If you 'ave any doubts, just try it on your wife's mother," Johnson answered warmly. "I've known of 'ole families bein' laid low. Aria is doubtless an 'earty eater, but if any the others should 'appen to farncy the dish we will call it the 'and of Gawd and other public enemies." He gave his deprecating smirk.

There was a moment of reflective silence, then Tony shrugged. "Well, go ahead and have your shot." He stared across at Lorenz and appeared to be turning something in his mind. "These other dubs have gummed it on the land. Now you can try it on the water, and if they get you, which is always possible, then Lorenz and I can try it in the air."

. . . .

"About the worst thing that can happen in a family," said Mr. Aria, "is the rupture of loving relations between parent and child. It is worst than the death of either—but then, there are a great many things worse than death."

"There hasn't been any actual quarrel, sir," said Spice.

"It would have been better if there had. A quarrel is easier to mend than a separation, just as a cut heals quicker than a fracture. The more hot blooded a disagreement the better the chances of repair. But a coldly polite withdrawal of affectionate relations between father and son is like the fracture of the epiphysis from the end of a bone. There is the danger of failing to get union again."

The banker looked across the distant sparkling waters of the sound. The big car was gliding in a long and continuous procession of motor vehicles reaching for miles and miles and traveling at uniform speed, the great afternoon file which leads out of New York on every radiating thoroughfare through the summer months.

"A breach of sympathy between husband and wife is bad enough," Mr. Aria continued in his magnetic voice, "and estrangements between brothers and sisters most unhappy. But after all a religious or civil service or the act of love itself does not constitute more than a spiritual or physical union between a man and a woman. Their blood is not the same. Their personalities are distinct. In many cases they have been strangers to each other until shortly before their marriage. Brothers and sisters are composed of similar ingredients, but not each other's. The parent and child, however, are actual parts of each other and so to break asunder is to tear away a part of one's self—the best part."

"That's the way I felt when my father told me that he had married again," said Spice.

"You had no reason to. If he were to marry ten or twenty wives it would not make him any the less your father. Think of it a little in the oriental, or let us say the Biblical, point of view. The patriarchs were distinguished for their devotion to their children and this was in no way diluted by their conjugal relations. Nothing can possibly alter the actual ties of parents and child. Besides, love is not like a material estate or legacy which suffers attrition by each additional heir. If I were to marry again, which is most improbable, do you suppose it would in any way affect my love for my daughter, Esther?"

Spice did not answer. As it is absolutely impossible for youth to understand the motives of age he would not have known what to say. Mr. Aria knocked the ash from his cigar and smoked for a few moments in thoughtful silence.

"After all," said he, presently, "we are all precisely what our conscientious efforts make us. It is not so much what we do that defines us as what we want and try to do. Here am I a Central American Jew of Castilian descent offering myself as a sort of American St. Patrick to drive the snakes of anarchy out of this country and to stamp on the heads of such as try to enter it. That makes me, I maintain, rather more of an American than the scion of one of its colonial families who takes no active interest in the welfare of the nation."

"There's no doubt of that, sir," Spice agreed, warmly. "A French officer told us one day that we were more French than any French embusqué hiding behind the skirts of the etat major."

"He was quite right. And you were paying for the distinction in the very great risk to your lives—just as I am paying for mine at this moment. But life is, after all, no more than what we bankers might term a 'call' loan, and I am quite willing and prepared to liquidate mine at any moment. But I do want to accomplish two things first. One is to carry through this job of making the country anarchy proof and the other is to see my daughter established in her own home."

He smoked a little longer, then said: "Few people understand the gravity of the crisis which we are facing at this moment. It is found preferable that the public should not be asked to help just yet—on the same principle that when there is a fire in the house the fire chief should not stick his head out of a window and ask the crowd in the street to rush in and lend a hand. We learned that lesson in the war and its ensuing peace negotiations. At present I am rather like the fire chief, as distinguished from the fire commissioner, and it would be awkward if I were to be knocked in the head. How would you like to help avert this very possible inconvenience?"

"More than anything I can think of, sir."

"Well, then, you can consider yourself assigned forthwith to my establishment and take up your quarters with us as soon as possible. I saw your father in Washington and he thoroughly approves. It may be a dangerous service and then again nothing whatever may occur. In any case, you will be just as much in the service of your country as you were in France. I understand that aside from being an ace aviator you had a year's apprenticeship in an airplane construction plant after graduating from your technical school."

"Yes, sir."

"I've got one good man now. An English flyer named Oakes. You see, my aide, Dr. Adrian Isaacs, has taken every precaution for my safety at home, but I have to go frequently to Washington and I have recently had two narrow escapes en route. Worse than that, I believe the enemy to be quite capable of derailing an express that I was known to be aboard and killing half the passengers perhaps on the off chance of getting me. I have no right to expose people to such a risk."

"Then you propose to fly down, sir?"

"Yes. The plan has several advantages. I could make the journey in about a third or fourth the time and go at a moment's notice. There should be no danger en route or on arrival. For another thing which may sound trivial, but is anything but that to me, I suffer severely in the summer months from hay fever and asthma and the only relief I get is a high altitude. Heretofore I have gone to the mountains. But since this is now impossible why not keep an artificial mountain in a shed?" He looked at Spice and smiled. "Upon my word, Sidney, I believe that is a great commercial idea. Why not take victims like myself up several thousand feet to open their pipes?"

"I don't see why not, sir. There are all sorts of big commercial possibilities for aircraft. I want to get in on the ground floor of some of them."

"You shall—if we both live long enough," Mr. Aria answered, quietly. "I am taking up an air postal and passenger service on a very large scale and there is no reason whatever why you shouldn't hold down, or hold up, a high position in it. Well, here we are—and there is Esther coming across the lawn."

If Spice had cherished any lingering suspicion that his friend, Mr. Schuyler, had degenerated to the portrait painting school of flattery this was immediately dispelled as he was presented to Esther Aria.

The pigment splasher might indeed have tried as well to flatter a Rose of Sharon or to improve the iridescent coloring of a shell from the shores of the Red sea, and for that matter the same may be said of one making similar effort through the slinging of ink. This is because man's attempt at the depiction of beauty leaves always much to criticise, while that of God does not.

Not being a critic nor given to analysis in his enjoyment of a thing of perfect beauty, Spice would have been unable to say just how Esther Aria impressed him. She seemed to him very real, yet impossible, like some lovely creature of the imaginary school of art. This was perhaps because of her physical flawlessness. They are hedonists who claim that for the greatest physical charm there must be some irregularity, no matter how subtle, but a departure from perfect proportion to fascinate the eye, just as a free hand sketch with its unavoidable de partures from absolute truth of line and values must be more alluring to the eye than an exact mechanical reproduction which does not err.

No doubt this is true, as has been said of man's efforts. But, so far as symmetry is concerned, it does not apply to natural objects, and Esther being a natural object was no more subject to it than might be a flower of exact geometrical proportions, like a jasmine or lotus or water lily. One sees this physical perfection also in wild animals of which the race has never been mixed with alien strains, and to some extent in domestic ones, which for many generations have been bred to pure ones. It is the most rare in human beings for obvious reasons. But Esther possessed it, and for precisely the same reason as the jasmine or jaguar or thoroughbred filly—because her Semitic blood was so free of alien corpuscles. There had been no departure of a Burbank character in the parent stock of which she was a blossom.

The result was by no means an ethereal production, any more than one might find in the stately Caucasian or ripe and luscious Polynesian of pure race. Also, being so highly vitalized, the intensity of her swiftly changeful expression inhibited any possible monotony. The same was true of her bodily contours, which altered their form with each graceful movement, portraying at one moment the slender lines of youth and in the next assumed the fuller proportions of maturity. Mr. Aria had said that she was 18. Otherwise Spice might have been momentarily shifting her age to any year between 16 and 24.

When Spice came down after being shown the spacious quarters assigned him Esther was in the drawing room arranging some flowers in the Japanese way, with a view to the significance of the cluster.

"Do you believe in the symbolism of cut flowers, Mr. Elting?" she asked, tilting her head to observe the effect.

"Yes," he answered. "I don't know anything about it, and therefore I believe in it."

She looked at him with interest. "That's a very good idea—to believe in anything which is beautiful as long as one can."

"It's the only way," said Spice, "and you get a lot more pleasure. I believed that Schuyler was a beautiful painter until a few minutes ago. Now I think that he's a hopeless dauber."

Esther raised her dark eyebrows. "If you are trying to say something pretty," said she, "I'm afraid you have given yourself away. Wasn't the portrait covered?".

"It was—until little Katie brought up my breakfast and yanked off the sheet. Then I had to look."

"The little wretch! She ought to be smacked!"

"So had I," said Spice, "for staring at you out of the window. I got on centers somehow and didn't think. Will you forgive me?"

"What did you think when I looked up and waved?"

"Not being entirely a fool except when startled, I understood and guessed that you had probably been posing for Schuyler. When Katie came in and kindly favored me with a private view I was surprised only in degree."

"Mrs. Modecai and Katie feel a proprietary right in the portrait because they have watched it grow," said Esther. She gave the flowers a few extra touches. "Do you see what they express?"

"Jealousy."

"Nonsense! They say 'Welcome.' If they were not arranged they would merely say 'We are roses,' or 'We wish we were back in the garden.'"

Mr. Aria came down at this moment and they went out to stroll about the grounds. Two splendid French police dogs came bounding across the lawn and were duly presented to Spice. "They are youthful veterans like yourself," said the banker. "Dr. Isaacs brought them over with him. Both have done Red Cross duty at the front." He indicated a large, flat building a little above the water's edge. "That's the hangar, as you see. We've got two fast chasse machines and a hydroplane. Tomorrow you can tell me what you think of them."

They went in to dinner presently, when Spice met the two other members of the family, a Mrs. Mordecai, Esther's companion, and Dr. Isaacs. The latter was a young man, somewhat Spice's senior, distinguished in appearance and of powerful physique. He spoke with a pronounced English university accent and his manner was jolly and informal. He told Spice that he had himself been mustered out of the United States army only two months before, and that he had gone to France with the first expeditionary force."

"As surgeon?" Spice asked.

"Nothing as useful as that," said Isaacs with a laugh. "They nabbed me for a liaison officer. I speak a number of languages, and I suppose they thought I looked like a proper shock absorber. You see, a liaison officer has to be a sort of combination gang plank and fender. Then I did a little gumshoe stuff on the side."

"Isaacs was three times in Germany itself," said Mr. Aria, "and the last time he came near staying there for good."

Spice's favorable impression of his confrere increased. "How did you get out?" he asked.

"Swore myself most of the way and swam the rest. I believe a crosseyed Hottentot with the absolute lingo of the Prussian guardsman could have sworn himself back and forth across Germany indefinitely. All soldiers swear more or less, but the profane, abusive vocabulary of those haughty rotters makes anything else in that line sound like a benediction."

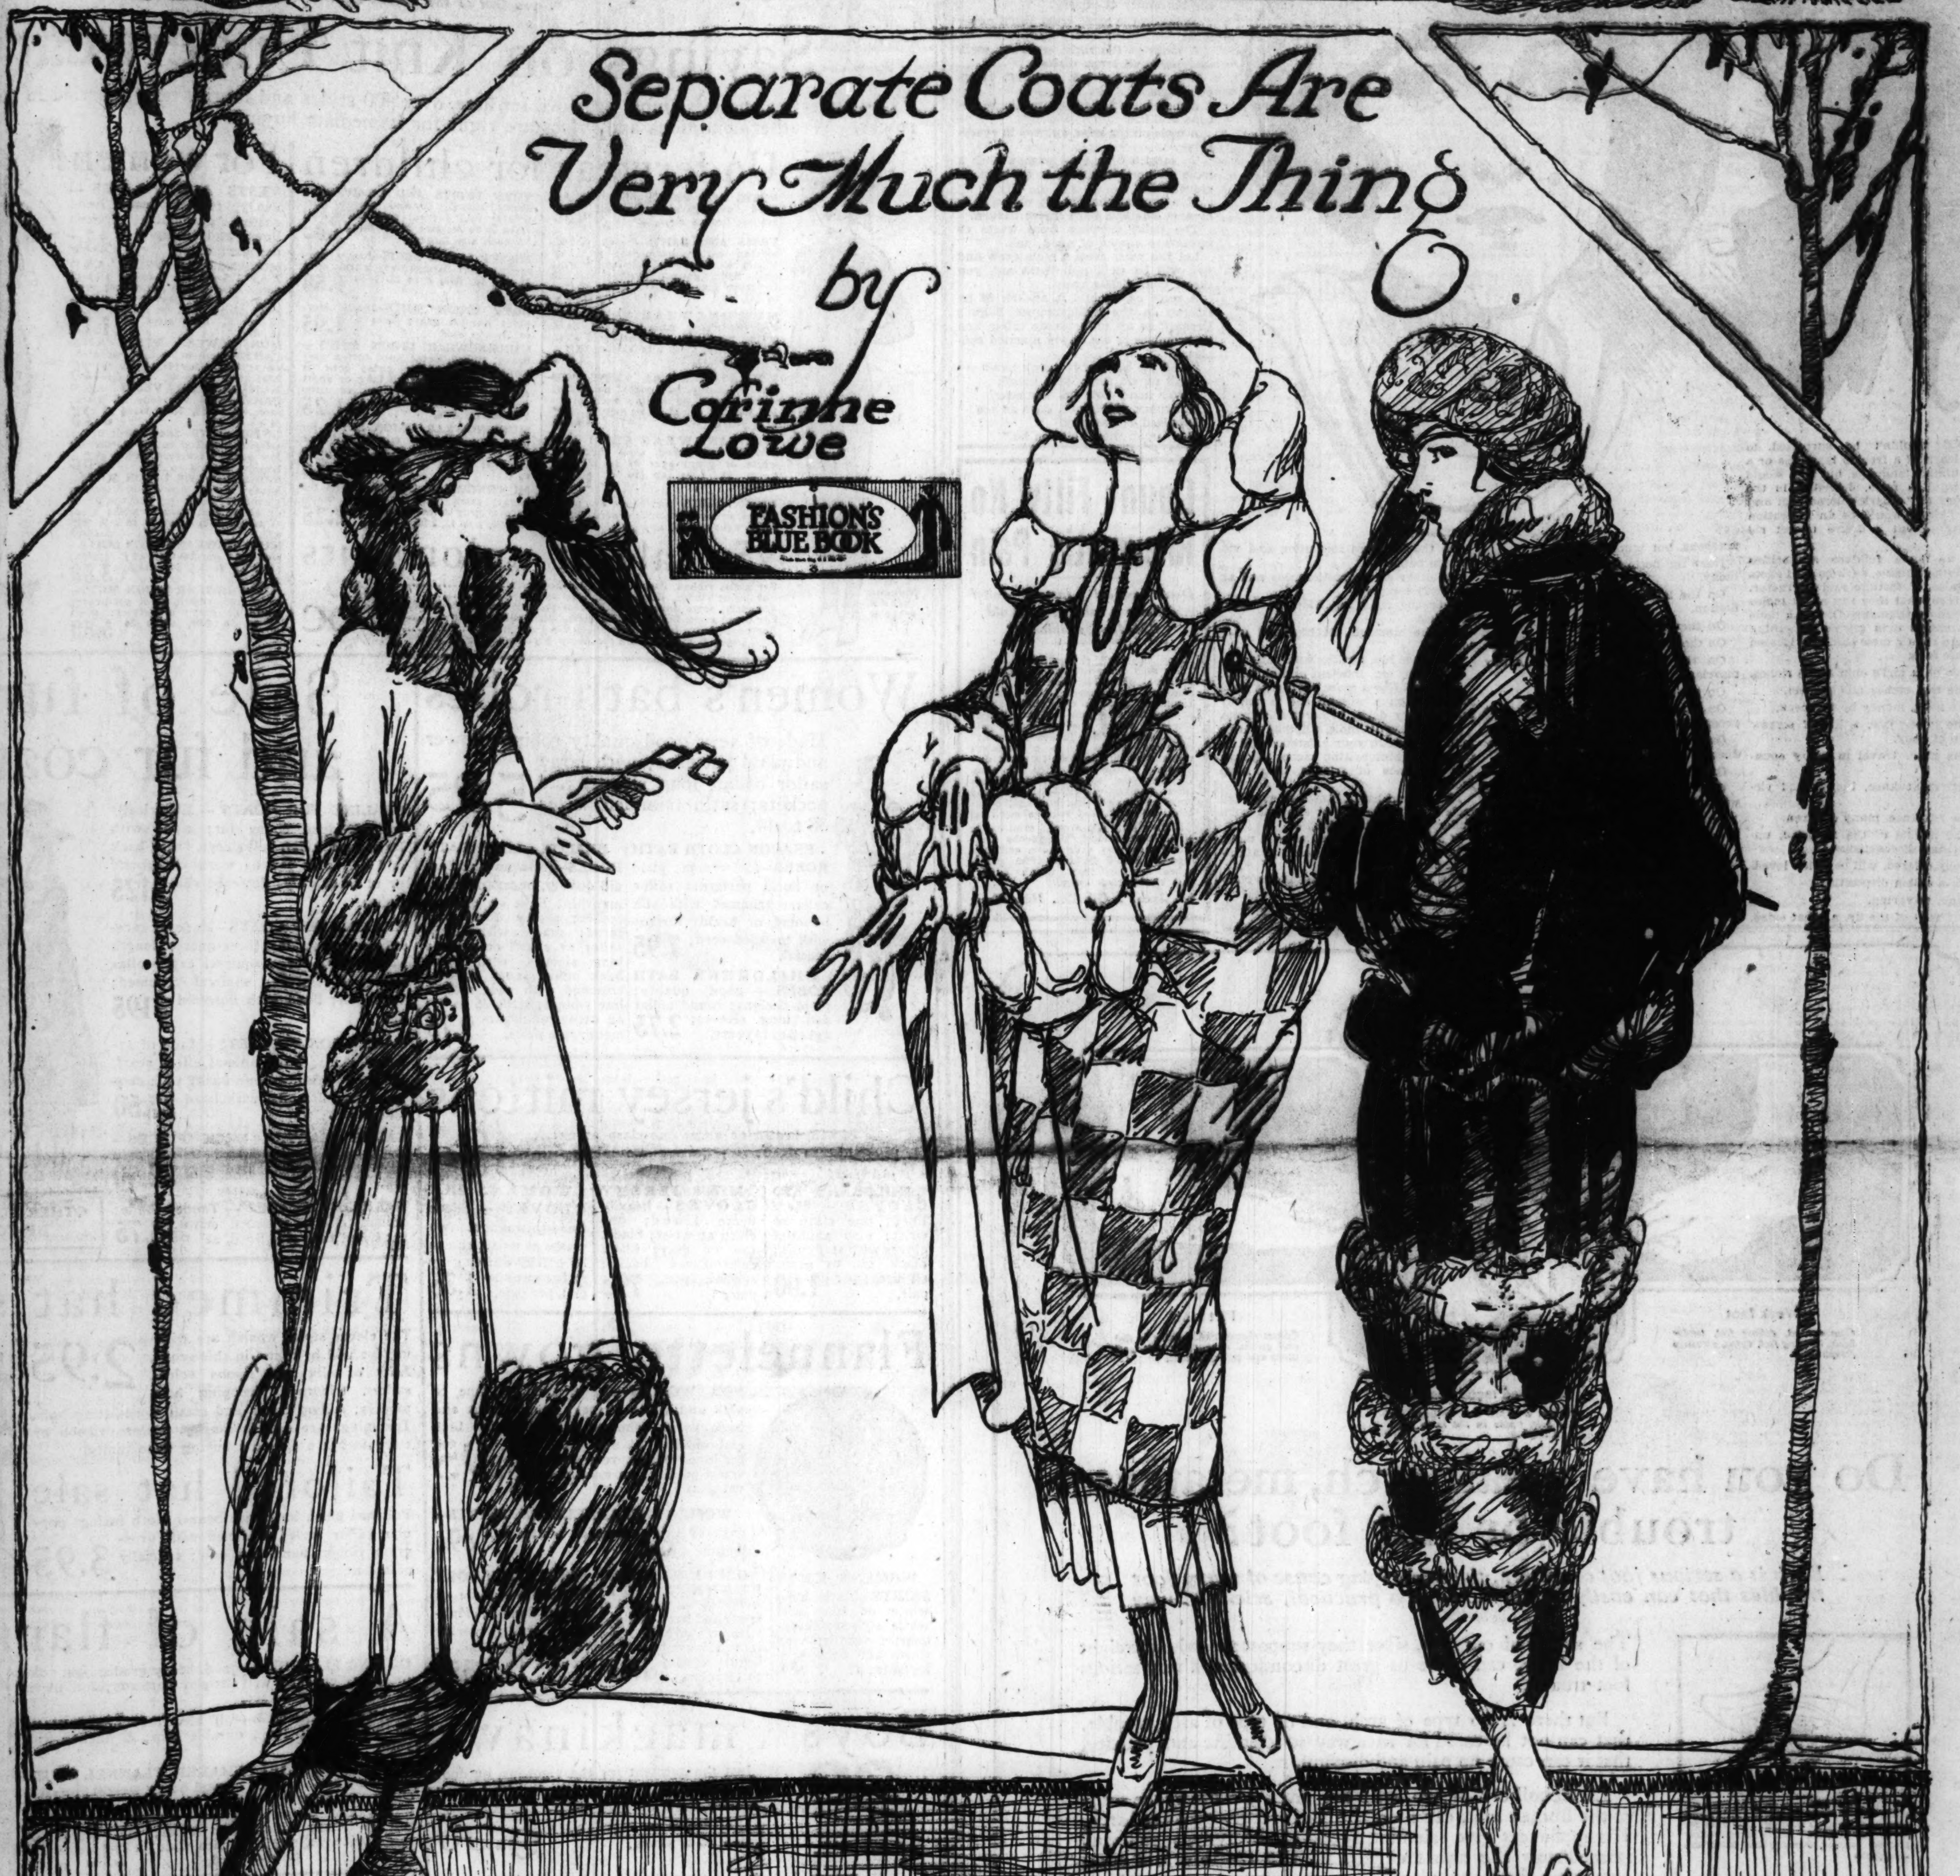
Separate Coats Are Very Much the Thing

by Corinne Lowe

FASHION'S BLUE BOOK



This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—[Special correspondence.]—To make a trip down Fifth avenue costs just as much these days as to make a trip across the continent. It does, that is, if we make it in one of the elaborate and costly new suits. Think of it! A little duvetyn model trimmed with squirrel at $350! Is it any wonder that many of us are not suiting this year?

Nor is the separate coat much tamer than the shy, wild suit. However, many women who can not afford both suit and separate coat are now deciding on the latter. For, in spite of its costliness, the coat seems, in view of its adaptability to all sorts of occasions, a more economical choice. What is more, the coat and gown combination is fashionable this year. At any smart tea or lunch place nowadays one is struck by the number of unusual wraps. As these have been selected by women who never have to think, "Now, if I buy this, what shall I have to go without?" the trend of style is plain. Separate coats are the thing.

In looking over the new coats, one hunts in vain for the dolman which swamped us last season. This influence is decidedly absent in autumn modes. Nor can we grow sentimental over its departure. The dolman was never becoming to the average woman. Indeed, it succeeded in making most of us look chunky as a mission chair.

But if the dolman is passé, we can not say the same of the cape. Gowns are made with capes; three piece costumes frequently elect them instead of the coat, and in the long coat there is frequently a cape back. Perhaps we are like the villain in the play. Perhaps we have come to recognize the graceful, enveloping garment as part of our regular makeup.

As an instance of the popularity of the cape of a good cloak, let me mention two imported wraps which I have just seen. One is a dark blue camel's hair coat from Chanel which forms its back in a cape extending to the waist line and achieving the sleeves. The high collar and the border of the cape are of a stunning plaid wool, and this plaid border is attached in the back so as to give the idea of a girdle. The dipping line of the sleeves is particularly effective.

That the cape of your coat may be of another material from the coat is witnessed by the other Paris model to which I refer. For the body of this coat was of gray duvetyn, while the stunning shoulder cape, gathered very full in the back, was black velvet bordered by the same zibeline which formed the collar.

> ONLY for the very slender figure is the cinnamon brown velvet afternoon coat at the right of the page. This coat, with the long bloused waist line of many of the wraps, is trimmed with kolinsky. In the center a coat of velours plaided in gray and rose red adds collar and cuffs of gray squirrel. At the left maple color velours and beaver round out their destiny by a touch of gold and self-color embroidery at the sides.

Aside from the cape, the other features which we notice in the new coats are, first, the fullness at the sides contrasted with the plain back and front; second, the great popularity of the raglan and kimono sleeves, and, last, the long bloused waist line which we American coat builders took from Lanvin.

This last line is not becoming to her of the redundant pounds. But for the girl or woman who just longs to have something to reduce, for the tall lady with the ingrown hips, nothing more becoming was ever devised.

It is this line which we show in the afternoon wrap of cinnamon brown velvet at the right. A first glimpse of this coat might indicate a sort of short loose coat. The upper section of the wrap is, however, bloused. The trimming here is costly kolinsky.

Checked, but unreined, is the Paris fashion. Never were there so many plaids and checks mobilized as there are this present winter. As a rule, of course, the checked material appears on coats in the form of collar, cuffs, and perhaps lining. The central figure proves to you, however, that we may go about looking like a glorified steamer rug and still be in the mode. Very lovely is the material of this coat—a velour laid out in squares of soft gray and soft rose red to which deep cuffs and collar of the fashionable squirrel contributed the last esthetic touch.

Fur is used on the most sumptuous of the new wraps. It is not, however, on some of the very newest and smartest. In place of squirrel or beaver or kolinsky one finds, indeed, many inventions. Among these may be numbered plush. So far I have seen none of this in active service. Yet I have seen it on some of the Paris models of both suits and coats, and it is certainly worthy of mention as a possibility. Thus a cape of black satin from Margaine-Lacroix has a great big collar of gray plush, the stiff points of which frame the face as effectually as an Elizabethan ruff.

What is more, there are entire wraps of plush! What does Jenny do, in fact, but send us over a brown plush coat fastening with frogs down the front over funny looking wooden buttons and providing as the only relief for this Pullman car dressmaking a turnover collar lined with gay woolen plaid.

At the left we show one of the dressy models of the season. This gives an excellent idea of the straight front and back combined with the fanciful side pieces. The material is maple colored wool velour and fur, beaver. The desired emphasis is given to the hips by the band of fur connecting front and back panel. Another accent comes from the embroidered pieces inset just above these bands. The embroidery is done in self color silk mixed with gold thread. Another outstanding feature of this model is the sleeves, which terminate in a huge gauntlet cuff reaching to above the elbow and displaying a pouchiness just below the elbow.

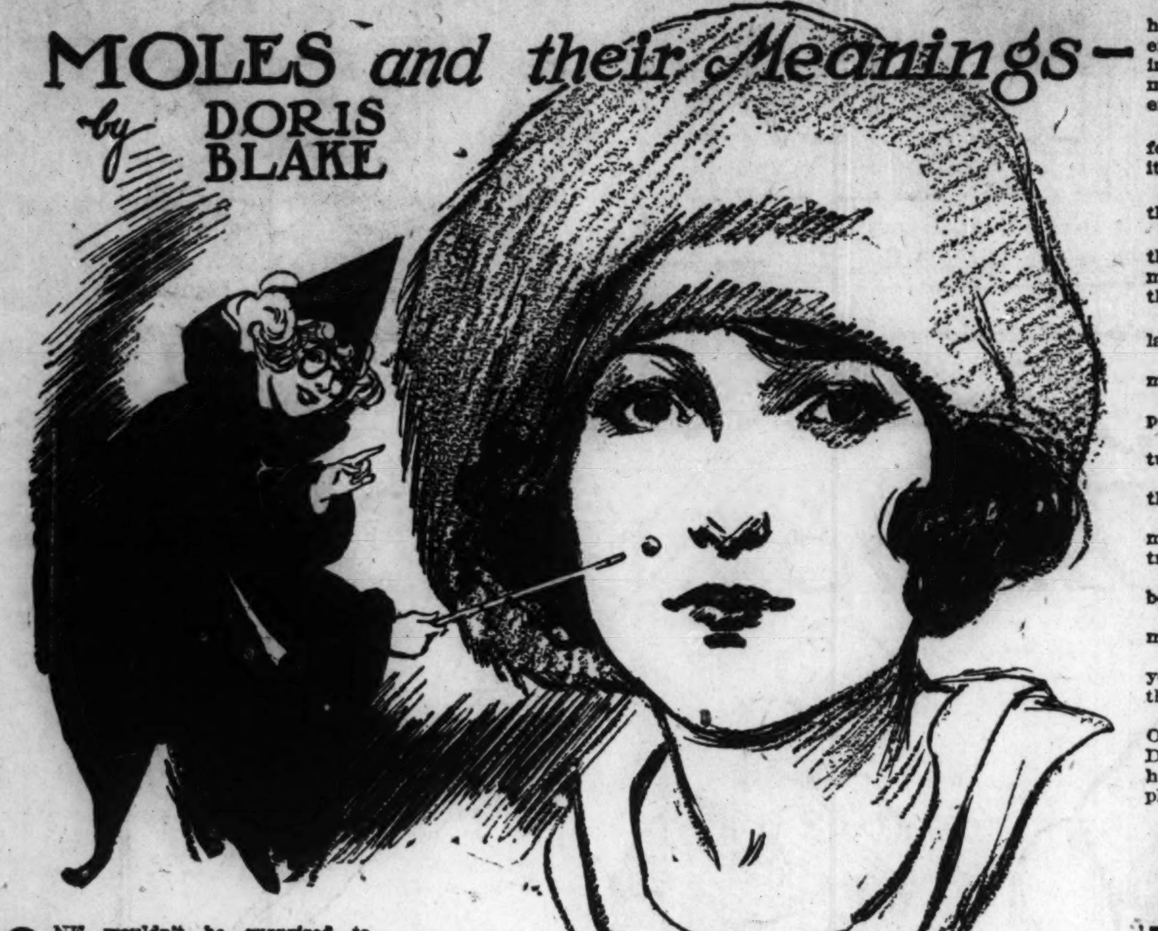
MOLES and their Meanings—

by DORIS BLAKE



ONE wouldn't be surprised to learn of a freckle language or a dimple language, but who would think a mole, described in the dictionary as "a dark colored spot and maybe hairy," would be an indication of anything but a desire to get rid of it?

Yet we have folklore authorities treating the humble, dark colored spots as telltales of fortune and character. And this is what they say about moles of feminine settlement—O, yes, a mole on a woman's chin means something else again than a mole similarly located on a male face:

A mole on a girl's chin spells riches.

On the ear, riches and respect.

On the neck, money by the peck.

On the lower jaw, a life of sorrow and pain of body.

On the nose, travel in many countries.

On the right knee, honest and virtuous.

On the left knee, many children.

On the middle of the forehead, unpleasant and discourteous.

If honey colored, will be much loved.

If red, a sullen disposition.

If black, wavering.

On any part of the lip, a great eater, amorous, but much beloved.

Near the bottom of the nostril, very lucky.

On the left side of the stomach, affliction.

On the right foot, wisdom.

On the left, rash and unconventional.

On the eyebrow, early and happy marriage.

On the wrist, ingenuous.

On the forearm, many crosses, but prosperity will follow.

On the side of the chin, amiable, industrious, and successful.

On the armpit, riches and honor.

On the right arm or shoulder, great wisdom.

On the left arm or shoulder, contention and debate.

As to the masculine persuasion:

On the throat, he will become rich.

On the ankle, courage.

On the right arm, undaunted courage and vigor.

On the left arm resolution and victory in battle.

On either elbow, restlessness and an unsteady temper.

Over the right rib, slow in understanding.

On the stomach, slothful and gluttonous.

On either hip, healthy and patient.

On either leg, indolent and shiftless.

If raised like a wart, fortunate on a man, but on a woman she is untidy and, if very dark, rather treacherous.

If you have no mole, whether you be man or woman, your existence will be tame and uninteresting except through the influence of friends who have moles.

If a person has a bluish or purplish mole it is because he or she was born under the planet Jupiter.

If an olive or chestnut colored mole, it is caused by the sun shining brightly at birth.

If a yellow mole, Venus was the planet ascendant at birth.

If you have a white mole you were born on a white moonlight night.

A mole on the right side of the forehead declares a man to abound in benefits from great men, friendships with important people, loaded with command, esteemed and honored. The paler the color the greater the honor.

A woman having this mole shall be fortunate in all of her actions, but if it is black beware of her tongue.

A mole on a woman's left forehead threatens persecution from employers.

A mole on o woman's left forehead threatens sorrow from the perfidy of man; if it is black, she will experience the extremity of misery.

Moles on the back, want you'll never lack.

A mole on the right eyebrow, early marriage and large fortune.

A mole on either cheek, mediocre fortune and life.

A mole on the nose, success in everything.

To meet a blue eyed woman with a mole on her left cheek is the sign of trouble.

If a woman has black moles it is because she was born under Saturn.

The hairs growing from warts or moles are omens of good luck.

Let the hairs from a mole grow and you will be rich; pull them out, you throw your riches away.

A mole on a child is spoken of by Oberon in the "Midsummer Night's Dream" as an unfortunate thing, and he promises to the newly married couples:

> "And the blots of Nature's hand
> Shall not in their issue stand;
> Never mole, hair lip, nor scar,
> Nor mark prodigious, such as are > Despised in nativity
> Shall upon their children be."

Weak foot

Causes tired, aching feet, tender heels, burning feet, corns, excessive perspiration

Depressed metatarsal arch

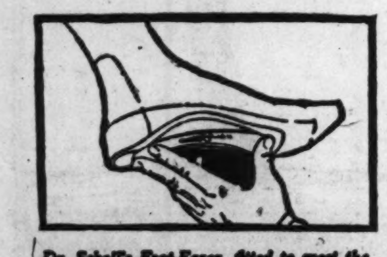
Causes cramped toes, callouses on the sole, pains in the knees, legs and thighs

Flat foot

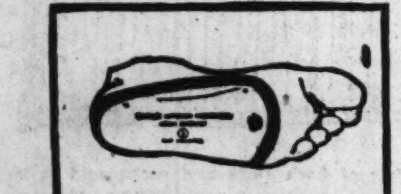
Causes rheumatic-like pains in feet and ankles, a shuffling gait, soft corns and enlarged joints

Do you have weak arch, metatarsal trouble or flat foot?

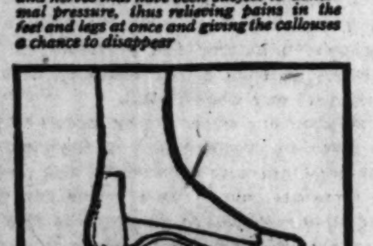
Each is a serious foot condition, the underlying cause of many foot troubles that can easily be corrected in a practical, scientific way



Dr. Scholl's Foot-Eazer, fitted to meet the contour of the foot, supports the bone structure and prevents further strain on the weakened muscles. Thus tired, aching feet are relieved, burning and tenderness disappears



When the anterior metatarsal arch (the arch across the ball of the foot) is broken down, Dr. Scholl's Anterior Metatarsal Arch Support lifts the depressed bones to their true positions. This support protects the arteries and nerves that have been subject to abnormal pressure, thus relieving pains in the feet and legs at once and giving the callouses a chance to disappear



For flat foot, Dr. Scholl's Tri-Spring Arch Support gives immediate relief by holding the foot up and keeping it from sliding forward into the toe of the shoe. It thus prevents breaking down of the shank of the shoe and makes walking more comfortable and easy

The arches of our feet, since they support the whole weight of the body, can cause us great discomfort and very serious foot trouble.

But there is no type of arch, and no type of arch trouble, that can not be cared for in a way so scientific and practical that it can cause no pain and discomfort.

Dr. Scholl of Chicago, who has given his life to the study of the human foot, can meet the need of every weakened arch. His appliances give scientific support to every type, relieving immediately the pains caused by the trouble and soon correcting the trouble itself.

A graduate Practipedist understands your trouble

If you have tired, aching feet, tender heels, or if your feet burn and perspire excessively, if you have corns, bunions, callouses, enlarged joints, rheumatic pains in your feet, knees, legs and thighs—you'd better go to a graduate Practipedist and see whether you do have one of these forms of weakened arch.

This graduate Practipedist—whom you will find in the store of the shoe dealer who carries Dr. Scholl's appliances and remedies—is a foot expert. He is trained in Dr. Scholl's own methods of giving foot comfort and can tell you the foot appliance that you need. See him today and know what a joy it is to have truly comfortable feet!

Dr. Scholl's Foot Comfort Appliances and remedies relieve and correct every foot trouble

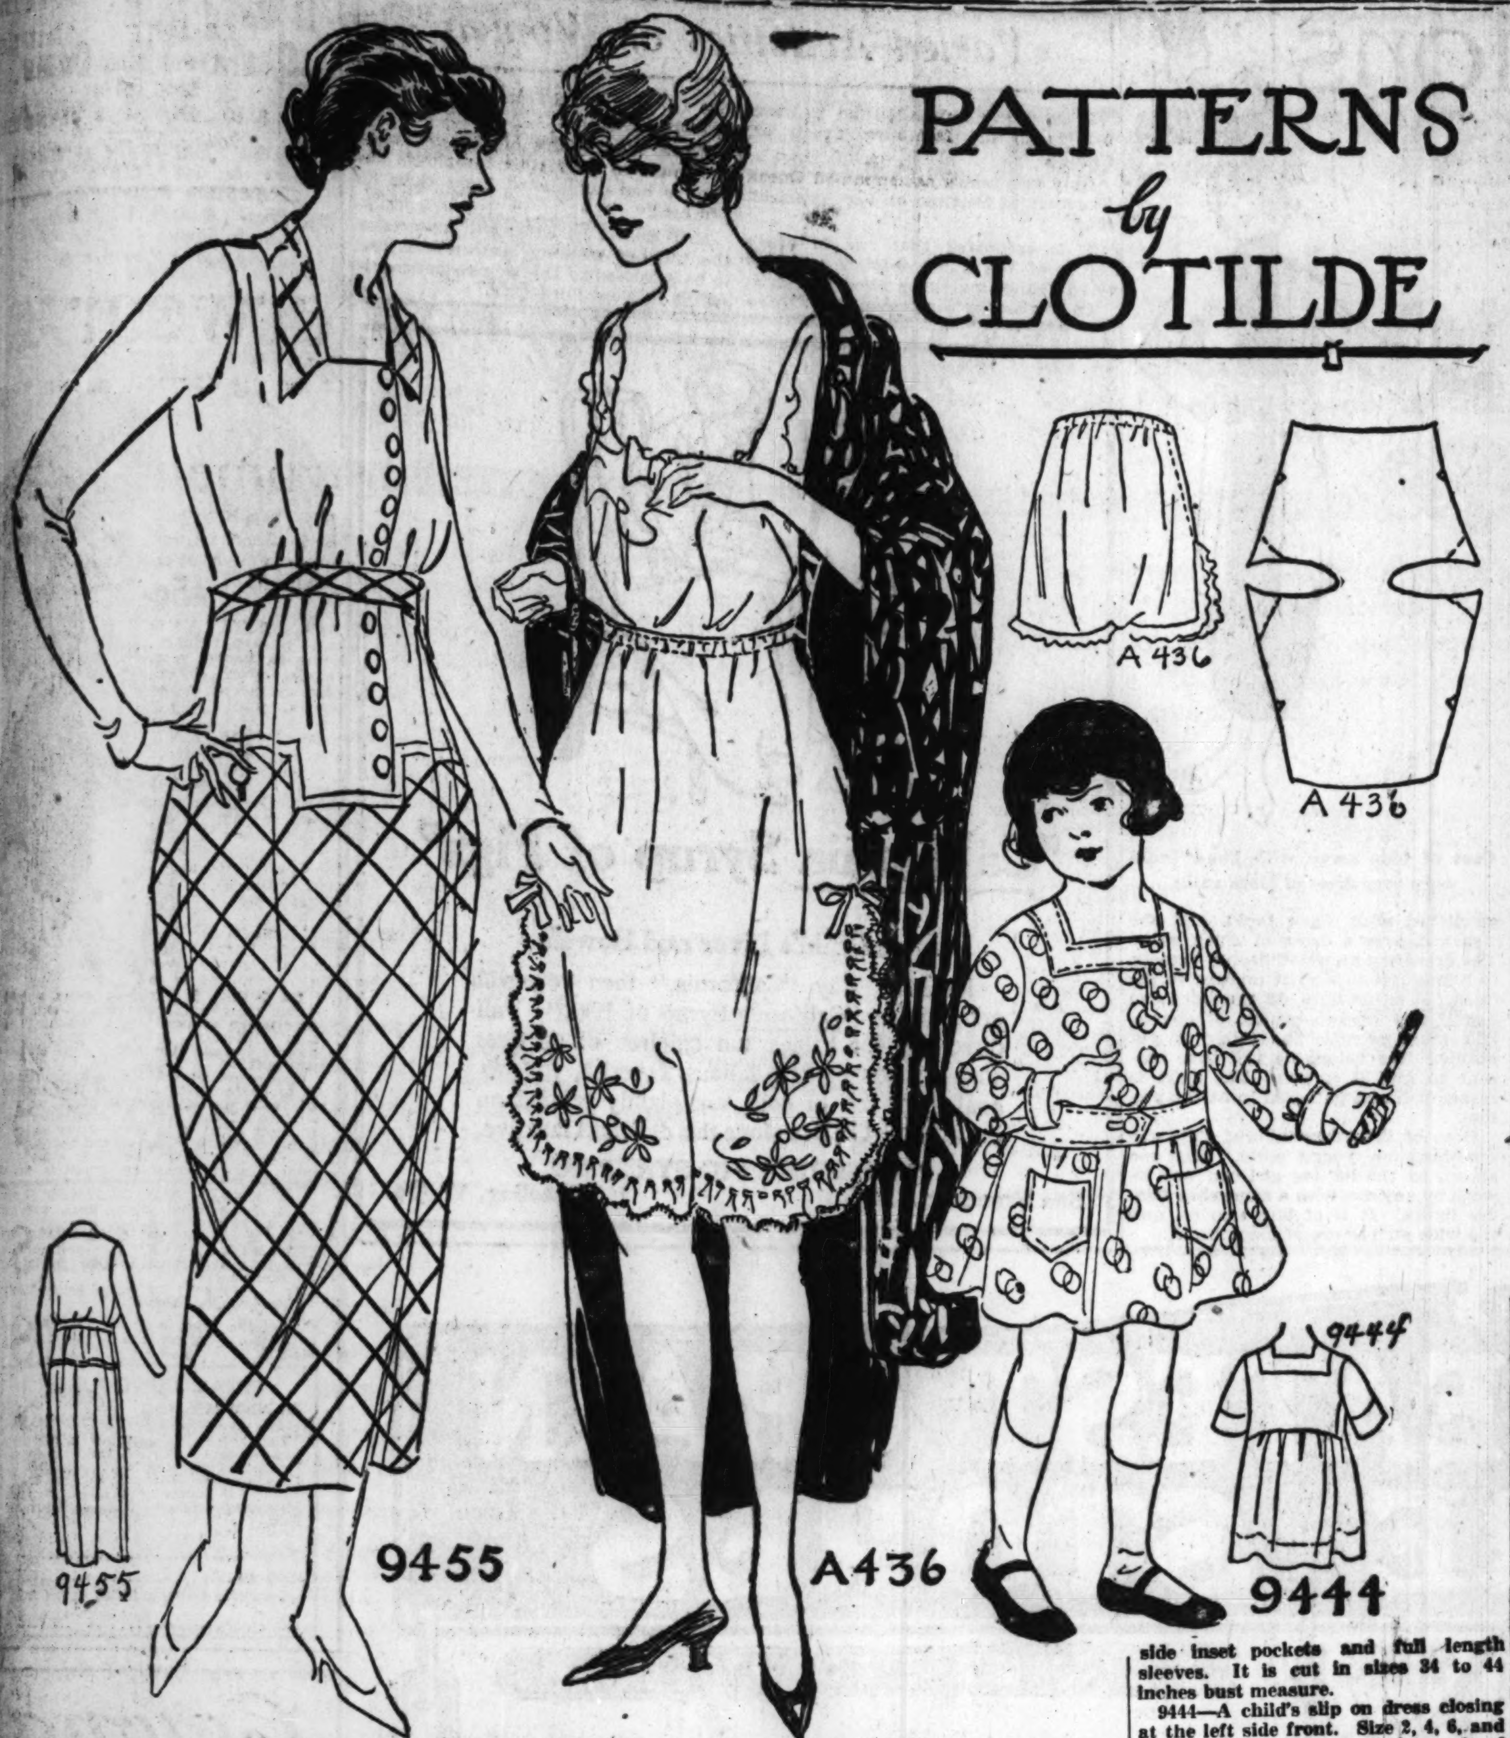
PATTERNS by CLOTILDE

Some suggestions about cutting, fitting, and making clothes from the Clotilde patterns should appeal to women who are interested in trying to beat the high cost of living by doing as much of their own sewing as possible. And if there are any questions any home sewer would like to ask about anything relating to the work, write to Clotilde, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope.



A436—Woman's and young girl's step in drawers with the edges in either of the two outlines shown. The sizes are small, medium, and large. The small size requires 1⅝ yards of 30 inch material with 2¾ yards of 1½ inch ruffling and 1 yard of ribbon.

9455—Woman's long waisted dress closing at the left side front and with side inset pockets and full length sleeves. It is cut in sizes 34 to 44 inches bust measure.

9444—A child's slip on dress closing at the left side front. Size 2, 4, 6, and 8 years. Size 4 requires 1¾ yards of 36 inch material with ⅜ yard of contrasting material.

How to Use the Patterns

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

THESE designs are always good and the patterns easy to follow, but a great many women try to sew without understanding much about it, and make mistakes that are discouraging. Anything is easy when one knows how, and so it is with sewing.

It is never wise to cut into material without first applying your own measures to the pattern to be used. For instance, a great many women may use a thirty-six inch bust pattern, but there are none of them built on exactly the same lines, so unless a pattern is made specially for you it is often time saved to take this precaution.

You buy a waist pattern by the bust measure, but before cutting into the material measure the front, back, and under arm lengths, also shoulder seam, and mark the alterations on the pattern. If there is a high, close fitting neck, that measure must be taken also, and the altering is done on the shoulder seams at the neck point, letting out or taking up an equal amount on both seams at neck point.

See that the sleeve is the right length, and if a two piece, tight fitting one, the elbow and wrist measures must not be forgotten.

Another important place is the width across the broadest part of the back, from arm hole to arm hole, about one inch below the arm hole end of the shoulder seam. Many a waist is spoiled by having the arm hole cut out too much at this point.

In skirts the waist, hip, and lengths (front, sides, and back) are all important. The length measures are taken from the bottom of the waist to the floor in the front, back, and over both hips, and then deducting the number of inches up from the floor that the skirt is to be made gives the correct length.

Making your own clothes is fascinating work if you are willing to go slowly enough to avoid mistakes, instead of plunging madly ahead and then having endless altering to do or perhaps making a blunder that can't be remedied.

An entire pattern should be laid on the material before any part is cut, and directions given on the pattern must be carefully followed. If there is no up and down to the cloth the cutting can be more economically done and the material can often be folded and two pieces cut at the same time. But if there is an up and down to be observed, or a design with an up and down, each piece must be cut going the same way.

Where the material cannot be folded together and opposite sides of the same piece cut at the same time, it is wise to chalk an outline of the piece for each side, being sure that you are getting it right and not finding that you have cut both pieces for the same side.

All seam lines should be clearly marked with tracing wheel, French chalk, or a basting thread, notches and all other marks clearly indicated on the cloth in the same manner. I can imagine some women saying they haven't time to be so careful, but they forget how much time they spend ripping out what they do, or else they are willing to wear clothes that are carelessly made.

If the joining of plaid to plain material is to be finished with a braid or bias trimming band, the corners where trimming turns up to go over pocket lap must be perfectly mitered.

The sleeves should be laid on a table or lap board, and the seam pinned together so that the outside sleeve fold is perfectly smooth. If there is the slightest tendency to a twist, unpin and try again. Then try the sleeve on and see that it is loose enough over the elbow, allowing the arm to bend freely without strain. The finishing of a close fitting sleeve at the wrist is always done from the right side, else the facing would be "full" when finished.

When the collar is ready to go on, pin it to the middle of the neck of the waist in the back, then pin at each end, and see that the same length is left from collar ends to end of opening before basting. Cover the seam with a bias facing, stitching it on when the collar is stitched on, and before turning seam over to hem the facing down clip the seam at close intervals, almost to the stitching, so there will be no puckering.

No. 9455 is a pretty model, easily made, and suitable for almost any materials one may desire to choose. It is also a good design to use in remodeling one or two old dresses, using the best parts of each. It will be especially pretty to use a plaid or some figured stuff for the skirt and a plain material for the upper part as the picture indicates.

Be sure to apply your own measures to the pattern before cutting any part of the dress. The pocket sections must be sewed in place before attaching the skirt to the upper part, the under section having the seam come on the wrong side, and the upper section stitched around the three sides of the pocket lap, and then, clipping the lining where the seam finishes at both sides, turn the lining to the wrong side and baste and press. Then the skirt is pinned to the upper dress part, being sure it is accurately done, and after basting carefully, the pocket can be basted and stitched, of course having the seam come to the wrong side.

A436 is a drawers pattern easily made and can be elaborately or simply trimmed. Measure the side length from the hip down and add to or take from the length at the bottom. The most satisfactory seam for lingerie is the felled seam, the hemming down being done by hand preferably. All lace should be sewed on by hand, and holding it towards you in sewing on will keep it full enough, except on curves or corners. In those places it must be fulled enough to prevent its hooping.

The child's slip-on dress, 9444, would be pretty made of plaid gingham, trimmed with a plain color, and the cloth should be shrunk and the color set before making up the garment. One particular point in making this small dress is the shaped facing around the neck. The edges must be turned in perfectly even and the part where the buttons come should have both edges turned in before turning the plain edges. If turning in the cloth at the point makes it seem thick at all, cut away the turned in edge of the side that was turned in first, cutting it just at the point, and leaving a turned in margin of about one-eighth inch.

Method of Reproduction

THE story of the Brunswick Method of Reproduction is, to Music Lovers, the sweetest story ever told. For, it is the story of True Music. That method is the right application of musical and acoustical laws and accomplished by means of the Ultona and the Tone Amplifier.

The ULTONA—plays all records truer, finer, sweeter. It is not a makeshift contrivance but involves a genuine principle of sound. A slight turn of the hand presents the right needle, diaphragm and weight for playing any record.

The TONE AMPLIFIER—is an oval shaped vibrant tone chamber. Like the sounding board of a fine piano or violin it is made entirely of wood and free from metal. Thus it gives the requisite tonal volume and eliminates all harsh, thin, metallic sounds. It meets all advanced acoustical and musical laws.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

Get Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 17 years and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, but a healing, soothing vegetable laxative.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth"—bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver—constipation you'll find quick, sure and pleasant results from one or two of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at bedtime.

Thousands take them every night just to keep right. Try them. 10c and 25c.

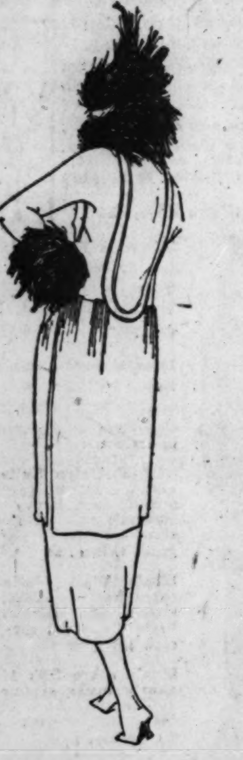
The Last Word in Paris Fashions

By Mary Brush Williams.

THE AUTOCRATIC MANIKIN.

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—How wonderful it must feel to be a manikin and accountable therefore only to one's creator! All you have to do is to try on clothes, and it seems you don't have to do that when you don't want to. It's like being a prima donna, only you don't have to have any talent.

Of course, the subject wouldn't be worth mentioning except that it demonstrates a brand new phase of the world labor trouble. The outstanding memory that I have of my last trip home a few months ago was that I couldn't get a servant girl to come to work on her own terms. "What wages do you ask?" I inquired of her. "Sixty dollars a month," I believe was her reply. "All right, come on," I answered. "Well, I don't know as I can come for that," she objected.



Suit of soft brown material with monkey fur on collar.

I thought the labor situation had reached the ultimate when people wouldn't work on their own terms. More critical than that would appear to be the relationship between manikin and employer over here. They come on their own terms, one deduces, and then work at pleasure.

"O, yes, we have some lovely things to show you," said the hostess of one of the establishments. "But are you in a hurry—would you mind making yourself at home here? It's Hebe who will have to show all of our models that would be good for you."

"What's Hebe doing here?" I demanded. "I thought she was an institution with Lucille." But it seems that Hebe had changed her job, having kept the other all through the lean years of the war.

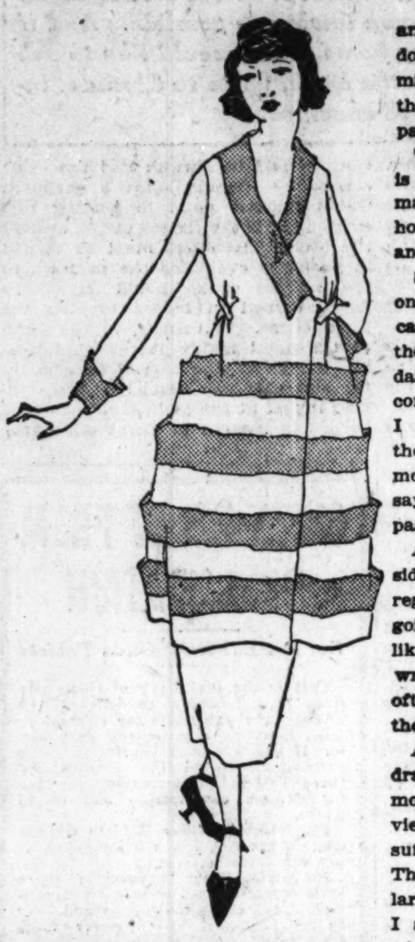
At any rate she came and gave one glance through the crack in the door, and when she saw it was just only but me she resented very much showing costumes. We waited for long quarter hours and then were rewarded by the fleeting vision of a tall, tall manikin, walking up to us and taking flight immediately.

If I asked to have a jacket left for further inspection she left it exactly where she happened to be in her departure and trusted that I might get it by parcel post or aeroplane service or the kindly officials of the organization who were therefore of humbler position than she.

We waited for long minutes for the famous pink dress of which all the staff spoke in whispers; indeed, we waited until we were willing to forego the reaction promised by this work. "O, it's Hebe, you know, and it takes a long time, therefore," they apologize. I suspect Hebe of sitting outside smoking cigarets in the interim, and art is far too long and time too fleeting for me to stand for that even from Mary Garden.

Word must have reached her that we were about to go, for a tall, thin vision appeared in one door trailing, not clouds of glory, but sheets and ribbons of floating, swirling, undulating pink crêpe. It must have been pretty if one could see it. But unfortunately there was an exit door at right angles to the one where she came in, and she availed herself of it. We did not succeed in getting within several yards of her. The vendeuse hastened to the dressing room to ask Hebe if she would not be kind enough to show herself for one brief instant again. She did so, but took the same course and had removed a large and important part of the costuming, so that nothing but tunic remained.

Hebe is valuable to her profession for being able to strike telling poses, but her notion of how the business should be conducted is to get large gatherings assembled two or three times a year, on which occasions she will strike her poses, and for the remainder of the time she prefers to wait.



Tailored suit of blue marine with wide stripes of black braid.

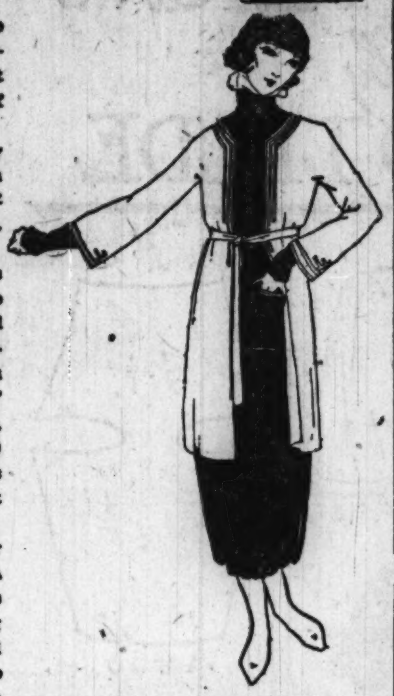
I only tell the incident for two reasons: Hebe has had a brief career in America and may be remembered by some. She used to be beautiful, with lovely dark, long hair. Now it is short and for some accountable reason she does it in henna. Her lips are carmined so deeply and so artificially that they look like something cut out of pasteboard and pasted on.

The other reason for telling the story is to show what a state the manikin market is in. We saw one at a smart house the other day that looked like, and used to be, a waitress.

Still the Hebe anecdote characterizes only an extreme and unreasonable case. At Premet's the other day I asked the vendeuse to show me suits. "Madame, they have passed. Cannot you content yourself with evening dresses?" I allowed that I could not. "Well, then, tomorrow at 2:30. We show 250 models an afternoon, and the manikins say they are exhausted and cannot pass them again."

After all, it isn't fair not to tell their side of the story. You see, there is a regular situation, and perhaps it is going to get regulated into something like a just arrangement. Hebe is all wrong, and doubtless employers are often wrong, too. One of these days they will get together.

At any rate, here is Hebe. I had her drawn vanishing because that was more characteristic and really the only view of which the artist got a sight sufficiently prolonged to remember. The use of the monkey fur on that collar and close little hat is most effective. I should think it would look pretty when the snow flies. The suit is of brown soft material and it departs from its uncompromising straight slimness at the hips when it gently eases into fullness.



Coat of blue serge with black braid worn over dress of black satin.

The girl with her arm extended shows a good looking coat of blue serge garnished with black braid, and she wears it over a dress of black satin. The dress has no waistline, but extends in a long line to a point midway to the knee. It is buttoned up the front and has a tiny pocket—which, of course, you must promise the tailor to put nothing into before he will ever consent to give it to you. The skirt is rather full and gathered in at the bottom.

Both of the other tailored suits are charming on young girls. The one shown by the hatless girl can well be worn by any one with a somewhat slender figure. It is of blue marine, and the wide stripes are of black braid.

Varied Activities of Women

Women are now admitted to membership in the Hamburg Stock exchange.

Only two maids accompanied Queen Elizabeth of Belgium on her American tour.

It is estimated that one in every thirty of the allied soldiers who entered France married a French bride.

In England at the present time there are 1,888,000 more females than there are males.

Since the signing of the armistice the number of female employés in France has diminished more than 55 per cent.

Mrs. Robert H. Elder will undertake the task of training women aviators to be attached to the women police reserves in New York City.

It Used to Be Chalk—Then Came Face Powder

But the Final Word in Beautifiers Is LA MEDA COLD CREAMED POWDER—The Most Beneficial, Lasting and Sensible Way of Applying Powder to the Skin.

It's hard to describe in words just what LA MEDA COLD CREAMED POWDER is like. It is so entirely new and distinct from any other toilet article on your dresser.

LA MEDA is different from a cold cream because it possesses a satin texture never attained by a cream. It is also different from ordinary face powder because it is not dry but creamy and soft.

The secret of LA MEDA'S popularity is to be found in the fact that instead of lying like a layer of dust on the surface of the skin, it penetrates, and protects every tiny pore—every microscopical crease—clinging and beautifying all day long. For the face, arms and neck, there is nothing quite so satisfactory.

LA MEDA COLD CREAMED POWDER defies wind, rain, heat, cold or even perspiration.

Any dealer can get LA MEDA COLD CREAMED POWDER for you, or we will send it postpaid upon receipt of 65 cents a jar.

It is prepared in three tints—Flesh, White and Peachblow.

Send the Coupon for a Trial Jar and judge for yourself the wonders of LA MEDA.

"The Water of Eternal Youth"

The beauties of the Austrian court of bygone days used a lotion which was so effectual in keeping the face smooth and free from wrinkles, even in the aged, they called it the "water of eternal youth."

Some one recently has divulged the secret of this wonderful, though exceedingly simple, wrinkle lotion, which in her gratitude she has similarly dubbed a preserver of youth: One ounce pure Saxolite (powdered), dissolved in a half pint witch hazel—that's all there is to it. Any woman can get these ingredients at her drug store, put them together, and use the solution with entire safety. To bathe the face in the same brings immediate results, even in case of the deeper wrinkles and furrows. This is also effective for hanging cheeks and double chin.

Advertise in The Trib

An advertisement intent on proving that Truly-We are the home of Home Outfits

Tremendous displays of well chosen Home-needs do, of course, signify a great deal. But large displays alone is not the reason that we have been proclaimed the Home of Home Outfits. It is because we have given more thought to the furnishing of complete homes than to any other portion of our business.

For 54 years we have studied the art of Home Furnishing, and because of that experience we are able to offer expert advice, whether a one-room kitchenette, an apartment or an elegant residence is to be furnished. We will gladly assist you—offering suggestions—aiding you in making comparisons.

It is, of course, very easy to make a statement—the difficulty usually is to prove it. This advertisement shows the range of Home-needs on display. It is our only means of expressing our magnitude. It is for you to inspect—to compare our merchandise with others you have seen—then judge whether or not we are the Home of Home Outfits.

GUARANTEED HOME-NEEDS

Every article we sell, regardless of price, is guaranteed to give satisfactory service and our prices are always as low as possible consistent with such quality. And the fact that quality of finish and cabinet work alone are the factors that govern service assures you of receiving a real value in any article you may choose. The service we offer must be the reason for the enormous business we enjoy. On the evenings we are open our sales are remarkable—and many of these nights it is necessary for us to stay open until 10 o'clock. If it is not convenient for you to inspect our displays during the day you may do so Monday, Wednesday and Saturday at our main store or Thursday and Saturday at our branch stores. CHANCE IN SMALL TOWN.

MANY girls who live in small towns and who are anxious to earn their own living feel that their only opportunity to earn a fairly decent salary is in the big city, and reluctantly tear themselves away from home ties and associations to try their luck in the metropolis.

PUBLIC STENOGRAPHER

A correspondent tells me of a friend of hers who has made a great deal of money in her home town, in spite of the fact that every one tried to discourage her from putting her working plan into action.

Miss L. was forced to earn a living for herself and her mother. They had had a comfortable income, but through an unfortunate investment it had dwindled to a trifle.

They lived on the outskirts of a small town. The girl took a course in stenography in the nearest large town to her home, coming home every week end. Her mother had not been strong for some time and by the time Miss L. completed her course her mother had developed into an invalid. She was faced with the necessity of earning money, but did not want to leave her mother in care of a stranger.

"I think I'll stay right here and work," she said one day to an acquaintance.

"But what good will it do you to stay here? There isn't a man in the town who needs the entire services of a stenographer."

"That's true, but there are a number of men here who could use a stenographer occasionally, and I'm going to make it the fashion for all the business men of this town to have their letters typewritten."

A week later, by arrangement with the proprietor of the town's only hotel, she was established in a corner of the lobby, and a conspicuous sign on the clerk's desk announced to the traveling salesmen and other transient guests of the hotel that letters and other documents would be transcribed neatly and with dispatch. She circularized the business men of the town and advertised in several issues of the weekly paper.

Miss L. and her business venture were an innovation in the town, but the local business men and traveling salesmen took to her kindly. After a few months she cleared enough money to make up for her original outlay in establishing herself in business.

Two years ago she encouraged one of the young girls of the town to take a course of stenography, and when the younger girl finished she was taken into the business as an assistant.

Miss L. is now an institution in the town. Her assistant receives a good salary, and she makes a comfortable living for herself and her mother.

A FRIEND IN NEED

Sally Joy Brown

When information is wanted by mail a stamped addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to "The Tribune," but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

Asks Loan of Pattern.

"Is there any one who has a butterfly crochet pattern she would let me have just for a day or so? I would take good care of it and send it back to the owner in the same condition I received it. I have tried hard to get that pattern, but can't find it. Here is a good idea: Take your old white stockings, cut the feet and cut them lengthwise, sew them together, lengthwise, cut places for armholes and neck, and you will have nice underwear. Make bloomers the same way from black stockings for the children. I make mittens from our old winter coats. I am Danish and would like to get acquainted with a nice Danish woman who can do fancy work. I am 31 years old and have a daughter 11. We are awfully poor. Do you think some one might have a winter coat my girl could have? I would be grateful and would do crocheting in return. MRS. E. T. J."

Your suggestions are helpful. I hope your little girl may get a coat and the butterfly pattern.

Oil Stove Would Be Handy.

"Whenever I see this widowed mother of two young boys make a roaring fire in a cook stove just to make a cup of tea, my heart goes out for her. Imagine, just to boil a kettle of water she must first make a fire, there being no gas in her poor little abode. So kind people, have one of you a gasoline or kerosene stove that you will gladly give this dear woman? You can imagine how highly it will be appreciated. I will pay express charges.

"A. M. R."

Given a Lift.

"I want to thank the donors of the clothing I requested through your corner and to assure those whose kindly hearts prompted them to assist that they have my grateful and sincere appreciation. I shall always remember the lift over a difficult road. I tried to thank each individually, but, unfortunately, lost one of the addresses.

"MISS E. W."

A Deed Worth Doing.

"I had a lot of orthodox religious books which I offered through your column to some poor preacher to help him. Soon my supply was exhausted. I still have many requests I cannot fill. Do you think there may be other persons with books they do not desire now who would be willing to give them away? If the books could be mailed to me I would see they were distributed directly. A struggling minister has many needs and can rarely afford books but they mean much in his life and if we could help a few men in this way it would be a deed worth doing.

E. W."

Too seldom are young ministers thought of. Yet it is true they need such help. Can you lend a hand?

Need Clothes Badly.

"I am in the Municipal Tuberculosis sanitarium and have been for three months. My husband is out of work. I have two children. One is a girl of 11 and the other a boy of 6. He is here sick. My size is 40. We need clothes badly. I hope you can help

MRS. J. J."

I will keep your name and address so that help offered may go to you directly.

Old Phonograph Records.

"I have two invalid crippled children, both unable to get around. Do you think there is any one that could spare a few old phonograph records? I have a small phonograph, but no records. I would gladly call or pay express on them. We have no music whatever.

"A. G. W."

Wants Baby Clothes.

"I was wondering if there was some one you could put me in touch with that would have a few outgrown baby clothes they would be willing to pass on to me, as I am expecting the stork next month and it seems as though I will not be able to get what I need before the time, as everything is so high. I will gladly pay postage on anything sent me, and when I am well I will do something in return. MRS. J. S."

It is not necessary to do anything in return. Almost always there are outgrown baby clothes that can be spared to help a needy prospective mother.

Books to Donate.

"I have a couple of religious books and a novel, which I will gladly give to any one who may care for them.

"A. L. B."

Thank you for your kindly offer.

Quantity of Sheet Music.

"Have a quantity of sheet music that I feel sure some young girl who lives in the country and who plays the piano might enjoy, even though the music is not the latest. Should any one want it, shall be glad to see that they get it.

M. S."

Thank you. I shall forward the applications received to you.

Plays the Mandolin.

"I am a stranger in the city and am employed during the day. I can play the mandolin, but I get tired of playing alone. I am a girl and I wondered if some other girl who can play and likes to would play with me. Or if there is a club or orchestra that I could join. And if a few girls would make up a club with me we might play for some of those poor shut-ins that I read about in your department.

"V. T."

I am sorry I don't know of any club or any one who plays the mandolin, but I trust there is a girl who does and that she will answer you. Thank you for thinking of my poor ones.

Old Magazines to Give.

"I have a bunch of weekly and monthly magazines which might be of use to some one if I only knew who might care for them. Perhaps you know of some one to whom they can be sent who would like some reading matter.

LOOKING FOR A WIFE.

DUNCAN came to the United States when he was a young man, became a naturalized American citizen and a thrifty and prosperous one, too. When he had reached that age which stretches between 35 and 40 he began to long for a fireside of his own and some sweet lassie to keep him company through life. No, not an American girl. They were all right, to be sure, beautiful and charming and altogether commendable, but when it came to choosing a wife Duncan insisted upon one of his own countrywomen. So he got his business in shape for a long absence, set out upon his journey, and arrived at last in bonny Scotland.

No one knows why Duncan spent six months in his native land without selecting a wife. He is too much of a gentleman ever to explain what it was about his countrywomen that failed to please him. Certain it is that when he finally took passage on a ship that pointed toward America, he was still a bachelor and a much disappointed one. He had spent a great deal of time and money on this matrimonial quest and he had failed to accomplish what he had set out to do, all serious matters in the opinion of a proud Scotchman.

At his journey's end he was obliged to wait in the station for a few minutes while he made some arrangements regarding his baggage. He strolled indifferently into the big waiting room and sat down on one of the long seats. A woman with a fretful baby sat at one end and some other person occupied the middle of the seat. The baby began to cry more loudly "Let me see what I can do," said a cool, soft voice and the "other person" gently took the screaming infant from its tired mother and returned to the middle of the bench.

Duncan was interested, he knew not why. The baby soon rested easily in the capable arms of this other person and smiled up into her calm blue eyes

"How did you do it?" he found himself asking, and he also discovered that he was sitting much nearer the middle of the long bench than was altogether necessary and proper. The truth is Duncan had forgotten all about himself and his baggage and his Scotland bride and he listened all admiration while the calm young woman told him that she had mothered her five brothers and sisters besides keeping house for dad, and so of course she knew how it was done.

As Duncan drew from her the details of her busy, unselfish, yet happy life, he wondered vaguely why he hadn't found some such a girl in Scotland, and after he had sat and talked with her for two hours he concluded that it didn't make any difference whether it was Scotland or America so long as —and just then her train came in and she had barely time to give the baby tenderly back to its mother, tell Duncan her name and address, and get aboard.

After that a stream of letters came from a lonely Scotch bachelor to a certain little town where a calm eyed girl kept house for her dad and looked after five brothers and sisters. Once in a while she wrote him a good natured protest, and finally not knowing what else to do, she said, "Yes, you may come," adding, "It won't do you any good, though."

But he made a persistent lover, this Scotchman, and in the end he outargued all of her excuses, even the five brothers and sisters whom his own ample means provided for.

"I have never regretted marrying an American girl," Duncan often says. "In fact," he sometimes admits in a reckless moment, "I marvel I ever dreamed of doing anything else."

Corns Come Off Like Banana Peel

"Gets-It" Leaves Toe Smooth As Your Palm. Never Fails.

Ever peel off a banana skin? Well, that's the way "Gets-It" peels off any corn or callus. It's a picnic. Nothing else in the world will do it but "Gets-It"

"2 Drops of 'Gets-It,' Good-bye Corns!"

because of the new secret principle in the "Gets-It" formula. "Gets-It" does away forever with "contraptions," "wrappy" plasters, ointments that rub off, blood-letting knives, and scissors that snip into the "quick." "Gets-It" eases pain. It takes but a second or two to use "Gets-It." There's no fussing or trouble. It dries immediately. You put your stocking right back on again. Your corn will come off painlessly in one complete piece. That's common-sense. It never fails.

"Gets-It," the only sure, guaranteed, money-back corn-remover, costs but a trifle at any drug store. M'f'd by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago, Ill.

The "Rule of Three" for Every Woman Who Wears Corsets, Rules Corset Fittings Here

Third Floor—Center

The Rule of Three means that you should be corseted fashionably, comfortably and for health—and here it remains in force, infallibly, at all times, because we feature Nemo corsets at all times and carry them in complete variety—a distinct model for each type of figure—and corsetieres, all graduates of the "N. H. F. I.," who understand how to scientifically study the style lines and their application to every individual figure so that they may be applied in the aid of health and comfort as well as style. For this fitting service, which stands today without a peer in America, no charge is made. Just now we lay special emphasis on Nemo corsets because of the difficulty of finding them in anywhere near complete variety at any store but ours, which means that our corsetieres can choose absolutely the model your figure should have, insuring you of grace, comfort and style. To wear a Nemo corset correctly adds so measurably to a woman's poise and in most cases lightens her step to such a degree that she is surprised. May we not have the opporunity of demontrating these facts to you upon your own figure?

Nemo self-reducing corset, style 327, topless in front—slightly higher in back for healthful support—the long, well-boned skirt has the famous self-reducing straps that will support and reduce a large abdomen. Firm hook below the front clasp, elastic section in back at bottom of skirt—sizes 22 to 36, at 5.00

The special function of the Nemo Wonderlift corset is to reduce an abnormal abdomen, due either to continued illness, which weakens the muscles, or to a falling of any of the organs. The Wonderlift bandlet, which is underneath the corset, tends to put these organs back and holds them in correct position, thereby once more establishing the natural symmetry of the body. All sizes to 36, at... $7

Nemo Wonderlift Corsets at $7 to $13.50

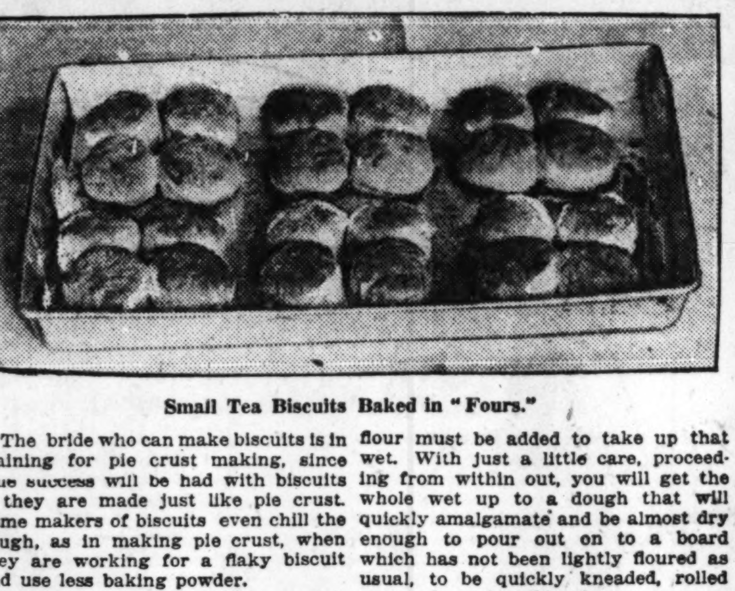
HOT BISCUITS.

IF one loves things American it is almost impossible to despise wholly the hot biscuit tradition. It was hot dough, yellow and acrid with soda, that made the dyspeptics of Bret Harte's stories. It has been "sinkers" that made people of certain sections hate biscuits.

Something would be lost from our items of national gayety if the idea of the bride's biscuit was not a continuing one, although why this should be the first thing the bride essays I cannot guess, unless it be that bridegrooms set such store on hot biscuits. I guess that this is the reason, for recently a young man on the verge of matrimony asked me for a biscuit recipe. After reasoning on the phenomenon a bit I straightway set me about making up for lost time by trying to renew my acquaintance with what was the first formal thing I ever cooked, cream biscuits. The first I ever made were a success and so were the last, for my young niece said she could make a whole meal "off them."

Two cups of flour, two teaspoons of baking powder or four perfectly level teaspoons of baking powder sifted with the flour, if you are accustomed to using two teaspoons of baking powder per cup of flour as the baking powder manufacturers advise, a level teaspoon of salt, shortening from one tablespoon up to four, and milk to wet the whole, is the formula for baking powder biscuit. Less than a cup of wetting is usually required, but the dough should be soft.



Small Tea Biscuits Baked in "Fours."

The bride who can make biscuits is in training for pie crust making, since true success will be had with biscuits if they are made just like pie crust. Some makers of biscuits even chill the dough, as in making pie crust, when they are working for a flaky biscuit and use less baking powder.

For the sake of having a short biscuit, suppose we use four tablespoons of butter instead of one, or at least use two. The beginner can well use the largest measure of both shortening and baking powder. She can better get the idea of getting the shortening into the flour if she uses the larger quantity.

It is all well enough to talk about chopping shortening into flour, when you have as much as you use in making flaky pastry, but when you are making biscuits it is hardly worth while to try the two knives. Put your fingers right in, and work the shortening into the sifted dry ingredients until the whole has the consistency of fine sand. Gather this up into a mound, make a well in it, and into this small indentation pour the wet, part at a time.

At no time have a mass that is almost slimy wet in any part, to which flour must be added to take up that wet. With just a little care, proceeding from within out, you will get the whole wet up to a dough that will quickly amalgamate and be almost dry enough to pour out on to a board which has not been lightly floured as usual, to be quickly kneaded, rolled out, and cut into biscuits.

If you have learned to make yeast bread you must make over entirely your idea of kneading. The yeast bread needs to be kneaded until elastic. The elastic qualities of the flour have not been developed for the baking powder or soda biscuit, and the less you knead the dough the lighter your biscuits will be. The more you handle your dough the more likely you will be to get heavy biscuits.

In making sour cream biscuits, salt and a half teaspoon of soda, to a cup of cream, should be sifted with the flour, and the cream stirred into a well made in it. If the other method is tried, as in making muffins, of stirring the flour into the cream, you can get something equal to a beaten biscuit if you add the flour in small enough quantities. You can get in this way a biscuit exactly as smooth over the top as a beaten biscuit and no heavier.

A cream biscuit made with one cup of sour cream, approximately two cups of flour, and sweetened with one teaspoon of sugar, will be of that pleasant quality which the child will especially like. A little sugar sprinkled over the top and these biscuits may almost take the place of cake, even for a party. Nice little biscuits always do seem festive. But in order to work the dough shortened with cream as little as possible, it may be barely rolled or patted out into a floured tin, marked off in pie shaped sections, and sprinkled with sugar. This is like scones, which are usually brushed with egg white before the baking, and may have sugar in addition.

Small tea biscuits are often made so tiny that they make hardly more than two bites. Therefore a way of baking them for a nice type of service is to group them in fours in a pan, so that when they are baked these four will stick together, and may be thus served on a small tea plate. You can butter the tops when they are taken out of the oven. In this way you get the maximum of crust and the least dough if doughy, as they should not be in the least.

There is another way of making them seem a little different from the ordinary biscuit. It is to make what the English call "tops and bottoms" (what they call biscuits we call crackers) and what some of our cooks have called "twin biscuit." To make these, roll out the dough about half an inch thick, cut it into small rounds, spread with softened butter, put two together, and bake fifteen minutes.

In order that we may have hot biscuit, instead of hot dough, we need to bake biscuits in a genuinely hot oven, and for fifteen or twenty minutes only. For the smallest ones ten minutes may be enough. In this time they ought to bake without burning either top or bottom. They are more likely to be a delicious brown if a teaspoon of sugar is one of the ingredients.

All measurements are made level in these recipes. A teaspoon of regulation size holds sixty drops. Three level teaspoons equal one level tablespoon. Sixteen level tablespoons equal one cup (one-half pint). The half-pint measuring cup is the standard measuring cup used in modern cookery.

Cauliflower with Pimento Sauce.

Remove the outer leaves, cut off stalk close to flower, and soak in cold salt water [head down] to cover one hour. Drain and cook in boiling salt water [head up] until tender [twenty to twenty-five minutes]. Carefully remove from water to hot serving dish, pour over pimento sauce, and sprinkle with finely chopped parsley.

Pimento Sauce.

Melt two tablespoons of butter in a sauce pan, add two tablespoons of flour mixed with one-half teaspoon of salt and one-eighth teaspoon of white pepper; stir constantly until smooth and well blended. Add gradually one cup of hot top milk, continue stirring until the boiling point is reached; then add four tablespoons of pimento puree and onion juice to flavor delicately. To prepare the puree, drain pimentos from the liquid in the can, rinse with cold water, and dry between the folds of a tea towel, mash and rub through a sieve.

Celery Sauce.

Cut the outer stalks of celery in one-half inch pieces; there should be four cups; add one teaspoon finely chopped onion. Cook in some of the strained stock in which the fowl was cooked until soft. Rub through a puree strainer. Add pulp to two cups of thin white sauce.

Thin White Sauce.

Melt one-fourth cup of butter in a sauce pan, add three tablespoons of flour, stir to a smooth paste, then add gradually one cup of the strained stock in which the fowl was cooked and one cup of rich milk or thin cream, stirring until smooth and glossy. Season with one-half teaspoon of salt and one-fourth teaspoon of white pepper.

Mashed Sweet Potatoes with Marshmallow Meringue.

To four cups of boiled and riced sweet potatoes add one-third cup of butter, one teaspoon of salt, one-half tablespoon of sugar, and hot cream or milk to moisten to the consistency of mashed white potatoes. Turn into a well buttered earthen baking tin and cover with marshmallows set about one-fourth of an inch apart. Brush the powdered sugar and cornstarch from the marshmallows before placing them over the potato mixture. Bake in a moderate oven until heated through and marshmallows are puffed and delicately browned.

This is a most delicious method of preparing sweet potatoes and will prove a delight when served with broiled chicken.

Stuffed Tomatoes.

Wipe and cut a thin slice from six medium sized tomatoes. Remove the seeds and pulp, sprinkle tomatoes inside lightly with salt, invert, and let stand one-half hour. Melt two tablespoons of butter in a saucepan; in it cook one tablespoon of finely chopped onion and one-half a green pepper finely chopped (after discarding the seeds and white portion) five minutes, without browning, stirring constantly. Add one-half cup of cold cooked chicken or veal finely chopped, one-half cup of soft stale bread crumbs, and the tomato pulp; season to taste with salt, pepper, and a few grains of cayenne. Cook five minutes, stirring constantly; remove from range and add one egg slightly beaten. Refill tomato cups with mixture, rounding it well above tomatoes; cover with buttered crumbs and bake twenty minutes in a hot oven. Serve each tomato on a ring of hot buttered toast.

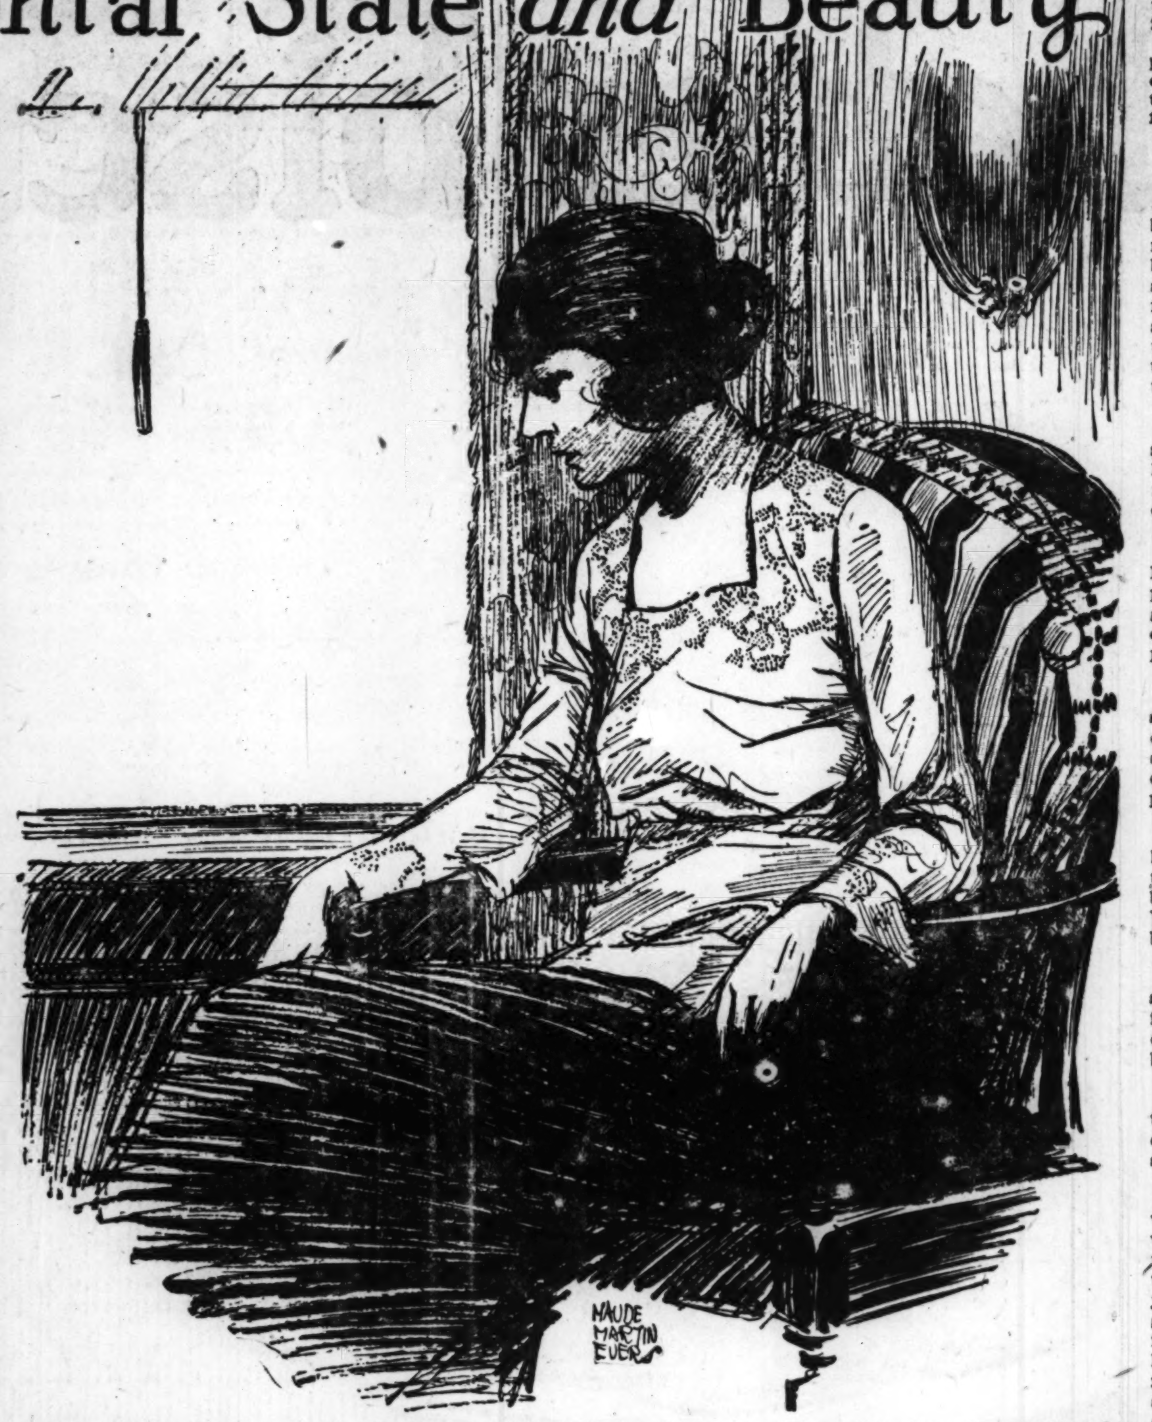
The Mental State and Beauty

By Antoinette Donnelly

> What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, an exercise, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply send stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, "Chicago Sunday Tribune."

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.



IN a certain large apartment building there live two women who are the finest examples of what a normal, healthy state of mind and an abnormally unhealthy state of mind will do for health and beauty.

One of these women, still young in years, as well as in looks, was left a widow ten years ago with two little kiddies to provide for. She had married at 20 and her husband died four years after her marriage, leaving her with some obligations to pay as well as the care and provision of the two children. How the plucky young woman got into an active business life I shall not go into details about here. But that she did and made a success of her life and a success of her home life at the same time is true. Neither is that the point of my introducing her in a beauty article, but it is her everlasting cheerfulness of spirits and her consequently young looking face and mind.

On a floor above lives a woman whose responsibilities in life to date have been limited to the care and affection of a small bulldog and her own general upkeep, care of the latter being nothing whatever to brag about. She has a husband—a decent sort and indulgent as far as his finances will permit. She is two years younger by actual count than the other woman I speak of, but looks ten years her senior. She has lines of discontent written all over her face. Her mouth corners turn down and her eyes are complaining ones. "Not what you'd call a cheery pusson," was the comment of a young friend on her. And that was putting it mildly. She will be a querulous, crabby old woman at 40, while the other woman will be a girl at that age.

The secret of the whole thing as it is plainly illustrated in these two cases is in having time to nurse grievances and worries and having no time to nurse them. The upstairs woman always has some worry or fancied grievance.

Now, there has been a good deal of bunkum written and said about how to be beautiful by thinking beautiful thoughts, some advocates putting it ahead of attention to personal hygiene. I wouldn't go that far, but I say unqualifiedly that you can give every attention to hygiene and beauty rules and care of dress and still be an unattractive looking woman if your mind is in a perpetually frenzied state over trifles, and if you refuse to direct it along the open road to cheerfulness.

Women need a more careful direction of their energies than do men. They are more restless, nervous, high strung, and sensitive as a sex.

The ordinary operations of the mind have little effect on the physical condition, but such emotions as fear, worry, anxiety, grief, despair, anger, hatred, and the like depressing emotions act directly upon the muscular and nervous mechanisms, and stamp themselves plainly upon the face.

Of all the mental attributes the emotions are the most exhausting. A woman can spend more of her strength in five minutes of unnatural excitement than in a day of calm, steady brain work. She can make an indigestion or insomnia victim or nervous wreck of herself, or a cheerful, healthy woman by training her emotions. Dwelling at length on disappointments, hopes, and fears, and loves, and hatreds endangers the balance of the brain, which accounts for most of the shooting episodes in which women have been figuring so prominently of late.

No woman can afford to let her mind become obsessed with a trouble. Every one of us has known the time after an hour or two of worry over some grievance we have reached a perfect climax of self-pity, and suddenly the light would burst in on us so that we could see how infinitesimally small the thing was after all.

The first law of self-control is to keep your troubles to yourself. Every time they are repeated their importance is exaggerated. If you cannot spread happiness, don't spread misery.

There are in the brain certain cell centers governing will power. These need to be put to work on wholesome work to get the best control of your will.

If they are hard to train at first, which is often the case with a woman whose daily life does not involve hours of concentration on a given work, build them up with outdoor air and plenty of it.

"Half the troubles in a home woman's life are not what she thinks they are, but a lack of fresh air and exercise," said a physician who treats nervous cases. "A three mile walk will erase any trouble short of a death, a murder, or a financial wipeout."

Now, next time you begin to think your services are not being appreciated by the family or by husband take your grievances out in the open and give the fresh air a chance to blow them away. If you will stay out a half hour the cure will work.

For, after all, our mental troubles are associated with a body that is not physically fit. Perhaps the unfitness is our own fault and perhaps it is not. If we laze around home without work to absorb us an impaired digestion is the result.

The trend of a woman's thoughts, the use she makes of her intellect, the sense of responsibility, and the objects of her life are all questions that have a distinct bearing upon the bodily functions and the health of the individual.

Pleasure seeking, as every sane woman knows, leads to ennui, disgust, and physical and mental deterioration. While the slavery of housework, the childish vanities, the petty cares and vexations are most injurious to the nervous system, unless the mind is trained to free itself from attaching importance to every little detail.

As a preventive of irritability, temper, quarrelsomeness, and even melancholia and mental derangement, the training of the will power to be cheerful is worth the time and energy demanded.

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES.

MRS. X.: TEETH SHOULD BE brushed at least twice a day, once on rising and once before retiring. The best kind of brush is neither hard nor soft, just medium. Brush the teeth from the gums to the biting edge and spend some time on the back of the teeth. Yes, an apple is cleansing to the teeth. Visit a dentist twice a year to catch the cavities in their infancy.

BILLIE B: SIXTY GRAINS OF sulphur mixed with one ounce of vaseline applied every other night with massage to the scalp will remedy dandruff.

* *

M. C.: YOU WOULD BETTER leave your lips alone, or they will be a positive disfigurement ere long. Raggedy, bitten lips are ugly. Rub cold cream on them at night and use will power to prevent future trouble.

* *

A. R. S.: PLEASE SEND ME A stamped, addressed envelope for the reducing exercises and diet. It contains special hip, waist, and bust reducing exercises; but it is much too long to print here.

* *

CONSTANCE C.: YOU WOULD have to tell me what kind of soap you use in your shampoo. Do you use borax or ammonia, or any such article? Write and tell me, won't you, so I can better judge.

* *

A. M. M., E., AND D. G.: PLEASE send me stamped, addressed envelope for detailed instructions on getting rid of pimples and blackheads. I am sorry, but it is too long to reprint here.

* *

A. AND B.: AGE 19, FIVE FEET three, 120 pounds; 19, five feet four and one-half, 124 pounds, according to standard measurement.

MISSY J.: THE THEORY OF UNwashed hair growing better than washed, certain long haired hermits to the contrary notwithstanding, is ridiculous on the face of it. Some folks are just naturally favored by a luxuriant growth of hair, but for general working and hair growing purposes the hair has to be kept clean to be kept free from dandruff and other hair ills, and shampooing frequently enough to accomplish this is necessary!

* *

MRS. F. A.: NECK EXERCISES and also double chine preventive? If you will do these religiously once a day, or better twice, you will never have either neck or double chin troubles. Get a good standing position, with feet apart for balance, eyes straight ahead and head erect; turn head with a quick movement to right and back to position, giving yourself commands forward right; then twist to the left and back with same sharp movement. Be sure to keep the shoulders or body from moving. Then take same position, twist head to right, from this position give side backward bend until you feel the muscles at the base of the neck in action. Repeat on the left side. Begin with three times each, gradually increasing to five and more.

HELEN: A GIRL 5 FEET 5 inches in height at the age of 16 should weigh 125 pounds. You are only about six and a half pounds under weight, and I should not be distressed about it if I were you. Just try to keep yourself in good health by eating nourishing food and getting lots of fresh air and plenty of sleep and rest. It all depends upon the kind of foot you have whether you can wear low heels or not. Persons with high arches can wear high heels comfortably, while those with broken arches should wear a heel about an inch high. If you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope, I shall be glad to send you my instructions for gaining weight.

PEGGY R.: THE ODOR FROM PERspiration can be oversome by using a 25 per cent solution of aluminum chloride in distilled water. Dab on the part gently every second or third day and allow it to dry on. It is usually sufficient to make three such applications, then to wait for a recurrence before resuming treatment, or one application a week may be made to ward off recurrences. It is best to apply the lotion at night before retiring. Be sure after using that it is thoroughly dry before putting on any clothing, otherwise it may cause an eruption of the skin and will rot the clothing. After it is thoroughly dry it will not affect the clothing.

How women can make some dollars do more work

That dollar which used to be worth one hundred cents has lost a leg and an arm. It will only do about half the work for you.

You must buy with more care than ever—both supplies and labor.

Half-a-day's help costs now what a day's help used to

Why not plan to cut time on housework and washing? Also to make garments last longer?

Here's good advice

Get something to do the hardest part of the work—a soap that will clean up a wash in quick-time—that you can use in cool water, if you want to save fuel, or that will do the work in hot water, if you wish—

A soap that, because it contains a generous lot of naptha, will dissolve the dirt out of clothes without hard rubbing.

But be sure to get the genuine and original naptha soap—not an imitation which can't do what the original will.

HOUSEKEEPER'S DELIGHT.

HOUSEHOLD efficiency experts nowadays are laying great stress on convenient interior arrangement of the home, especially in the kitchen. The difficulty of securing and keeping servants and the high wages that now are demanded have made it necessary for many women, heretofore accustomed to having their work done by maids, to perform the duties of their households. As a consequence of this situation, women are having a whole lot to say about the design of the homes their husbands are building.

It is a fact, in this great big country of ours, that we have been careless about the space we use. This applies to the home as well as to the farm and other places the efficiency experts and economists have pointed out in which we are wasters. We in the larger cities have become accustomed to converting our living room into a bedroom at night, and also to using it as a dining room at meal times. We are making one room do the work formerly accomplished by two or three, and, perhaps, are just as happy. At any rate, the energies of the housekeepers are being conserved.

Following this line of present day thought, architects are accomplishing wonders in the way they are conserving space in homes. An example of this conservation is displayed in the pretty little white bungalow shown in the accompanying design. Here is a home that it would be a delight to housekeep in. It has only four rooms, but they are of a size that means comfort, and at the same time are arranged so conveniently that the women members of the family of the prospective home builder will be delighted with it.

From an exterior viewpoint, this little bungalow is a beauty. The cute little arch over the porch, and the hip roof, as the builders call the roof that overhangs, make this bungalow attractive. The dimensions are only 23 feet 6 inches by 34 feet 6 inches, so not a large lot is required for it.

The four rooms are a living and dining room combined, with the kitchen at the rear, and two bedrooms with bathroom between opposite. The living and dining room is 11 by 16 feet, which is a good size; the kitchen is 7 feet 6 inches wide and 13 feet long, which is a shape that will allow the housekeeper tot reach any part of it with few steps. The floor plan shows where the range has been placed, with the sink, table, and wall cases for dishes and utensils only a step away. This kitchen would be approved by those who believe that a woman's work in the home should be done with the efficiency found in a modern factory.

A word about the furniture. In such a little house, it should all be small in scale and not too widely contrasting in character. Walnut is good, or browned maple, or even oak (not "golden" but light walnut color). The table should be a gate-leg, or other drop-leaf style. A davenport and one small overstuffed chair and a rush bottom ladder-back together with a wheel tea-table about complete the living room. Accessories may be added according to one's taste.

For a family of two it would be well to equip one of the bedrooms with simple twin beds, chairs, and a somnostand—nothing more, and in the other bedroom put the rest of the bedroom set—the chiffonier and dressing table, chair, rocker, shirt-waist box, etc.—and use it as a dressing room. If a day bed is used in the living room instead of the davenport, this will accommodate occasional stay all night guests. Be sure to have a long mirror screwed to the closet door in the dressing room.

A good color scheme would be dove gray for the side walls, dull green for the rugs, window shades, and awnings; cushion and lamp shades in those peculiar tints of pink mauve and blue that you see in morning glories, old ivory woodwork, and in the living room a dull violet blue velour chair and a violet and blue brocatelle day-bed cover. A bit of yellow pottery (not too bright) would give accent to the scheme. Repeat the morning glory tints in the two bedrooms.

H. L. K.: Amber, a neutral tan or gray for side walls will be in harmony with your dining and living room furnishings. If you do not wish to use a figured drapery, use either rose or mahogany in plain or striped material. Why not use a parchment shade? If silk is preferred, rose or rose and blue in combination would be good. Ivory marquisette curtains would be in good taste. Blue or mulberry drapes would look well in the dining room. Figured rug of plain blue will be best choice. Have blue as predominating color. Either brown or ivory reed chairs, upholstered in cretonne with blue as predominating color.

ETIQUETTE

WEDDING ATTENDANTS.

THE best man and maid of honor at a wedding have a few quite definite duties which are often confusing or unknown to the young men and women who are asked to officiate in these capacities at the marriages of their friends.

The former takes care of the ring for the bridegroom, and many are the amusing tales of the embarrassment of best men who as the auspicious moment in the service approaches search wildly through every pocket before they can find the elusive little band of gold. As the bridegroom's closest attendant a best man is supposed to order the minister's conveyance to and from the church (for which the bridegroom bears the expense) and to see that all the last minute details are attended to and things running smoothly. During the ceremony the best man stands nearest the bridegroom, having entered with him by the same door (a small one near the chancel), after which he walks down the aisle with the maid of honor as soon as the bride and bridegroom leave the chancel steps.

The maid of honor in her turn is the bride's closest attendant. She helps her dress for the great occasion, immediately precedes her up the aisle, and stands beside her during the ceremony. At the proper moment the bride hands her bouquet to the maid of honor to hold while the marriage is being performed. If necessary she also removes the bride's glove when the ring is about to be slipped on, or, if it has been so arranged, slits the left hand fourth finger of her glove.

At pre-nuptial festivities the best man and maid of honor are usually assigned to each other for partners, it being an accepted fact that he will escort her whenever the bridal party is being entertained. Together they assume as much as possible of the responsibility for the success and pleasure of the wedding day and the often too hectic week that precedes it.

H. H.: Sixteen is rather too young to be allowed to go to the theater with a man unchaperoned. Carefully bred girls of that age always take some older person when they go out in the evening with a young man. Your full name, with "Miss" before it or not, as you wish, is the correct thing for your visiting cards. They may be engraved in old English, script, or block type according to your personal preference.

G. M. D.: Club sandwiches are eaten with a knife and fork, as are hot roast beef, chicken, and chicken salad sandwiches. The lettuce that is served with salads is meant to be eaten. In the privacy of an indulgent home bacon and chicken may be taken in one's fingers to be eaten, but I should not advise doing so at a hotel or restaurant.

* *

H. C. S.: The minister takes his place first, entering from a little door near the chancel. Then the bridegroom and best man come in from the same door and stand to the right of the chancel steps. The ushers now walk up the aisle in twos and join the other men. They are followed by the bridesmaids and maid of honor, in that order, who form a group opposite the men. Last comes the bride on her father's arm. She and the bridegroom stand together in the center of the group, facing the minister, the father stepping back to his pew when he has given his daughter away. At the conclusion of the ceremony the bride and bridegroom are the first to walk down the aisle. They are followed by the maid of honor and best man, walking together, and then the ushers and bridesmaids in couples. The parents of the bride and bridegroom are the first to leave the church after this. The bridegroom provides, besides the ring, the flowers for the bride and her attendants, the minister's fee, and conveyance to and from the church. All other expenses of the wedding are met by the bride's father.

* *

H. K. C.: For a November luncheon you might serve cream of spinach soup with crackers, sweetbreads in patty shells, French fried potatoes, peas, rolls, hot chocolate with whipped cream, fruit salad and cheese crackers, maple mousse and sponge cake. Chrysanthemums make stunning table decorations (you might have a large, low bowl of the yellow dwarf variety in the center and a single one at each place), while bright colored crêpe paper autumn leaves pasted on plain white cards would be effective for place cards.

C. R.: It is not necessary to serve refreshments when a boy is calling upon you. However, if you are both hungry, there is no harm in going out to the dining room or pantry (providing your mother has no objections) for a piece of cake, some fruit, or a sandwich. When a man asks if he may see you to your home after a party and you do not care to have him do so, simply thank him for his courtesy and say that you have already made arrangements about going home.

* *

E. J. S.: There is really no harm, since your fiancée is a member of her school friend's bridal party, in her going to dinners and dances and other affairs given for the men and women in the bridal party alone, without you. If it could have been conveniently arranged, it would, of course, have been thoughtful of the various hostesses to include you, but when limited strictly to the bridal party it is up to you to "grin and bear it." Attend the wedding by all means, and when the ceremony is over you will not be left alone, I am sure.

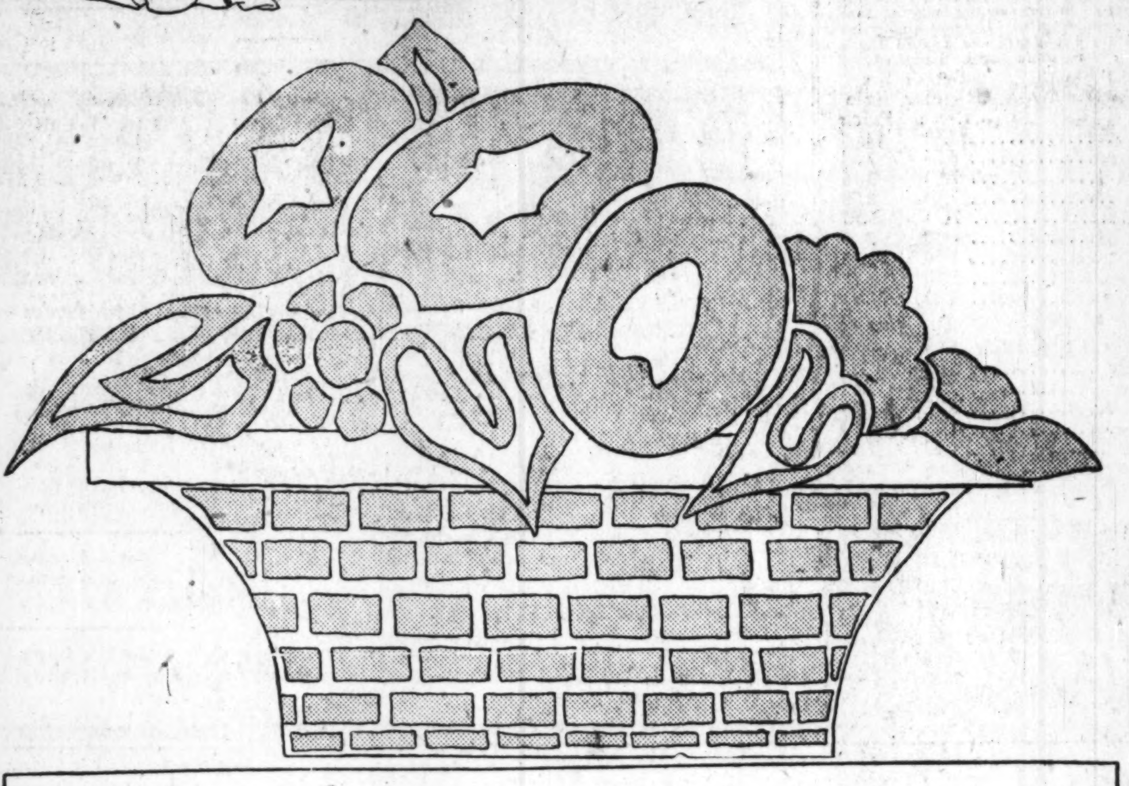
TABLE SCARF; PIN CUSHION.



WITH the thought of Christmas in mind, a batik design seems most appropriate to the season, especially now that "everybody is doing it." One can do such heaps of things with a decorative unit. In the smaller illustrations are sketches of the sort of things which would really make worth while gifts. There's a dresser scarf and pin cushion to match, or the design may be applied to a silk bag, or a row of them would make a fascinating border for a curtain in a bedroom.

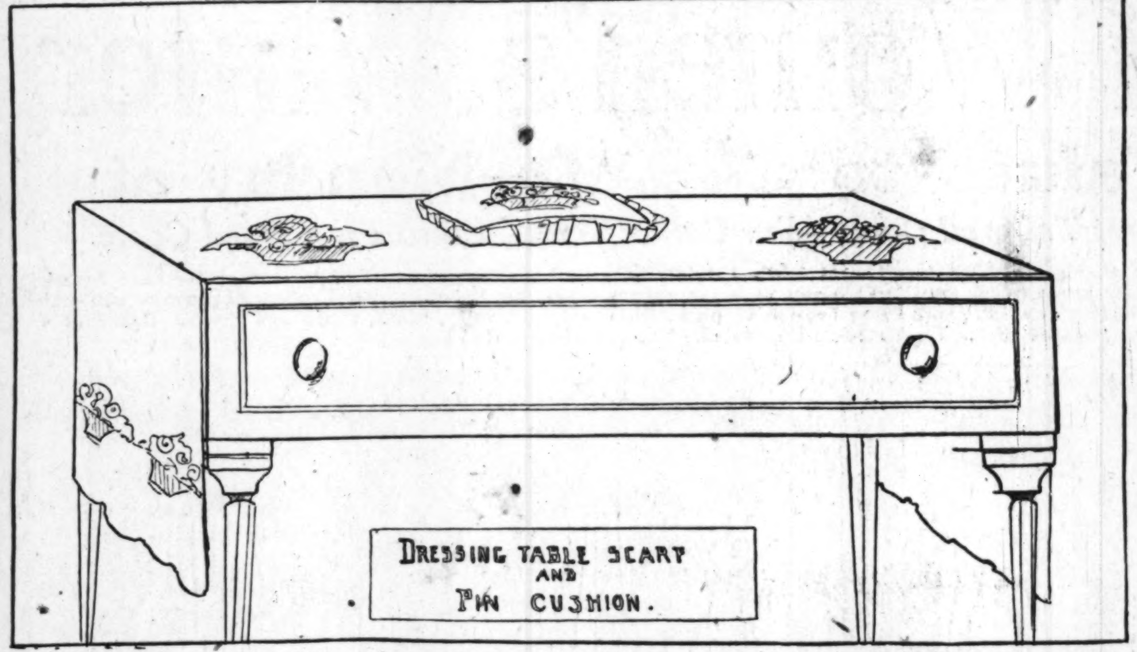
In order to make the bureau scarf and pin cushion the design should be traced on a piece of cotton crêpe eighteen inches wide and sixty inches long before hemming. For an oblong pin cushion use a piece of crêpe twelve inches by fourteen inches. Trace the design twice on each end of the scarf, forming a border pattern, as shown in the illustration. If you wish, you can trace one to the right and one to the left of the center, which helps to make the scarf still more decorative.

In the center of the piece of material to be made up as a pin cushion cover trace the design in the same manner. The tracing is done by rubbing charcoal or soft lead pencil entirely over the back of the design cut from this paper. Then trace the outline with a medium blunt pencil. If the newspaper design wears out from constant tracing you can transfer the design to writing paper by means of carbon paper and use the writing paper design for further tracing.

In transferring a design to crêpe some little difficulty may be experienced with the unevenness of the crêpe. This, however, results in an artistic effect after dyeing, as the line of the design, instead of being perfectly straight, follows the hills and hollows of the crêpe in an effective manner.

After the design is traced on the material fill in all those parts of the design that are not shaded with fine lines with liquid paraffin. Also cover all the crêpe not included in the design with liquid paraffin. The wax or paraffin is placed in a small skillet over a gas flame and heated until a blue haze comes from the melted wax. It is then painted directly on the material, using a No. 3 bristle brush for the finer spaces and a No. 8 bristle brush to cover the remaining portion of the scarf and the pin cushion material. Crush the material, after coating with paraffin, in your hands so that the much desired crackle may show after dyeing. This marbled appearance is much sought after in batik dyeing.

If a pink and rose combination is desired use scarlet dye; if two tones of blue are to be used select light blue dye. Follow the directions on the envelope (don't use soap dyes for these articles); except when completed there should be but two quarts of dye. Don't use as much water as the directions call for.



DRESSING TABLE SCARF AND PIN CUSHION.

Immerse the scarf and pin cushion top in the dye after the dye has cooled. It should be at a temperature of 60 degrees or less, else the wax will melt. Allow the articles to remain until their color is just a shade or two darker than the one you desire. Then wash in cold water until all superfluous dye is removed. Then soak in a bowl of gasoline until the wax is removed.

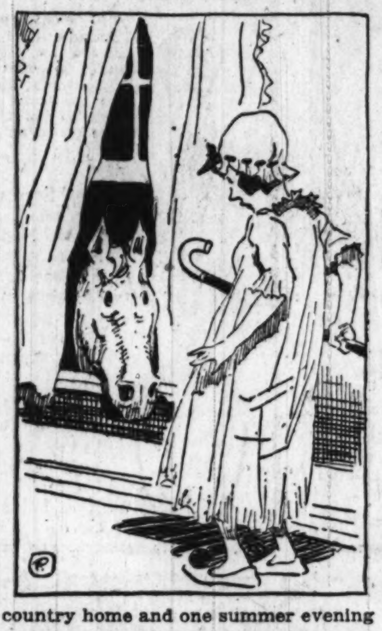
Dry and press. The method used for this design corresponds to the original Javanese method in which the background is kept light with a darker design on it.

The easier method is to paint the design and allow it to be light upon a darker background. However, the light background gives a much handsomer effect and is well worth the trouble of doing.

My Experience with a Burglar

Have you ever been face to face with a burglar in your home? Or been roughly accosted by a holdup man? Or had any experience with these gentlemen of uncertain occupation? Or were you ever scared to death by a burglar to find it a false alarm or a funny climax? Let us hear about your burglary experience. Write on one side of the paper. The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published on "My Burglary Experience." Address Burglary Contest, Chicago Sunday Tribune.

Looking for the Grass Rug.



Our windows were quite low in our country home and one summer evening I was awakened by a disturbance at the window. I cautiously crept out of bed, grabbed a cane from the corner before turning on a light, and was prepared to send a good blow at the dark object hanging partly through the window. With the flash of light and me prepared for the worst, I nearly fell over to see our horse standing with his head through the window nosing around for sweets. MRS. L. V. P.

A Cheap Thief.

I attended a meeting one evening, leaving my car standing at the curb along with seven others. Returning later, we found that the valve caps on the tires of all the cars had been stolen. It seemed strange that the thief should have left tools and other things of value and taken about the cheapest thing he could find. F. A.

Why Gray Hair
Is No Longer Necessary

New, Clean, Easy, Harmless Treatment—First Bottle Gives SATISFACTION

After having been tried and proven successfully by hundreds of their customers, leading stores throughout the country are recommending "Canute Water" for Gray Hair to those who wish the color of their hair restored. Marshall Field & Co., Rothschild & Co., Buck & Rayner, Liggett's, MacLean's and Walgreen Drug Stores sell it in Chicago on a positive guarantee of absolute satisfaction or your money back. "Canute Water" restores color to your hair so naturally and evenly that no one can possibly tell you are using anything. All questions one naturally asks are here plainly answered.

IS IT ABSOLUTELY SAFE TO USE? By all means—yes. You may use "Canute Water" for Gray Hair without the slightest fear of injury to the hair, scalp or eyes, as it contains none of the injurious elements of the ordinary hair dye, being entirely FREE from acid, sugar of lead, sulphur or coal-tar products of any kind—making it as harmless to the hair and scalp as ordinary water. It is for external use only.

WILL IT SOIL THE HANDS OR SCALP? No, it will not. Our own patented process prevents it from staining the hands or scalp. "Canute Water" for Gray Hair is an especially clean, convenient treatment—not being sticky or greasy. It restores so naturally and evenly no one will be able to tell you are using anything.

IS IT A CRUDE DYE? Positively not. That is just the thing it isn't. "Canute Water" is a simple method of reviving the youthful color of hair that has turned gray from age, illness or other cause. Proof that "Canute Water" is not a crude dye is that it has no numbered shades—the same bottle is good for all shades of hair. While as the reader knows the crude dyes are put up in packages marked with the different colors of hair or numbered 1, 2 or 3.

HOW IS IT APPLIED? Very easily. Just wet your hair with it and allow to dry in good, fresh air. Nothing hard about that, is there? Apply on hair once daily and day by day observe the hair becoming darker and darker. And by the time you have finished the first bottle the youthful color of your hair will be restored. It will then remain that way and simply require a retouching at the roots once in a while as the new hair grows out.

CAN THE DARKENED COLOR WASH OR RUB OFF? The color will not wash off. Shampoo the hair all you like—you may even use a hot curling iron, as not even that will affect the color. On the contrary, the more you shampoo the hair the softer and fluffier the hair will become.

Believe us, after a week you'll thank yourself for having tried it. Sold at the above-mentioned stores, your own druggist or by mail direct upon receipt of price, $1.10 per bottle. Friedman Canute Co., 18 East 17th Street, New York City, New York.

NOTICE—Beware of sales-people who get commissions to sell worthless imitations. To be SAFE, accept no substitute for "CANUTE WATER".

Little Chester is a real man, always requiring the female of the species to help him find his clothes. One morning he was fussing and fuming because he could not find his hat. "Somebody" had hid it. Little Sister Marian, a self-reliant and independent creature, joined in his search and soon found it. Whereupon she struck an attitude and pointing to the lost and found, called to him in tones of supreme disgust, "Heah is your hat wite where you frowed it youself, Andy Gump!" M. J. O.

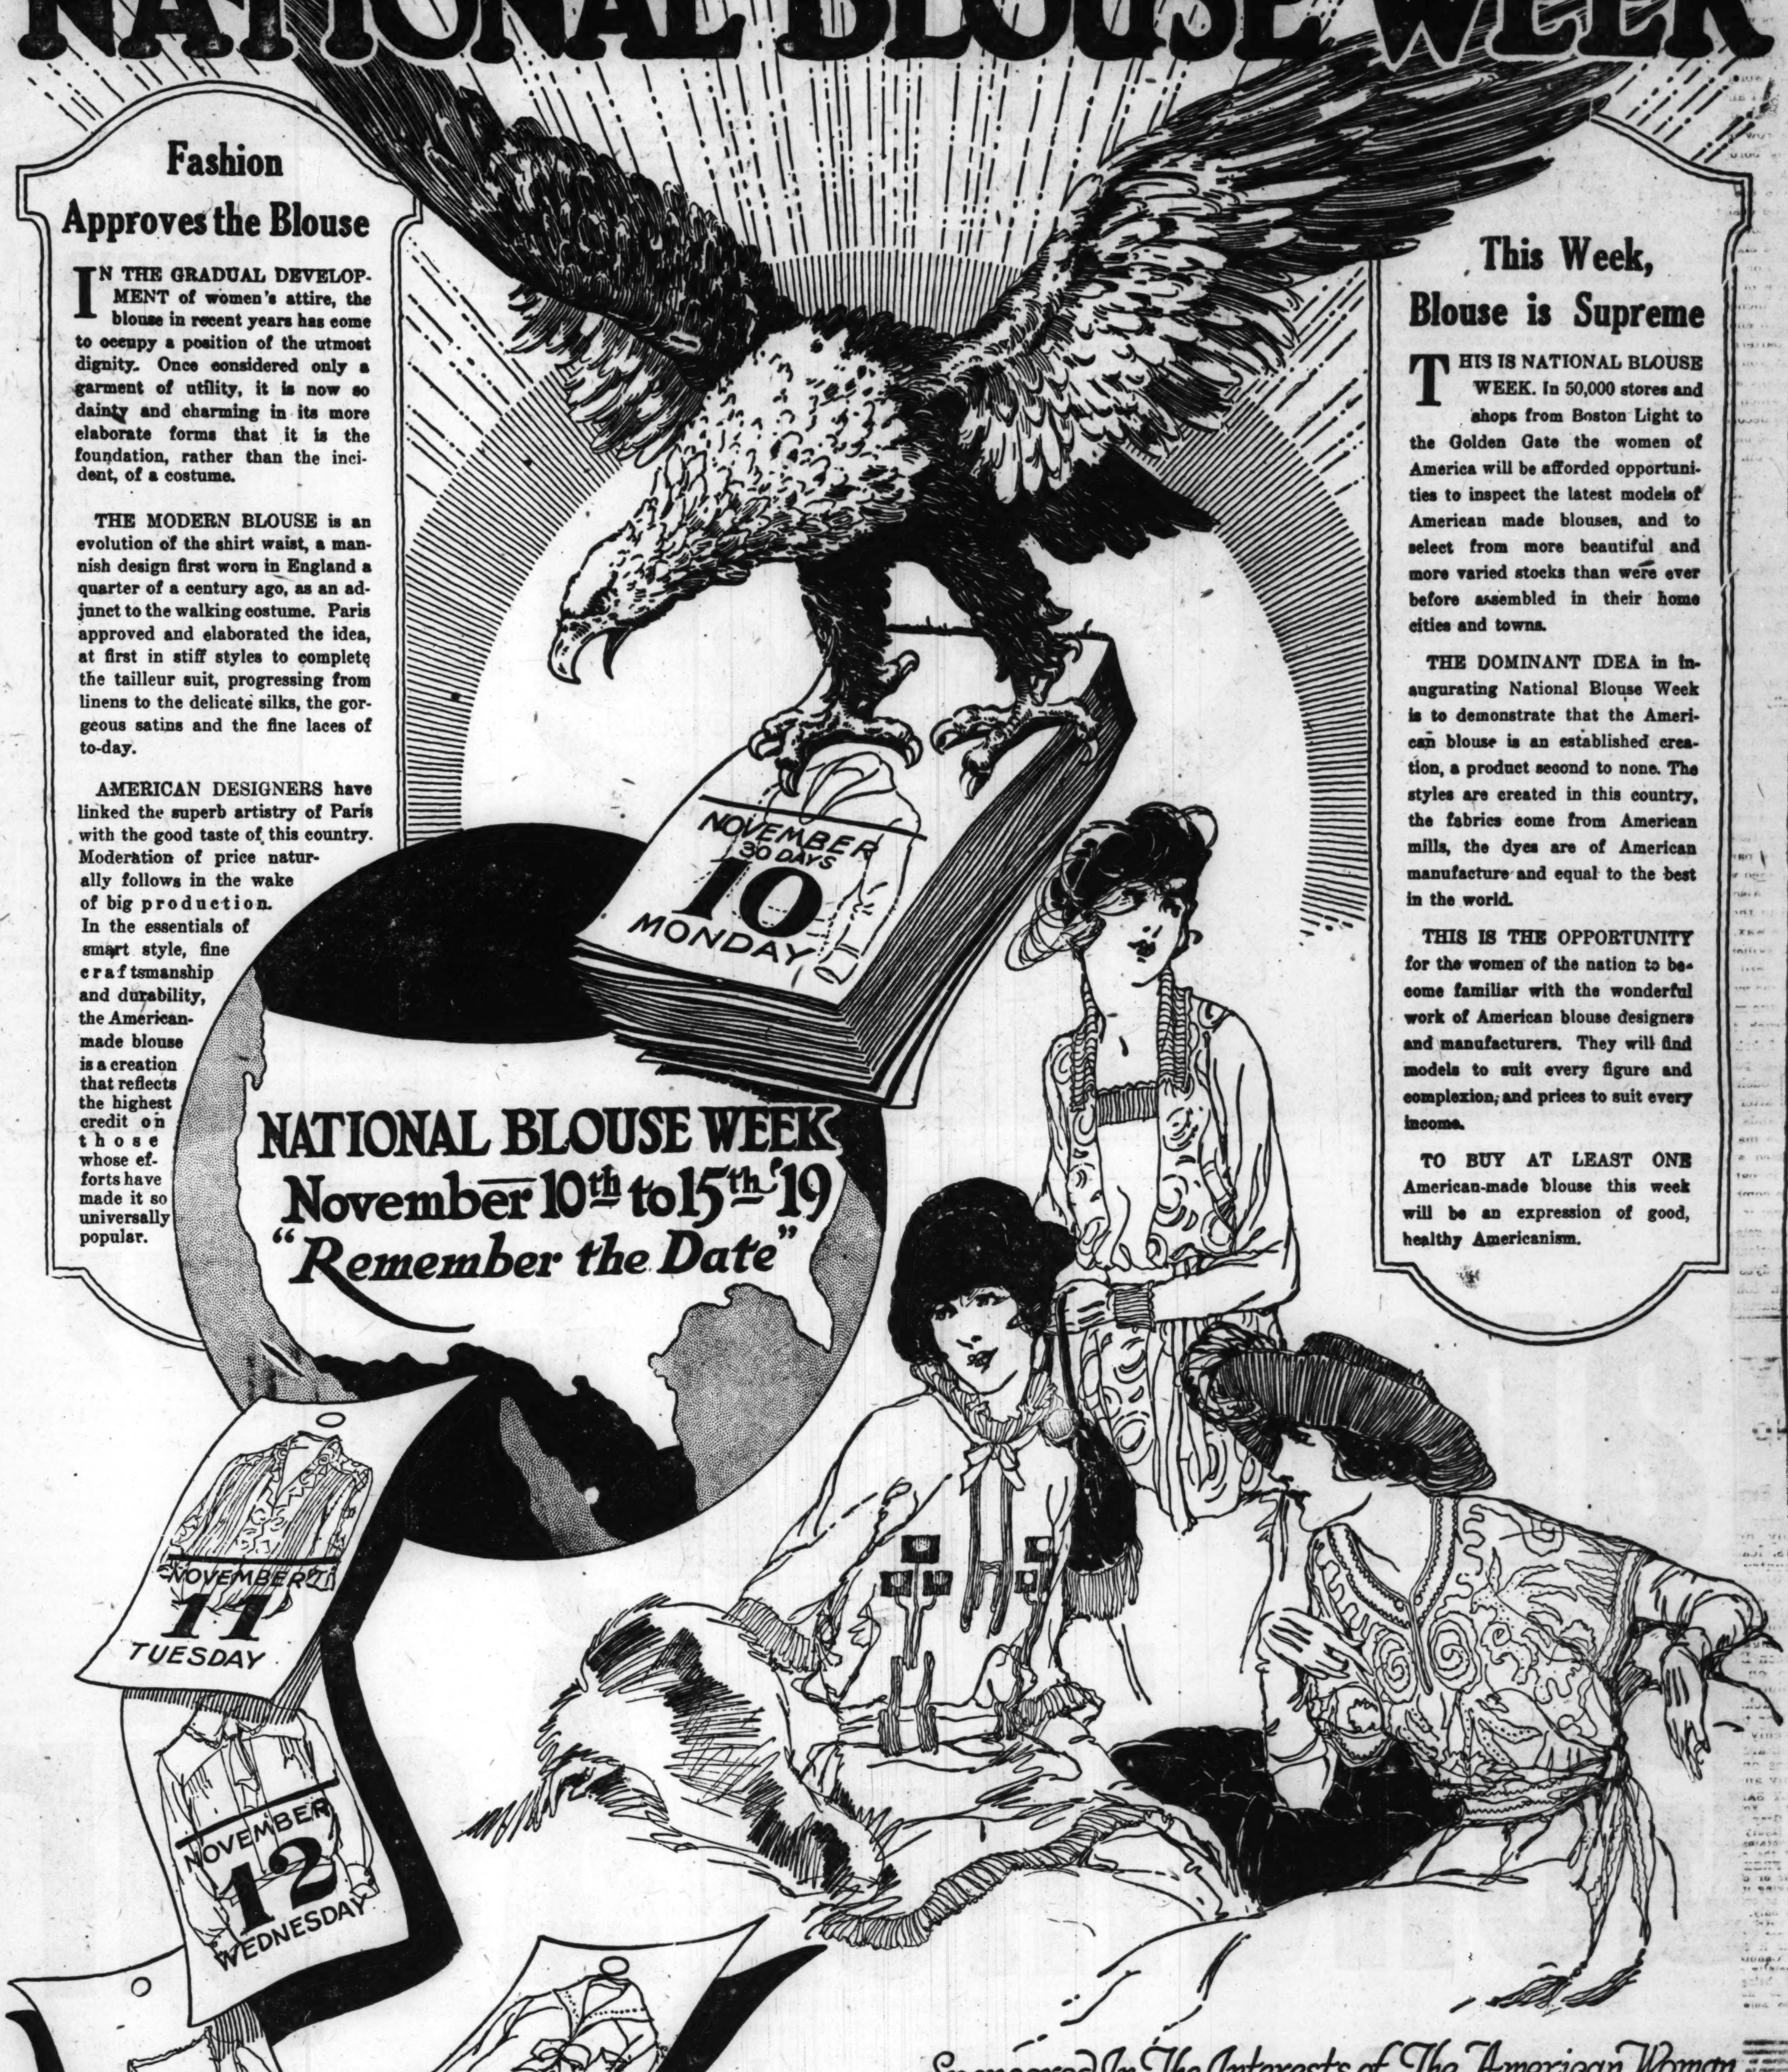
NATIONAL BLOUSE WEEK

Fashion Approves the Blouse

IN THE GRADUAL DEVELOPMENT of women's attire, the blouse in recent years has come to occupy a position of the utmost dignity. Once considered only a garment of utility, it is now so dainty and charming in its more elaborate forms that it is the foundation, rather than the incident, of a costume.

THE MODERN BLOUSE is an evolution of the shirt waist, a mannish design first worn in England a quarter of a century ago, as an adjunct to the walking costume. Paris approved and elaborated the idea, at first in stiff styles to complete the tailleur suit, progressing from linens to the delicate silks, the gorgeous satins and the fine laces of to-day.

AMERICAN DESIGNERS have linked the superb artistry of Paris with the good taste of this country. Moderation of price naturally follows in the wake of big production. In the essentials of smart style, fine craftsmanship and durability, the American-made blouse is a creation that reflects the highest credit on those whose efforts have made it so universally popular.



This Week, Blouse is Supreme

THIS IS NATIONAL BLOUSE WEEK. In 50,000 stores and shops from Boston Light to the Golden Gate the women of America will be afforded opportunities to inspect the latest models of American made blouses, and to select from more beautiful and more varied stocks than were ever before assembled in their home cities and towns.

THE DOMINANT IDEA in inaugurating National Blouse Week is to demonstrate that the American blouse is an established creation, a product second to none. The styles are created in this country, the fabrics come from American mills, the dyes are of American manufacture and equal to the best in the world.

THIS IS THE OPPORTUNITY for the women of the nation to become familiar with the wonderful work of American blouse designers and manufacturers. They will find models to suit every figure and complexion, and prices to suit every income.

TO BUY AT LEAST ONE American-made blouse this week will be an expression of good, healthy Americanism.

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Sunday Tribune. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped, addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

Write Him a Note.

"Dear Miss Blake: Having read your answers in the paper, I would like you to give me a little advice. I met a fellow whom I liked very much and he called on me and said he would phone me soon. He has not done so, and as I intend giving a party in the near future I would like to know if it would be proper to call him up and invite him, as I like his company very much. B. B."

Write him a note if you wish, inviting him to your party. That will put him in the position of being able to refuse if he does not care to come, and it's a fairer way of extending an invitation to one who is more or less of a stranger than phoning him.

She Has a Rival.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young girl of 18 years old, and am considered beautiful by all my friends (but that is nothing in my life compared to the love of the young man I have been going with for the last six months). He has told me he loves me and that the more he sees of me he wants me, but there is another girl that calls him up and annoys him terribly. She is a personal friend of his parents and they are trying to encourage him into going with her, but he doesn't care for her and always breaks his engagements with her. Now he has asked to give me a diamond or to marry him, but I feel that I couldn't accept the ring from him when I know his parents would rather have him go with this other girl. What would you advise me to do? Please do not throw this away, as I am anxious to give him my answer. He is 21 years old and surely he ought to know which of the two of us girls he loves the best. A. B."

I agree the young man ought to know who should wear his diamond ring, and there is no obligation on your part under the circumstances to consider a rival's rights of priority.

Lonely Girl Wants Friends.

"Dear Miss Blake: After reading your articles for some time, I thought I would come to you with my problem.

"I am a young girl who has lived here for a short time and I know very few nice girl or boy friends and I would like very much to become acquainted with some.

"The few men that I have become acquainted with are not the kind I would care to associate with, as I have been insulted by some of them; and I have often wondered what there is about me that gives men the idea that I am a very poor sort of a girl, as they must think that, or they wouldn't pass the remarks tha they do. I am so tired of that kind of friends that I have decided to stay in evenings and not go with any one, although I do feel 'out of it' when other girls talk of their sweethearts.

"Would you be so good as to advise me how to get acquainted with some real nice men, as the dance halls and places like that are so filled with a class of men that I do not care for. I would care to know some one who knows how to respect a good girl, as I am not the kind of girl they seem to judge me as. READER."

It used to be my firm conviction that the writers of letters like yours were to blame for the disrespect paid them by men, but I have come to think differently, because I have received so many letters written to me in the straightforward, frank, and honest vein of yours, and I am forced to believe that there is this unfortunate condition afloat. I don't know what the reason is, but it may be the bizarre dress of some of the girls of today and it may be the more bizarre conduct and the good girls are made to suffer with the vulgar. Of course that is no high commentary on the young men. However, it is possible to make a change in the attitude of even a fresh young man by presenting him the right sort of rebuttal. There is in every man a sense of honor and decency which, appealed to, remodels him into a self-respecting and respectful youth. I hate to think that every girl would have to go through such training and I do not think they do, but I am convinced that the girl alone in the city is very apt to suffer unpleasantness that a girl with a home background is not subjected to.

Seem to Be in Doubt.

"Dear Miss Blake: We are two girls, 18 years of age, deeply in love with two boy chums. The boys have been paying us quite a bit of attention lately and have asked us to marry them and go to Canada to live. Do you think they love us enough for us to marry them? We are asking you for advice as we have no parents. S. C."

If there is a doubt in your mind about it, I am afraid they don't and until they have proved their love sufficiently to make you honestly believe in it, you would better not treat the matter too seriously.

Not Worth Much.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young girl, 16 years my next birthday, going with a fellow of 19. I love this young man very much, as he is the most handsome fellow in our neighborhood and all the girls are crazy about him. Now, what I want to know is what is your opinion of a young fellow who takes liberties with you and what is your opinion of a girl who lets him do so, even if she loves him so deeply that she cannot resist him? Whenever we go to the theater he borrows the money from my mother. Do you think this is right? A."

My opinion of a young man such as you describe, and of a girl who permits him liberties, is one that no mother's nice daughter would want to have thought of her or of the man she loves. His money borrowing principle in addition makes him a rather unspeakable young cad.

Helping the Needy.

I am a returned soldier and while waiting for a friend in front of one of the stores on a hot day, holding my hat in my hand, a woman passing by dropped a silver piece in it, saying, "We all must help our poor wounded soldiers." Needless to say there was much laughter and I disappeared in the crowd. M. K.

One of Babe Ruth's Homers.

I think the most embarrassing moment of my life happened at the White Sox ball game when Babe Ruth knocked the ball over the right field bleachers. I was sitting on the top of the wall and the ball was coming right at me, but it went through my hands and broke my straw hat, and everybody began to laugh, and you know the result. J. N.

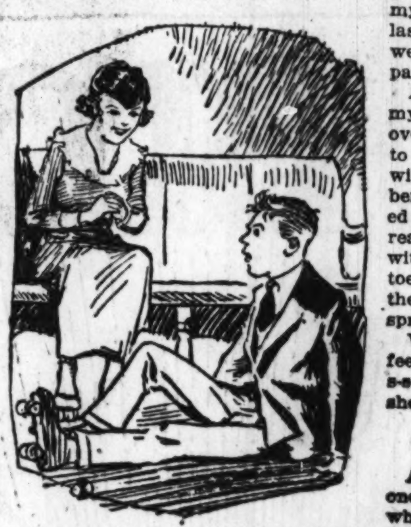
Out of Luck.

My girl friend, noticing the "for sale" sign on our house, asked me whether I was going to move away and leave her. I answered, "Don't worry, we're not that lucky." Meaning, of course, lucky in selling our house. I had a hard time covering up my error. A. J.

Falling for Ruth.

My most embarrassing moment was a good many years ago, but I still recall it vividly. As a boy in high school



I was extremely shy and bashful—look at a girl or talk to one—horrors, that would be the last thing I would do in my life! About my senior year my viewpoint began to change. I saw that I was losing out on a whole lot of fun, so I decided to get into the swim.

About this time roller skating was all the fad. High school dances were a thing of the past—everything then was roller skating parties. Well, I knew less about roller skating than I did about girls, so I joined a beginners' class and tried to master the mysteries of the wheeled skates. At last I considered that I could skate well enough to go to the next roller party.

At the party I rolled around all by myself until the party was about half over, trying to get up enough courage to ask a certain young woman to skate with me. She was sitting on a long bench placed against the wall. I skated up to her and attempted to stop real correctly by applying the brake with my toe, but instead of putting my toe on the floor I placed my heel, with the result that the next minute I was sprawled completely out on the floor.

While in this position at the girl's feet I stuttered: "R-R-R-uth, will you s-s-skate with me?" Strange to say she did! C. R. D.

Bread of Fine Flavor.

At a luncheon one afternoon every one present was admiring the pretty white hands of a bride, when I said, "It seems the only time my hands are really clean lately is when I bake bread." My sister looked at me queerly for a minute, then said, "No wonder your bread tastes so good, but next time I come over I'll bring a loaf of my own make." Of course every one screamed with laughter, and it was impossible to explain that it was before baking I thoroughly cleaned my hands. M. A. L.

The future health of your children is being determined—now. How zealously you look after their welfare—their food, the air they breathe, their clothing, regular hours of sleep and play!

The vital thing too often neglected

But too often one of the most important factors, one that has an immediate vital bearing on the present and future health of your children, is overlooked. Too often the teeth are neglected—with the consequent heritage of ill health, backwardness in school, unattractiveness and lack of that charm of personality which comes from radiant, happy smiles.

"Begin with the children at an early age and teach them to clean the teeth at least twice a day, morning and evening," advises Dr. Samuel G. Dixon of the Pennsylvania State Health Commission. "Do not allow the fact that the first teeth will be replaced by others to excuse neglect. Their present health, the prevention of decay and its accompanying pain, and the formation in these early years of the essential habit of cleanliness, make the care of the children's teeth of utmost importance."

Essentials of the right dentifrice

The selection of the right dentifrice for the children's teeth is of first importance. "It is important to have a dentifrice," says a dental authority in Woman's Magazine, "that, besides being good for the teeth, has a taste that the child likes, tempting him to clean his teeth."

Senreco is such a dentifrice. It is "good for the teeth," and the gums, too; it has "a taste that the child likes." Conclusive proof of its merit is furnished by the fact that Senreco is the preferred dentifrice of the movie world, a profession in which ill-kept teeth would be startlingly revealed by the all-seeing eye of the camera.

"Not to care for the teeth, and not to instruct children to do so from their earliest years, is to practice the costliest form of carelessness in which one can indulge."—Editorial in Philadelphia North American, Sept. 5, 1917.

"Statistics show that from 90 to 98 per cent of the school children in all countries suffer from some form of preventable dental disease, and what concerns us more directly is that the greater proportion of backward children, those unable to keep up with the active work of the class, are found to be suffering from some form of dental disorder, arising mainly from neglect of the simplest and most obvious rules of mouth hygiene."—Dr. Edward C. Kirk, dean of University of Pennsylvania Dental School

Why Senreco is preferred

Senreco is a dentist's formula combining the cleansing agents recommended as ideal by United States Army dental surgeons.

Senreco has no "druggy" action on the teeth, but cleans them by gently dissolving and removing the food coating that causes decay. By an equally gentle polishing and brightening action, it brings out all the natural whiteness and lustre of the teeth. In doing this, Senreco does all that any dentifrice can do for the teeth.

Beneficial to the gums, too

But the beauty of the teeth depends upon the care of the gums as well as the teeth themselves. Senreco is wonderfully beneficial to the gums. With each tube is included a booklet that gives a Senreco treatment that helps to tone up and invigorate the gums, to keep them firm and sound, and to impart to them that healthy pink color so necessary to really beautiful teeth.

Another authority speaks

"The habit of using a tooth brush should be acquired as soon as a child can wield it, and this habit should never be abandoned. The teeth should be brushed at least twice a day. Not only the teeth, but the gums and the back of the tongue, should be cleansed. The usual sawing movement of the brush across the teeth is far less efficacious than a rotary movement from the gums downward. A thorough rinsing of the mouth and forcing the water between the teeth is of great importance."—Dr. Matthias Nicoll, Jr., of the New York State Department of Health, in Outlook

Senreco is pleasant to use. The very first time you try it, you will actually feel it cleaning your teeth as no other tooth paste ever did. When you touch your tongue to your teeth you will know they are really clean.

Take home a tube of Senreco today. Learn for yourself why so many people will have no other tooth paste. Large tube, 35c, at your druggists' or toilet goods counters. Senreco, Cincinnati, Ohio.

"See your dentist twice yearly, use Senreco twice daily"

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Dances to Feature Winter's Gayety; Assemblies Back

By Mme. X.

YOU'D better have your dance pumps and French heeled slippers put in prime condition; be sure they don't pinch and aren't too loose, for this is going to be Terpsichore's own winter.

Of course, you and every one you know will go to the big ball which Mrs. William J. Chalmers and her committee are arranging for next Friday evening at the First regiment armory, where the dancers will dance so that the little patients at the Country Home for Convalescent Crippled Children may walk. The nondancers will look on from the white and gold boxes, or from the draped balconies overhanging the scene.

For the first time in three years the Assembly balls, the smartest entertainments of the season, will be revived. The dates for these two functions, which will be given at the Blackstone hotel, are Nov. 28 and Jan. 16. Just what effect the now well established drought will have on the gayety of these formerly brilliant gatherings remains to be seen. The suppers will be the same elaborate, sit down affairs in the main dining room of the hotel as of yore. But, minus the exhilarating fruit of the sun kissed grapes of France, will the guests jest so cheerfully or linger as long over the food, delectable though it will doubtless be? Will gaseous and fizzing waters warm the heart and quicken the wit? I fear not.

The swift and devastating flight of time is evidenced by the necessitated revision of the Assembly invitation list. So many of the original founders, members, and guests are either dead or have left Chicago, and there's such a large crop of newcomers, candidates for the places of those departed, that the governors of the Assemblies are in the throes of making a new catalogue of these they will invite to these two popular dances. Among the men especially prominent in directing the activities of these balls are Arthur Meeker, Watson Blair, Howard Gillette, and Eames MacVeagh.

Bachelor-Benedict Dance.

Two nights before the first Assembly the Bachelors and Benedicts will hold high carnival, also at the Blackstone hotel. These dances have a tradition of youthful gayety which years of repetition have not dimmed.

It would seem about time for those ultra cheerful revels, the Butchers and Bakers' frolics, to be revived by that inventive genius, "Billy" Gamble. These fancy dress dances have always been the merriest, most original affairs of the season.

Not to be left behind by the Saddle and Cycle, Casino, and South Shore Country clubs, the Arts club is initiating next Friday afternoon weekly tea dances which promise to be as gay and chic as anything of their kind in town. The two large and attractive picture galleries and the dining room, which open by wide, high arches into each other, will be rimmed about by little tea tables, so that one can sit and sip a brew from India or China, and watch the whirling dervishes of fashion, or study the various picture shows which come and go so rapidly there. It will be the popular rendezvous after the Friday concerts.

Apropos of art, John Sargent, America's greatest painter, has made a portrait this autumn of Mrs. R. T. Crane (better known as Mrs. "Dick" Crane). He has practically renounced portrait painting and only, at rare intervals, allows himself to be distracted from the land and sea scapes to which he devotes himself these days. Mrs. Crane's likeness is in colored crayons, or pastel—I forget which is the right term—and is said to be a brilliant piece of work.

She herself has an interesting enterprise in hand. She has bought an old, colonial house near her beautiful place at Ipswich. This picturesque structure she is furnishing with the rarest, choicest chairs, tables, cabinets, beds, china, glass, and other "bibelots" she can find suitable to such a house and intends to make of it a little museum somewhat after the fashion of the Musée Carnavalet at Paris.

Before and After.

Just what sort of people are we Americans? Are we a heedless, happy-go-lucky, short-memoried race, offspring of the bandarlog? Or are we concealing our love of country, our gratitude to its defenders behind a grinning mask of indifference.

When we entered the war such an upwelling of passionate admiration towards our soldiers swept the land that they were sent off hung not with garlands but with socks, sweaters, mufflers, wristlets, mittens, and comfort kits in an abundance never known before in the annals of war. Nothing at home or abroad was too good for them. They alone, of all the folk of the earth, ate entirely white bread and had all the sugar they could consume. Great stores of hospital garments and bandages, the work of millions of American women, are still stacked in France and America, mute testimony to devotion.

When our warriors finally returned, a victorious army, we welcomed the first homecomers with tremendous enthusiasm. The latest detachments of troops, however, have arrived among us almost unnoticed.

Numerous young and lovely girls all other the land studied to fit themselves to help reconstruct, re-educate, and cheer the convalescent soldiers in our military hospitals. Hundreds of our leading physicians and surgeons gave up their private practice to devote themselves to their country's wounded at merely nominal salaries. There was a wave of exhaltation and self-sacrifice which made some feel that selfishness and materialism were dead forever.

Today that wave has turned into a swiftly retreating ebb. The societies for aiding the disabled soldiers are dissolving. Almost all the pretty young girls—whose work was of the greatest benefit—have retired to home life. The civilian medics and surgeons have returned to their more lucrative professional careers. The supply of automobiles to provide outings for the convalescents at the Fort Sheridan Military hospital grows daily less, which may be taken as a fair gauge of public interest.

Keeping Up Morale Aids Cure.

And yet, at twenty-four American military hospitals, 22,000 wounded men are still being cared for. Many of them are facing lifelong mutilation. All of them have youth's impatience with pain and helplessness. For their permanent cure the keeping up of their morale—which means, keeping up their hope, courage, cheerfulness—is as important as any other part of their cure.

At the Fort Sheridan hospital this morale is not what it was six months ago; the men are, many of them, bored, bitter, and full of an often unspoken resentment against a country which seems to have laid them on the shelf. This feeling is probably not confined to the patients at Fort Sheridan.

One of the most effective means of dissipating this perfectly natural restlessness and depression is the little papers or periodicals which the men in the hospitals are encouraged to get out. They write, print, publish, and sell them, and to help provide funds for this work, as only five of these publications are self-sustaining, the morale division of the Red Cross, under Mrs. George McKinlock, is planning a two days' street sale of the de luxe edition, the "Souvenir of the First Division, A. E. F.," an attractive brochure, authorized by the war department, including brief accounts of the 2d, 3d, 4th, 5th, 6th, and 7th divisions of regulars, a war souvenir which, in the coming years, will have an increasing value.

Mrs. McKinlock has enlisted as salesmen and saleswomen 1,000 boys of the Lane "Tech," members of the Epworth league, of the Oak Park and Englewood clubs, the Y. M. C. A., the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Veterans of the Spanish war, Fort Sheridan women, and public school teachers. On her committee are Mrs. Leonard Wood, honorary chairman, and the Mesdames Marshall Field, Morris Johnston, Joseph Ryerson, Dorey, and Humphreys.

So, if next Thursday and Friday you buy one or more of these "Victory Parades," you will not only get more than your money's worth but you may be helping reëstablish in some returned wounded soldier's mind a renewed faith in his countrymen and even his country itself.

Auction Bridge Festival.

Bridge players, take notice! Next Thursday, the 13th, at 2:30 p. m., at the Casino, there will be a big auction bridge festival, where devotees of this fascinating game can gather and, in a highly sympathetic atmosphere, make it spades or no trumps, double and redouble, make little slams or big ones, all for the benefit of the building fund of that delightful and appealing institution, the North Avenue day nursery.

As last summer they found their former home in North avenue literally tumbling about their ears, and were ordered by the city to leave it, the young women who have for some years been supporting this nursery raised a part of the sum necessary to buy a nice little cottage near by, at 2023 Pierce street, and moved their nurses and sixty infants into it. They also moved the charming frescoes from the old house made by Miss Julia Thompson.

It is to complete this purchase money that they are getting up this card party for next Thursday. Tickets may be obtained from Mrs. Donald MacPherson, 68 East Division street. The president of the association is Mrs. Alden Swift; its vice-president is Mrs. De Forest Hulburd. Mrs. John McCutcheon is treasurer.

City people don't have all the good times. Up at the Great Lakes Naval Training station the officers and their families have many cheerful resources, the most popular of which is their Friday evening roller skating parties in the big drill hall. To the music of a lively marine band the skaters dart around and around the shining rink.

It's also a favorite spot of some of the younger Lake Foresters, who every Friday brave the terrors of the bad roads leading to the station. These roads seem always striving to isolate the station, and its agreeable set of officials. Among the Lake Foresters who go most regularly to these station skating meets are the Ralph Pooles, Leeds Mitchells, Charles Schweppes, Byron Harveys, and Howard Linns.

Change at Naval Station.

The personnel of the naval station is always changing. The latest to leave there were Capt. and Mrs. Henry E. Odell, a most attractive couple. He was at the head of the "hospital ship" there, as they call even a land hospital in the navy, and a most agreeable man, while his wife, who had been brought up in Japan, is extremely pretty and charming.

A year ago at this time she did splendid work during the serious influenza epidemic which for weeks held the station in its clutches. Mrs. Odell took the night duty at the Red Cross cottage, which was devoted to the use of visiting relatives of the stricken men. The place was filled with cot beds where the visitors rested at night.

Mrs. Odell's duty was to keep in touch with the hospitals and to warn the waiting families when death was impending or had already occurred. It was a hard, heart breaking task, but she stuck to it during the long weeks the epidemic lasted.

Capt. Odell has been transferred to Mare island, near San Francisco, where he has been put in charge of the medical supply department.

To Tell of Work in France.

Next Saturday afternoon the annual meeting of the Eli Bates House committee will be held at the residence of Dr. George S. Isham, 1340 North State street, when Abbé Dimnet of the Stanislas college at Paris will give an address on "American Social Service Methods in France." He has much to say of the new France, the France which is rising from the ruins left by the war, which will be of interest to his hearers.

Several luncheons are to be given before the lecture. Among the hostesses will be the Mesdames Arthur Farwell, Russell Tyson, George A. Thorne, and W. B. Storey.

Residents on or adjacent to the Lake Shore drive and Sheridan road are much excited by the appearance of a wonderful new motor bus, a two story creation where the top seats are inclosed and under roof. Just how they get that lofty roof under the death charged overhead trolley cables in the loop under the lower stretches of the elevated roads, I don't know, but the latest edition of a double decker certainly promises to temper the wind to such shorn lambs as like to mount to the motor bus' second floor. The writer's opinion is that a ride up there is one of the real joys of metropolitan life, next door in exhilaration to a cruise in a Zeppelin's hanging basket.

WEDDINGS.

The marriage is announced of Miss Gladys Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Paul Miller of 5490 South Shore drive, formerly of Madison, Wis., to Laben Jenkins Brady of Chicago, which took place last evening. After a wedding journey in Florida, Mr. and Mrs. Brady will reside in Chicago.

Miss Isabelle MacFarlane, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. MacFarlane of 5132 Woodlawn avenue, will be married to Herbert Edmond Kerber on Tuesday evening at the Kenwood Evangelical church. Following the ceremony a reception will be held at the South Shore Country club.

Mrs. C. K. Major of 6138 Woodlawn avenue announces the marriage of her daughter, Lenore, to Wallace E. Doster, which took place yesterday.

Announcement is made by Mr. and Mrs. J. Harry McFarland of 4440 Drexel boulevard of the marriage of their daughter, Ella, to Ralph Lyman Crosthwaite of New York, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Crosthwaite, which took place on Wednesday evening at St. Paul's Episcopal church.

NEWS OF THE CHICAGO WOMEN'S CLUBS

Jewish Women to Have Program and Reception

The Institute Woman's club of the Chicago Hebrew Institute has planned a meeting to be held on Tuesday, Nov. 25, at which time a Thanksgiving celebration will be given, including a historical program, in which the members will be the participants. Following the program there will be a reception to welcome the new members of the club. The affair will be given in the new quarters of the organization in the State-Lake building.

Mrs. Leon Bloch, the new president of the club, has outlined her plans for work in the future, that of contributing to the success of the great work being done by the Hebrew Institute for the Jewish children, who are eagerly responsive to the opportunities offered for their social and educational betterment.

The charter members of the organization are rightfully proud of the growth of the activities which were launched several years ago. The music school, for instance, which began with a handful of pupils and one teacher, has become a fullfledged school with a membership of several hundred and a teaching staff of four who are kept busy five days a week. The club members feel that if they had accomplished nothing more, the results of this one activity would more than compensate for their untiring efforts. The enthusiasm of the children in the classes brings into many homes undreamed of pleasures and a new ambition to strive for the better and nobler things in life.

Added to this are many instances of individual interest and personal contact with the children, as, for example, the celebration of the Jewish festivals, occasions so sacred to the parents. The children are made to see them in a new light of beauty and significance, and thus home ties are strengthened through sympathy and understanding.

The club also arranges summer outings for the children, thus giving them not only happy, normal vacations, but in many cases affording them the few bright spots in the year's calendar.

The true spirit of America finds no better illustration than the personal service done by these women for the children whose privilege it is to have been born in America, and to their co-religionists, who have never learned to smile in the pogrom horrors of Europe. The Woman's Institute club follows closely the ideals of the parent organization—to insure in every possible way a happy, healthy, and sane citizenship.

To extend the opportunity for this service to other women who are interested in its appeal, the club is launching a membership campaign. It hopes to enroll those women who can look into the future and see what a force for good their efforts will be, to erase from the minds of the children all that has been horrible in other lands, and to make of them happy, American children. In addition to the service which the club renders others there are cultural opportunities afforded the members in the programs for the year, which have been carefully prepared and promise to be of interest and profit.

THE TRIBUNE PROGRAM FOR MIDDLE WEST DEVELOPMENT

I. Open the Great Lakes to the Atlantic.
II. Finish the Lakes to the Gulf Waterway Without Delay.
III. Develop a Practical Highway System.
IV. Regrow Our Vanished Forests.

FOR UNIVERSAL SERVICE NOW.

The immediate question with regard to universal military service is whether the bill will be reported out of committee for action in this congress or will be held over until after election. Delay has only timidity as counselor. It is prejudicial to the bill and the system it seeks to establish for the good of the United States.

We are convinced that timidity has no good excuse in facts or prospects. There would be some objection to the service. That may be conceded. No legislation affecting virtually every citizen in the country directly or indirectly can expect unanimous approval from the citizens.

Pacifists and slackers will not like it, but neither element ought to be permitted to run the nation or control its policies. We do not allow the slackers to do it when there is danger and we ought not to allow the pacifists to increase the danger.

The country would adjust itself quickly to universal service. It would impose so little a burden upon the time of the young men and would give them such advantages in return that it would soon have general approval for its peace benefits alone.

It is virtually nothing out of the life of a young man for him to give six months' time to a national service before he has settled down into his later relationship to life. Universal service would be accepted in American homes as a normal part of the preparation for life and it would not be regarded as imposing an unusual hardship any more than the academy and college are regarded as imposing hardships.

When the individual and national benefits are considered the time required to obtain them is insignificant. Yet the thing which congressmen dread, because they fear the opinion of their constituents, is making it mandatory upon the youth to give six months to national service.

An American who is unwilling to give six months to his country out of his lifetime in a service which benefits him and strengthens his country is so poor an American that his nation would be better off if he transferred his citizenship elsewhere.

If universal service wins in congress, young men will give some time in their youth to their nation. They will be the better for it. The nation will be the better for it. They will be physically bettered, mentally bettered, and the nation will be integrated, highly nationalized, and safe.

If universal service does not win in congress we shall certainly repeat all the mistakes of our military history, go into troubles undeveloped and make them tragic for ourselves, and young men will give not six months' time but their lives.

The time to press this legislation is now. The country ought to know its mistakes now and now is the time to correct them.

SIX HOURS AND THE FARMER.

Recent comment by farmers' associations and the agricultural press has disclosed the fact that the conditions of industrial warfare now prevailing are deeply resented by the men who till the soil.

For genuine efforts to correct unjust conditions of labor the farmer unquestionably feels sympathy. But looked at from the vantage point of his tilled field, the industrial struggle discloses facts and tendencies which cannot appeal to one who is himself the most important of all laborers—a skilled laborer working long hours under heavy responsibility for a moderate and unstable reward.

As a producer he finds himself threatened by paralysis of transportation and increased rates, although from his point of view the compensation and conditions of railroad work are reasonable, and he has seen this compensation advance sharply in the last three years.

As a consumer he finds all his necessities greatly increased in price, while he confronts a fall in prices for what he has to sell.

As a producer he has been exhorted for over two years to produce to the limit, and he has responded to the limit of his strength. He has been told it was his duty to work unceasingly that the world may be fed and his country meet her great obligations. Yet he finds labor ignoring this appeal and engaged everywhere in a struggle for more money, for shorter hours, for more power, a struggle which slows down the whole machinery of production, increases its cost, and reduces its output.

And finally he has become aware that this struggle for material betterment includes also an attempt to seize vast power over the economic organization. He sees radicalism expressed not only in excessive economic demands, but also in revolutionary projects for the overthrow of our system of industry, government and society.

No wonder the farmer is beginning to take notice, to assert his interest, and to let it be known that he intends to defend it and the institutions in which he continues to believe—in individual liberty, in private property, in progress through education, persuasion, and evolution, in the rule of the majority, and intelligent acceptance of majority decision, in the ballot, in representative government, in the supremacy of law.

The soundest element in labor, we believe, stands with the farmer and all other citizens on this ground, though at times that element may be overshadowed or swept away by radical influences. But there is nothing truer in the America of today than the declaration of the Farmers' National congress made at its convention at Hagerstown, Md., last week that "the conservatism of the farmer is a bulwark of national defense against dangerous foreign influences at work today."

At the recent conference called by the president to consider the relations of capital and labor, the farmer was given a ridiculously inadequate representation. This should be a hint that the influence of agriculture cannot be what it should be without a more effective organization and a broader coöperation. Agriculture is the foundation, the final, decisive power in our country, but it is not concentrated as mechanical labor and other forces are. It can exert its full force only in extreme or final issues, but it should be able also to exercise its moderating pressure to avoid final issues. We ought not to have to wait and we need not wait for the outbreak of revolution to bring the farmer into the arena. He should organize broadly to make his influence felt progressively in national affairs and to provide a timely check upon the forces attacking him and the institutions in which he believes.

HOW TO SETTLE THE COAL STRIKE.

1. Let the miners and operators agree to negotiate. This agreement can be official, or unofficial, private or open, according as it will save the greatest number of faces.

2. When this agreement is effected let the government in turn agree to suspend or postpone legal proceedings.

3. Let the miners return to work, pending completion of negotiations, on the understanding that any wage agreed on is to be retroactive.

4. In case negotiations fail, arbitration is to be resorted to and its award is to bind both parties.

5. Result: Much cheaper coal than if the strike hangs on.

LAW AND CUSTOM.

We have assumed that it had been definitely and almost unchangeably determined what the country's condition with regard to alcohol shall be in and after Jan. 16 next year; that it will be dry, dry as a bone except for the private stock remaining extant, and such bootlegging and moonshining as manages to evade the internal revenuers.

This being the case the wet and dry elections seem a bit bewildering, but there are states which adopted the constitutional amendment subject to referendum and there are states with state dry laws which unless they are repealed will deprive such commonwealths of the full benefit of the days of grace, if any, intervening between the president's proclamation declaring war prohibition off and the beginning of prohibition under the constitutional amendment. Hope springs eternal.

Therefore there remains a kick or two in an issue which is otherwise about as dead as a door nail. In the elections of this week there were indications of a reversal of opinion on constitutional prohibition. It is not a revolt, but the Ohio, New Jersey, and Kentucky elections at least revealed the stirring of a doubt whether the wisest action was presented in the constitutional amendment.

As a rule cities of considerable size are wet. The country is dry. New York would be the wettest place in the United States if it had drinking privileges. Chicago would be next. Something in the complexity of social and industrial life in a city makes a place for alcohol which it does not find in the country.

A farmer after a day in the fields cannot be imagined craving a night in the restaurants. He does not crave a stimulant or an anodyne after a day's work. The city man frequently does. He wants lights, music and flowers, and some drinks. The farmer wants his supper and his bed.

Alcohol being outside the craving of the people in the country and outside the habits of people in small towns, they vote dry whenever they get a chance and the city which wants to stay wet finds itself forced to go dry. It is an imposition of one set of customs upon another.

The present elections and the present discussions may be hopelessly ex post facto, but they serve to question the wisdom of national prohibition in its present form. We have contended from the beginning that laws dealing with habits ought to be mutable and local. Such factors in the question of alcohol as demand public scrutiny and regulation are factors to be considered with regard to exigency and prevailing opinion.

Prescott in his history of Charles V. relates that after the terrible religious wars of intolerance the discovery was made, with much astonishment, that people could live in peace even if they did have different ideas of worship, different beliefs and different habits. They had thought in a matter of the supreme importance of immortality a man had no right to jeopardize everything that possibly could be of importance to a soul and to jeopardize other souls which without his influence might be saved. That was an issue which involved personal decision in the most momentous question of life. Force tried to produce uniformity and failed.

Prohibitionists maintain that the community right to extirpate alcohol is undeniable. It has a criminal status. It pervades a community to the community's hurt. It is as vicious as a vicious drug. The drug is outlaw. The alcohol should be. It is the community duty to protect weakness against its own disorders. It does so by prohibiting alcohol.

Liberals contend that the use of alcohol falls within the range of personal decision and selection. Its excesses are as damaging as pictured, but the habits of the weak and vicious should not be the standard by which the customs of the moderate and temperate should be ruled. If so we have established a rule of the weak. The drunkard controls social custom and habit and denies personal liberty.

Statutes are not satisfactory substitutes for character. The decisions of a legislative body are not satisfactory decisions for a great mass of people capable of self-decision. The theory that the state is a child is not as satisfactory as the theory that the state is a man.

There may be a revolt later against what we believe is an unwise method of regulation of habit. Such methods do not arise out of the fixed and continuing opinions of people. When opinion changes, if it does, it will find itself with the dead hand of the present day upon it.

SOME MEN WOULD LIKE TO QUIT THEIR BUSINESS.

[New York Sun.]

Mr. Edward Bok, who recenty retired from a profession in which he was remarkably successful in order to do civic work, expresses his belief that all men who have won in the business battle should quit early enough "to enjoy life and become a civic asset to the community."

But how is a man of 50 or 60 to know nowadays when he has enough to retire on? We saw recently some Sunday newspaper photographs of an American past middle age who laid down his job five years ago "with enough to live on." The pictures showed him in the primitive mountain home to which he fled when he found that, what with increased taxes and prices, he didn't have a competency by half!

NOVEMBER NIGHTFALL.

The mothering hills spread wide their arms
  To draw the veils of twilight up.
The valleys lift their eager hands
  To catch the darkness in a cup.

The tremulous water of the bay
  Holds out a silken apron spread
Of mystic warp, to catch the ray
  Of the young moon soon overhead.

Grey shapes along the glimmering east,
  Naushon and Cuttyhunk lie low,
And toward Segonnet way the geese
  A V-shaped vision southward go.

While far, oh far beyond the gleam
  Where Half-mile Rock rolls shoals of foam,
Belated triangles of white,
  The fishing-fleet comes hurrying home.

One fellow who ought to know enough to keep quiet on the war question and let things die down rushes into print and says that the Northern has only 250 subscribers. The brayings of an ass or an ingrate citizen is music to but few people, and it might be well to pass the matter for the time being. There is a lot of history the Northern could publish if it were half as mean as some fellows. And we may be forced to do it.

THE AMERICAN LANDSCAPE.

I do not like the colored signs
  In every vacant lot.
They mar the landscape far and wide;
  I wish that they were not!

In city or town the country round,
  In sunlight and in shade,
Are the scouring twins, the cook who grins,
  And the pancakes Auntie made.

The salad oil time cannot spoil,
  And fountain pens by scores;
Prime canned fish for all who wish,
  Polish for waxing floors.

Then gum and jam, and ham what am,
  With pickles crisp and green;
The biscuits round, the cornmeal ground,
  And Boston's famous bean.

Pure family soap and cigarette dope,
  Varnish that lasts for years;
Home-made bread, chickens milk-fed—
  It drives one quite to tears.

I do not like the colored signs,
  They don't appeal to me;
America has scenery
  I'd really like to see! G. D. C.

TRAINING UNUSUAL CHILDREN.

ONE four-hundredth of the entire population of this country are being cared for in hospitals for the insane and other institutions for the mentally deficient.

In addition, a very large number are mentally peculiar to a degree that makes it difficult for them to make a living. Many of them are wholly supported by their families and many more partially so. The cost of so large a group is very heavy.

To make matters worse, insanity is hereditary in a certain sense. Mental instability is inheritable. Out of mental instability insanity may develop. It is in this sense, and only in this sense, that insanity is inheritable.

A strong society on mental hygiene has been founded on the idea that persons, and especially children, with mental instability can become good citizens provided they are properly trained.

If, on the other hand, people undertake to punish them one way or the other for their mental peculiarities and their asocial tendency, they develop into insane persons or peculiar people, unable to fit anywhere into the general scheme of things. Especially is it true that children with unstable minds can be made into good or bad citizens, depending on the way they are handled. There are persons to whose opinion a good deal of weight attaches who hold that the kind of insanity a child will develop when it grows up can be predicted on the basis of its mental peculiarities as a child.

The insanities due to syphilis, alcohol, and other poisons must be ruled out. Likewise the senile dementias. But they claim that it can be predicted in childhood that this child will become a paranoiac, that one a dementia precox subject, and a third one an epileptic.

On the other hand, many just as good authorities say it is not possible to go so far as that, but it is easily possible to say a certain child is of a neurotic constitution and if it is improperly trained it will grow up insane or at least peculiar, and unable to fit in anywhere. When these nervous children are encountered, a mistake may be made in either of two directions. On the one hand, the condition may be belittled by such comments as these—"Spasms in teething babies are not serious," "Many children do not walk until they are 3 or 4 years old," "Don't worry, he is just a little nervous," "O, she'll outgrow it in a year or two."

On the other hand, many persons do great harm by advising that the inherited character of a child cannot be changed by training, that the shut-in child never can be anything but a shut-in.

The truth lies between these positions. On the one hand, evidences of a neurotic constitution in children never are to be disregarded, and on the other, practically no child with a neurotic constitution is inevitably bound for the insane hospital.

If the peculiar danger in which such children are is early recognized and frankly confronted, and special training instituted for them, the great majority can be saved to lives of usefulness and some to mental heights bordering on genius.

It is either Guthrie or Adler, which one I have forgotten, who describes two mental types. One, the calm, poised type that goes through babyhood easily, takes food without indigestion, sleeps well, is not disturbed by strangers, cuts its teeth without fretting, either misses measles, whooping cough, or scarlet fever or has them mildly, grows up into a well poised, sane, substantial head of a family. The other has trouble with its digestion as a baby, is fretful, is a poor sleeper, is upset by company, is made sick by the teeth coming through, has convulsions at the onset of contagion, grows up a restless, nervous child, and as an adult is either a genius or has great powers of vision, or is very unhappy or insane, or all of those things combined.

Among the circumstances and traits of character which form a basis for a tentative diagnosis of neurotic constitution are the following:

Undue amount of digestive disturbance in infancy, almost an incapacity for digesting the proper food for the age, a hair trigger digestion, fretfulness, extreme sensitiveness to light and sound, convulsions without provocation or repeated convulsions on slight provocation, premature or delayed closing of the soft spot in the head, premature or late teething, precocity or delay in the development of muscle control, early walking or late walking, beginning to talk too early or too late, undue sensitiveness of the skin and mucous membranes, thumb sucking, head rocking, fitful appetite, aversion to certain articles of food which ordinary children like, night terrors, nightmares, muscular twitchings, tics, lisping, stammering, and other speech defects, bed wetting, tremors of fingers when they are extended, negativism, shut-in-ism, phobias, extreme imagination, pathologic lying, fatigibility, hyperemotionalism, extreme timidity and undue aggressiveness, acidodid with cyclic vomiting, under weight, with long bones and sagging of the stomach. This list is given by Dr. E. B. McCready, who is recognized as an authority.

These signs are not equally important. Some of them mean that the child departs somewhat from the normal, others indicate that it is far from being properly developed mentally and socially. Some of them call for training but little out of the ordinary.

With others salvation depends on the greatest wisdom. McCready says axiomatically that some children are born nervous [hereditary causes], some acquire nervousness [disease, habits], and others have nervousness thrust upon them [faulty training at home and at school].

If a child is slightly unstable mentally it may not make an average playmate. Therefore other children are disposed to avoid him in the playground. As this keeps up he becomes more and more asocial. Or in school he is very timid. The teacher being busy, overlooks him or, what is worse, mistakes his confusion for lack of industry and punishes him, increasing his self-consciousness and timidity, or in the home parents do not recognize the meaning of undue aggressiveness, accepting it as a virtue and rewarding it.

The first necessity is to recognize the danger signals. The next is to get a mental and behavioristic diagnosis. The third to institute treatment based on the diagnosis. To go way back to the beginning, note should be taken of the mental and social characteristics of the parents. If one or both parents is neurotic or unstable mentally it is well to be on the lookout for evidence of the same characteristic in some of the children at least.

In all cases of instrumental delivery the possibility of injury to the brain is to be borne in mind. If there are convulsions the physician should examine the back of the eyes and the pressure of the fluid in the cerebro-spinal canal. Then along through infancy and childhood the signs of mental instability are to be noted and appraised as signs calling for special training rather than as reasons for hopeless despair.

The essential of training is to make the child as much like other children as possible. The aim should be to put him on the dead level of other children just so far as is possible. Never mind about his exceptional qualities, never mind about the argument that the world is put forward by the exceptional people. If he has it in him, if he is that type, that development will come later. What you want out of him in childhood is just boy, just commonplace, common sense, above all, the ability to mix with other boys as just an ordinary, game, playing boy. All of which is equally true or even more so for children of the opposite sex who inherit or acquire the neurotic constitution.

Perhaps Sequin knew better the task of training children than any other man who ever lived. He took children of low mentality and laid a foundation for mental training by training their hands to do things. He knew how to train asocial children into sociability. Four of his general rules for child training are these:

1. Do not teach anything indoors which can be learned out of doors.
2. Teach nothing from books which can be learned from nature.
3. Teach nothing from dead nature which can be observed on the living.
4. Nature is to be the school room and the school book, unless insuperable difficulties prevent.

In the handling of children who are peculiar behavioristically it will not infrequently be necessary or certainly advantageous to take the child away from its home. To begin with, there is a fair chance that one or both parents are neurotics. More intelligent, social care may be required than it is within the mental and social power of the parent to give.

Many of these children are "the only child." It is difficult for an old child to make its social adjustment. The horrors depicted in Daddy Long Legs may be very real, but there is a good deal of recompense in the contacts of an orphan asylum.

Such institutions have evolved some very fine characters. In these days when we hear so much of lawlessness on the part of the young, I think the asylum raised children are making a record that compared very favorably with that of those raised by their parents in private homes.

ADVISES AGAINST SEDATIVES.

T. R. writes: "I am a very strong girl of 20 years, but very nervous. I have not been able to sleep for the last three nights and I am using a teaspoon of brome, and also have taken some pills. I feel very weak at present. I sometimes feel very warm, then have pain near my heart."

REPLY.

Overcoming nervousness is a matter of mental training. You must not take brome or sleeping pills or any other sedative.

YOU, TOO, CLARENCE.

Chicago, Nov. 3.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—It is inconceivable that such a Pekinese pup as Clarence Stuyvesant could exist among red blooded men who dared to fight and die for a principle, for their country, yes, even for a woman's kiss. He sounds like one of those "holier than thou" fanatics, the kind of which constituted the conscientious objector class when the clarion call of duty sounded. Personally I would not trust him with a baby's rattle, and if this is a sample of what these scatterbrained, damn Prohibitionists are made of, may the Lord deliver us from them. W. J. B.

IRONIC CLARENCE.

Bloomington, Ill., Nov. 4.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I was exceedingly interested in the letter of Clarence Stuyvesant Bradford. He says he has never touched liquor; that is indeed a great credit to him. Please, Clarence, and there are hundreds like you, do not condemn dancing, women, kisses, and hotel lobbies until you open your eyes and see things in a broader light. I would like to read the opinions of others on these subjects, for when I meet the man I intend to marry I am going to kiss him and give him my undivided love. If I am wrong in my opinions I would gladly change, for I, like Clarence, want to continue "broad and pure." Sincerely, PEG.

LIPS AND LIKKER.

Chicago, Nov. 3.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I note with interest, and may I say indignation, Mr. C. S. Bradford's article concerning the fact that liquor AND women's lips had never touched HIS lips. By what special privilege does he classify so easily the lips of women with the "Drinks of the Devil?" Most likely he is pretty glad to be alive and most likely getting a good time out of life as he goes along, but maybe he does not realize that if it had not been for one of those women he might not be in his jolly old world of ours. Yes, I hope he does continue being broad and pure and so long as he knows that a woman's silkclad ankle will be apt to lead him out of the "straight and narrow" let him continue to steer clear of all the hotel lobbies and ballrooms. AMERICAN LEGION.

Headquarters rooms 336 and 337, 29 South La Salle street, Chicago.

Today begins the last week of the membership drive of the American Legion, which closes Nov. 11. Since the drive opened the number of legion posts in the state of Illinois has increased to 334, and over a third of this number are in Chicago.

This is the greatest organization which has developed from the late war, as only ex-service men are eligible, that is, provided their discharge is honorable. No distinction is made in rank or rating. It is entirely a civilian organization.

The above application, filled out, may be mailed to the American Legion headquarters and the applicant's name will be registered on the roll. A check or money order for $2, to cover the yearly dues, may accompany it. Write to the Friend of the Soldier, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, for booklets about the American Legion. Send a stamped, addressed envelope with request.

CAMP MERRITT.

Chicago, Nov. 4.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—Where is Camp Merritt located? Is this to be one of the permanent army camps? W. I. F.

Camp Merritt is in New Jersey, about fourteen miles from New York City. It is located near Dumon.

Bulletin 629 from the adjutant general's office makes the following statement:

"Further use of Camp Merritt, with the exception of the base hospital thereat, is to be discontinued. C. G., port of embarkation, Hoboken, directed to demobilize all organizations, except those belonging to the regular army, and to discharge all emergency men eligible for discharge. All personnel, equipment, records, and the fund of the permanent bakers and cooks' school, which has been temporarily located here, to be transferred to Camp Dix, N. J. As soon as practicable send direct to Camp Dix, N. J. for disposition, all troops returning from overseas which ordinarily would be sent to Camp Merritt. 11-1."

PREMIUM RATE BASIS.

Chicago, Nov. 5.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—Am about to convert my war risk insurance to one of the policies offered by the government. When I do so will I pay at the rate demanded for my age now or the age at which I first took out my insurance? Can policies be transferred? That is, could I carry $5,000 of this insurance and let my sister carry the other $5,000 in her name? K. J.

The premium rate is based on the nearest attained age of the insured at the time of the conversion of his policy.

The insurance cannot be transferred as you mention. If you cannot carry the full ten thousand, you will have to reduce the amount and carry the new policy yourself.

ANSWERS.

MORE CANS.

Chicago, Nov. 6.—[To the Friend of the People.]—I am writing to find out if something can be done to clean up the alley just west of Wentworth avenue in the block running from Sixty-first place to Sixty-second street.

The people living on Wentworth avenue persist in dumping all kinds of rubbish and refuse in the alley. They also dump garbage in piles and throw loose newspapers around so that they blow all over.

My residence is on Sixty-first place at this alley and I am forced to keep my windows down at all times to keep dirt and rubbish from blowing in and to avoid the stench from the garbage, which at times is unbearable. A. E. H.

The alley complained of has been cleaned and the tenants have been warned against dumping therein. Householders have been notified to procure more cans where same are necessary.

SPOILS THE VIEW.

Chicago, Nov. 7.—[To the Friend of the People.]—I live on South Sangamon street. On the adjoining lot north stands a vacant, dilapidated two and half story building formerly used as a church by the West Auburn Baptist church, but abandoned for some reason. The building now is in such a terrible condition that its appearance, not only ruins the view of that part of the street, but it's a real menace to the property immediately south of it and all others on the block, by reason of the fact that boys have turned the old ramshackle building into a playhouse and rendezvous, and, of course, they smoke and throw matches and cigarets around. This building should either be put in repair, if that is possible, or torn down, thus removing a constant menace and eyesore. C. F. D.

This department has had an inspection made of the old vacant building in question located at 7804 South Sangamon street and has sent the owner a notice to put building in proper condition at once.

CANNOT RAISE RENT.

Chicago, Nov. 4.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—My tenant had a lease for two years from May 1, 1915, expired 1917, did not renew it again. I notified him in March of a raise of $1 for the purpose of breaking the old lease, which he paid the 1st of May.

1. Does that not break the lease when he paid the increase of rent?
2. Is he now a month to month tenant?
3. Can I raise his rent at any time?
W. D.

1. No.
2. No.
3. No.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

NOT LIABLE.

Chicago, Nov. 4.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Rented party floor for a number of years. These parties paid two months' rent, but refuse to sign lease. Are they liable for the rent for entire time of lease? A. McC.

No. The lease being verbal only is void as it could not be performed within a year. The tenancy is from month to month in such a case.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

HONEST, DISHONEST.

Freeport, Ill., Nov. 10.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Some years ago a good honest German and his wife borrowed $100 from me. He paid the interest promptly, then his wife died, and when he was expected to pay his debts he skipped out in the night and forgot about them. He is married again, I understand, to a woman of some means, and lives on the southwest side of Chicago. I got a judgment against him two years ago and I would like to find out how I could locate him and also the address of some reliable agency in Chicago where I might collect it. I am a poor woman and cannot afford to lose this money, and this man can pay it, but he is a dishonest man. N. S.

You had better see some attorney in your city about the matter. If the man is working for wages you would have a pretty good chance to get your money.

AUTOCRACY'S LAST STAND

By Joseph Danziger

THE November wind howled across the wide open spaces of Gendarmen market. The tall pedestal supporting the statue of Schiller, the poet of democracy, threw a menacing black splash down the white cascade of marble steps leading to the Royal theater of Berlin. A stinging sleet drove into the faces of pedestrians. They leaned their bodies, wasted by four years of food blockade, against the buffeting gale. Two men greeted each other out of the storm. They retreated to the lea of the structure that had once housed E. T. A. Hoffmann of the "Tales" and barcarole which Offenbach has immortalized.

One of the men was tall and weather tanned. His face was twisted into a sardonic lear by a strip of adhesive plaster fixed there for no other purpose. He was Max Haffner, boatswain in the imperial navy, and for excellent reasons the secret police would gladly have laid hands on him. On this night he was dressed in a soldier's uniform to add to his disguise.

"Any developments, Comrade Ledebour?" he asked of his companion, a slender, ascetic looking man, with pale face and firmly compressed lips.

"The gates of the kaiser's palace have remained closed on our side," replied Ledebour, Socialist member of parliament and leader of the radical opponents of the war.

"Can this be treason?" demanded Haffner hotly. "Can he have been playing with us?"

"Not he, Comrade Haffner," replied Ledebour with an energetic gesture. "He is true blue. French blood—like myself. He is to be trusted—even if he is a nobleman."

"Why, then, does he not return? We have kept every gate under constant surveillance."

"It may be that he has been restrained by force. If he does not show himself by tomorrow you will have to go back to Kiel and start the action. If the kaiser does not abdicate we will drive him from the throne with the bayonets he has taught our boys so well how to use."

The two separated after agreeing to continue their vigil until 9 o'clock. Late that afternoon they had watched Baron d'Huitre disappear behind the gates of the kaiser's palace. The baron was, or at least had been until recently, persona grata at the court of the all highest. He was a member of a French-German family who had settled in Prussia after the revocation of the Edict of Nantes. Though a nobleman of an exclusive and aristocratic family, he, like Lafayette, favored the cause of the people in their struggle for liberty. He had agreed to act as emissary for the revolutionists and had gone to the palace to demand the immediate abdication of the kaiser in the name of the German people.

That D'Huitre did not appear again that night was not his fault. More than a week later, after the kaiser's inglorious flight to Holland, he was discovered locked in a seldom used room of the palace. He was half famished when the storming populace found him, for he had received no food after the hurried departure of the court. But as Ledebour had said of him, he kept the faith, and in his brief-case was the demanded abdication, signed by Wilhelm's own hand. The story of his detention reads like a chapter from medieval romance, but space forbids its inclusion here.

ON THE evening after the fall of the Bastile, King Louis exclaimed on hearing the news: "Why, this is revolt!" "No, sire," replied the Duke de Liancourt, "it is revolution."

Had Wilhelm von Hohenzollern tolerated men of equally independent minds about his person, he might have received a similar warning when on May day, 1917, Liebknecht led a band of several thousand workmen to Potsdamer platz in Berlin and was arrested while trying to address them.

The German revolution was so like its French predecessor in its stages of development that one could anticipate its progress in the light of history. The French revolution began with the calling of the states general. The German revolution began when the kaiser issued his famous Easter message, in 1917, proclaiming that he intended to reward his faithful Prussians by a reform of the ballot law. Under that law a single wealthy citizen or powerful nobleman had a vote which weighed as much as those of all of the workingmen in his district. When Wilhelm issued the proclamation calling for a reform of this unjust system he must have done so with his tongue in his cheek, knowing that such a progressive measure would never be ratified by the Prussian diet, which was the chief beneficiary of the existing laws.

What Wilhelm did not count on, what no tyrant ever regards as important, was the irresistible force of an idea. The idea that the people rule was going to make a place for itself even though in doing so it had to sweep a dozen or two kings into the discard. As the refusal of the French noblesse to act with the third estate in the states-general led to the formation of the national assembly and drove many noblemen and all of the middle class over to the popular side of the struggle, so the action of the Prussian diet in refusing to sanction any real reform of the ballot laws made radicals out of democratic officials, capitalists, and even some noblemen. Men like D'Huitre, Baron von Eckardstein, and Capt. von Behrfeld worked for the overthrow of despotism, side by side with Socialists like Ledebour, Haffner, and Liebknecht.

During the interregnum of the people's commissariat it was Haffner himself, then commandant of the royal palace, who told me of the secret propaganda, which had disseminated from the committee of ten as early as the autumn of 1915. This committee was composed of some of the stanchest opponents of the war and the monarchy, and they were feared and hated by all the votaries of kaiserism. They were hounded by the secret police, who never could quite catch up with them. They were driven from pillar to post, from a headquarters in the cellar of a junk shop to one in the back room of a milliner's atalier, and finally to a swell flat in Kurfeurstendam, where, surrounded by movie queens, cabaret divas, and munition millionaires, the police did not think of looking for them.

Meanwhile they spread their influence and organized subcommittees in every industrial center and every division of the army. Bit by bit they won their way, helped not a little by American leaflets flung into German trenches, and helped much more by the sturdy American example of how a democracy girds itself for the conflict and stamps armed hosts out of the ground, without the aid of militarism or an officers' caste. The committee received its greatest setback in the autumn of 1917, when their plans for an early revolution were thwarted by the betrayal and execution of some of the leading members who were stationed with the navy at Kiel.

ON NOV. 5 the insurgents took possession of the port and the fleet at Kiel and from that day Berlin was isolated from all communication with the world either by rail, radio, or wire. Only the air remained free of militarist domination, and on the morning of the 8th a deputation of sailors from Kiel flew to Berlin to organize a soldiers' and workers' council in the capital.

The Socialist members of the cabinet had threatened to resign unless the kaiser's abdication were forthcoming that day, but the night came on and there was neither a resignation of the one side nor the abdication of the other. The air was full of electric tension. Something must happen soon. Every man felt that the country could not exist half despotic and half democratic. The downtown streets swarmed with policemen, looking very ill at ease and much weighed down with automatics and cartridge belts. Motor trucks patroled the streets, loaded with soldiers of a regiment strange to Berlin. From under the tarpaulin covers peeped the muzzles of rifles, while the outlines of a machine gun could be traced behind the driver's seat. It was the last bluff of militarism in its effort to overawe the populace. The fashionable shops had let down their steel shutters or had barricaded their windows with heavy oaken planking. It was a stage of anxious waiting before the final cast of the dice.

Never before was a metropolitan editor called upon to struggle with so many "big stories" as fell to the lot of the morning papers next day—and only four small pages to devote to them!

The republic declared in Munich!

The king of Bavaria abdicated!

Cologne, Frankfurt, Magdeburg, and other lesser cities had joined the seaboard cities in the hands of soldiers and workers' councils.

Twenty thrones and thronlets in Germany were quaking on their foundations. Even the Grand Duke of Mecklenburg, the most autocratic monarch left in the world, had decided to bestow a constitution on his people. The monarchical idea seemed to have vanished from Germany overnight!

Nevertheless, it did not seem possible that Berlin, the seat of the vast power of the whole despotic system, would surrender without a struggle. I thought of the machine guns under the tarpaulins of the night before as I hastened out to Chausee strasse, where many garrisons were located. Would the guard remain loyal to the kaiser, like the Swiss guard did in the French revolution? My wheezing taxi caught up with a procession of several thousand workmen from the northern part of town, and I dismounted to see what they would do. At their head marched a pair of brawny machinists with a banner bearing the inscription:

"BROTHERS! DON'T SHOOT!"

They turned in at the gate of the Kaiser Franz Grenadier guards. After a short parley the sentinel admitted a deputation of several hundred onto the parade ground. A platoon of recruits were drawn up before a youngish looking officer. He called to the marchers to stop, but they came on regardless.

"Make ready!" commanded the captain. For the first time is history a detachment of the Prussian guard refused to obey orders. Here and there—so strong is the habit of discipline—some young fellow would lift a rifle from the ground only to let the butt drop crashing to the pavement.

"Long live the republic!" shouted an old man with flowing white hair and beard as he advanced ahead of the others. The officer heard the word and grew pale with rage. Glancing helplessly at his mutinous men he whipped out a revolver and fired pointblank into the crowd. He must have been quite out of his head that the first shot went so wild. A second one struck a 14 year old boy in the shoulder, but before the reverberations of the shot had ceased a rifle cracked somewhere, either in the crowd or from the windows of the garrison, and the officer crumpled up like a scarecrow, gave a gasping sigh, and was dead. The crowd surged forward, ignoring the corpse on the pavement with the red smear staining the gray cloth at the shoulder. Workmen and soldiers swarmed into the building shouting and cheering. The crowd surged in from the streets, and soon an improvised red flag, made from the red stripe of a national standard, was floating above the garrison walls.

Similar scenes were enacted at the other guard regiments, which without a single exception went over to the people and made no fight. The first symbol of the new era was a big gray motor truck loaded with soldiers, a red flag planted in front, and the imperial eagles blotted out with red paint. Officers were stopped on the streets, their sidearms taken from them, and the cockades stripped from their caps. The crowds seemed determined, but good natured. There was some fighting about the royal stables owing to officers concealed in the building, firing upon civilian passersby. I saw the end of this scrimmage, when the officers were driven from their places of concealment under window ledges by long distance machine gun fire. Possibly a score of lives were lost that day, but not more.

In the late afternoon a procession had formed somewhere and wheeled into Wilhelmstrasse, past the chancellor's palace and the foreign office. It was composed of all sorts and conditions of men. Some in workmen's blouse, others in top hats. A most remarkable demonstration of the abolition of class distinctions in caste-ridden Prussia. The procession seemed endless, but there was no cheeirng and little elation. All seemed solemnly earnest, as though while greeting the new era they were bidding farewell to the old. This conflict of emotions, so strongly marked in the inaugural parade of the German republic, is what distinguishes the menace to the new era. If the people persist in looking back upon the theatrical glories of the old régime and do not keep their faces steadily toward the coming dawn the existence of the democratic government may be a brief one.

I WAS filled with these thoughts as I returned to my home that night after an evening spent on the streets amid joyriding soldiers, cheering men and women, and a general air very much like a presidential election night in Chicago. The people were steady and well behaved. The police had abandoned their beats and put on civilian clothes. The nation was actually without any government at all for the next twenty-four hours until the soldiers' and workers' delegates had chosen the commissaires of the people and the executive council.

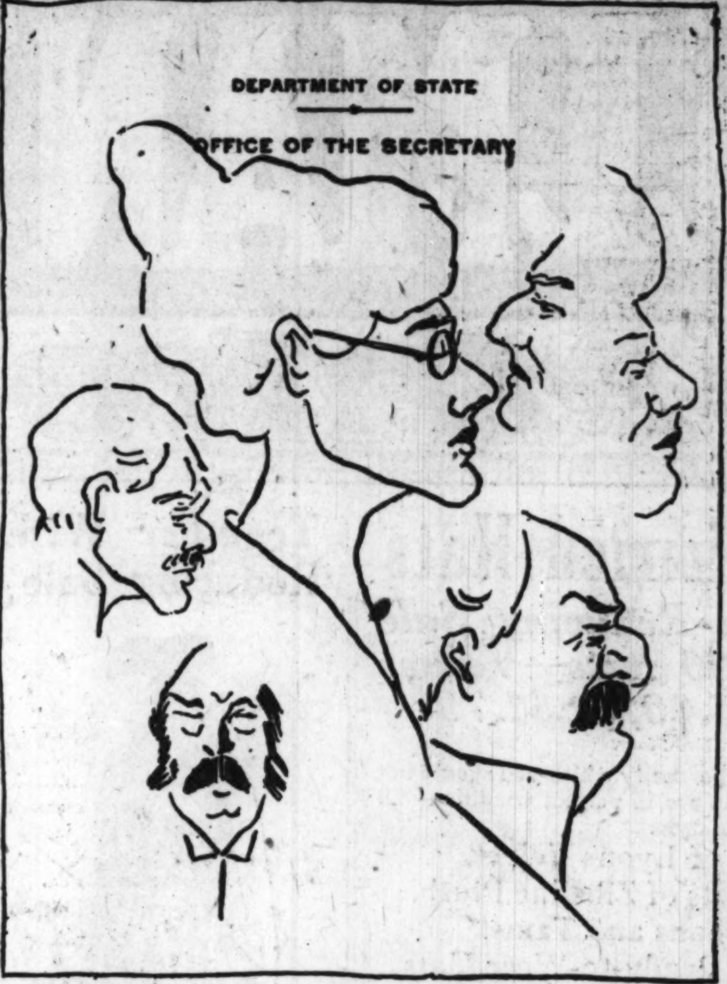
Notwithstanding, although there was absolutely no restraining influence except the exhortations of speakers, the people retired at an unusually early hour; there was no display of an unruly spirit, and the only real rioting was indulged in by Liebknecht and a handful of his followers, who seized the plant of one of the biggest dailies, turned out the editorial staff, and started a communist paper which they called the Red Banner. A few days later they were compelled to restore the plant to its owners, and it was because of this and his disappointment at not having been chosen a commissaire that Liebknecht gathered the worst elements of the metropolis about him and went on a rampage of looting and rioting which only terminated with his death.

Again and again I have been asked if there is any chance of the kaiser coming back and resuming the throne. The reply to that question was given me last December by a one time loyal old junker, who was outspokenly opposed to a republic, but prepared to submit to the inevitable. He reflected the opinion of men of his caste, when he answered me as to the nation ever receiving Wilhelm again as their monarch, by saying:

"An emperor does not run away."

A child who has no taste for reading, who is utterly incapable of losing himself in a printed page, quite unable to forget his childish griefs,

LANSING AS AN ARTIST



Secretary of State Robert Lansing invariably draws pictures and caricatures on his memo pad while he is talkng over the telephone. His mind at work on state problems or intent upon telephone messages, his hand moves almost automatically, but cleverly, in sketching figures like the above, whiah were taken from Mr. Lansing's note pad by Arthur Sears Henning, "Tribune" correspondent in Washington. Whether these drawings represent persons to whom Mr. Lansing was talking as he drew them, or are merely imagined, Mr. Henning doesn't know.

THIS is to be Children's Book week all over our broad and beaming land. Do you realize what that means? It means that every library in the United States will make a special attempt to interest children in books and to interest grown-ups in the choice of proper books for children. It means that every seller of books will have a special display of children's books. But most of all it means that children's books will acquire the dignity to which they are entitled, children's reading will be considered worthy to associate conversationally with the high cost of living and the new Velasquez silhouette. When I was a little girl my passion for books as Christmas gifts instead of dolls and fur sets and Diablo and Nellie Bly made me a marked person. When we compared our Christmas gifts the day we went back to school after our Christmas holidays (were there ever days like them?) I always went home with a hodge-podge of sentiment. I knew that I was happier over one book of my very own than I would ever have been as the possessor of the gorgeous frivolities which adorned Beatrice and Helen, my two bosomest friends.

And yet, no one else seemed to feel as I did about books. Most of the children in our school didn't have books among their Christmas things, or, at best, only one cheap one. And we were just an ordinary, normal, happy group of school children. The old joke about not getting Johnny a book for Christmas because he has one was a truth spoken in jest. And that wasn't a half century ago, either! Now the normal child reads as much as his relative grown-ups (more than many of them). He reads books as well written as theirs and often much more beautifully illustrated. And as he grows, his literary development is watched over with the same care that is given his tonsils. Perhaps it is because children own books now that literature is more of a living thing to them than it was when I was a child. We used to read of Abraham Lincoln's year of work to pay for the book which he had borrowed and which had been ruined by the snow drifting in through the cracks, and I fear our respect for the ambition of our martyred president was overshadowed by our terror lest we, too, might unintentionally suffer a book to be damaged and have to spend eons working out our indebtedness. But now, when every child can own a tiny library, when the public library has a room especially for children, when schools have borrowing libraries, and, finally, when a national Children's Book week is set aside, children's reading may be said to be looking up.

The public library is making this a children's week at the main branch. This month's bulletin has lists of recommended reading for children and for parents about children's reading. On the third floor there is a display of books recommended to parents and teachers dealing with the various phases of children's reading. On the fourth floor there will be a display of children's books, especially the newest ones. And each afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Thomas Hughes room there will be an open conference on children's reading led by a member of the library staff. On Monday the subject will be "Fairy Tales"; on Tuesday, "Before the Reading Age"; on Wednesday, "The Young Book Lover"; on Thursday, "Recreational Reading in the High School Age"; on Friday, "Reading Aloud in the Schools," and on Saturday, "The Family Reading Table." Two famous children's writers will be in Chicago this week, Thornton Burgess of the Bedtime Stories fame, and John Martin, the belovedest of all the beloveds.

Children's Book week reminds me of a composition which was written by a child in Springfield on the theme of Baby Year last year. It began, "Every one in Illinois should have a baby and save a baby this year." Why wouldn't a good slogan be, "Everybody in Illinois should buy a book for his own children or for somebody else's children this week."

Abbe Ernest Dimnet, whose "France Herself Again" [Chatto & Windus, London] is a book with a circle of friends in America as well as abroad, whose work in the Atlantic Monthly has augmented that circle, and whose presence in the United States as Lowell lecturer at Harvard and other universities has made it a large one indeed, will be in Chicago next Saturday to speak on "American Social Service Methods in France," under the auspices of the board of managers of the Eli Bates house. He will lecture at the residence of Mrs. George S. Isham, 1340 North State street. Any one interested in his lecture is invited to attend.

"Green Timber Trails" [Century] is by none other than our own fellow Chicagoan, William Gerard Chapman. It is just as felicitous as its title, and Charles Livingston Bull has made illustrations for it which make complete a charming volume.

Most American authors are business men. They keep office hours and turn out a definite amount of work each day, and market their wares with a keen eye to profits. There is Octavus Roy Cohen, author of "Polished Ebony" [Dodd Mead], for instance. Six years ago he published his first story in the Blue Book. Last year he published 119 stories. "The Crimson Alibi" is a successful Broadway play now, and Mr. Cohen is taking a three months' leave of absence from literature to write scenarios in Los Angeles for a sum which staggers the imagination. A capitalist in five years. Has any regular business man a more gold plated record?

WHAT SHALL CHILDREN READ?

By Kate Douglas Wiggin

WHEN I was a little girl (O, six most charming words!)—it is not necessary to name the year, but it was so long ago that children were still reminded that they should be seen and not heard, and also that they could eat what was set before them or go without (two maxims that suggest a hoary antiquity of time not easily measured by the senses)—when I was a little girl I had the great good fortune to live in a country village. I believe I always had a taste for books, but I will pass over that early period when I manifested it by carrying them to my mouth and endeavored to assimilate their contents by the cramming process, and also that later stage, which heralded the dawn of the critical faculty, perhaps, when I tore them in bits and held up the tattered fragments with shouts of derisive laughter. Unlike the critic, no more were given me to mar, but, like the critic, I had marred a good many ere my vandal hand was stayed.

As soon as I could read I had free access to an excellent medical library, the gloom of which was brightened by a few shelves of theological works bequeathed to the family by some orthodox ancestor, and tempered by a volume or two of Blackstone, but outside of these, which were emphatically not the stuff my dreams were made of, I can only remember a certain little walnut bookcase hanging on the wall of the family sitting room.

I can see them yet, those rows of shabby and incongruous volumes, the contents of which were transferred to our hungry little brains. Some of them are close at hand now, and I love their ragged corners, their dog's eared pages that show the pressure of childish thumbs, and their dear old backs, broken in my service.

IN one corner—spare me your smiles—was a fat autobiography of P. T. Barnum, given me by a grateful farmer for saving the life of a valuable Jersey calf just as she was on the point of strangling herself. This book so inflamed a naturally ardent imagination that I was with difficulty dissuaded from entering the arena as a circus manager. Considerations of age or sex had no weight with me, and lack of capital eventually proved the deterrent force. On the shelf above were "Kenilworth," "The Lady of the Lake," and half of "Rob Roy." I have always hesitated to read the other half, for fear that it should not end precisely as I made it end when I was forced, by necessity, to supplement Sir Walter Scott. Then there was "Gulliver's Travels," and if any of the stories seemed difficult to believe, I had only to turn to the maps of Lilliput and Brobdingnag, with the degrees of latitude and longitude duly marked, which always convinced me that everything was fair and aboveboard. Of course, there was a great green and gold Shakespeare, not a properly expurgated edition for female seminaries, either, nor even prose tales from Shakespeare adapted to young readers, but the real thing. We expurgated as we read, child fashion, taking into our sleek little heads all that we could comprehend or apprehend, and unconsciously passing over what might have been hurtful, perhaps, at a later period. I suppose we failed to get a very close conception of Shakespeare's colossal genius, but we did get a tremendous and lasting impression of force and power, life and truth.

On the shelf above the Shakespeare were a few things presumably better suited to childish tastes—Hawthorne's "Wonder Book," Kingsley's "Water Babies," Miss Edgeworth's "Rosamond," and the "Arabian Nights."

There was a red covered "Book of Snobs"; "Vanity Fair" with no cover at all; "Scottish Chiefs" in crimson; a brown copy of George Sand's "Teverino," and next it a green Bailey's "Festus," which I only attacked when mentally rabid, and a little of which went a surprisingly long way, and then a maroon "David Copperfield," whose pages were limp with my kisses. (To write a book that a child would kiss! O, dear reward! O, sweet, sweet fame!)

Last of all, brought out only on state occasions, was a most seductive edition of that nursery Gaboriau, "Who Killed Cock Robin?" with colored illustrations in which the heads of the birds were made to move oracularly, by means of cunningly arranged strips pulled from the bottom of the page. This was a relic of infancy, our first introduction to the literature of plot, counterplot, intrigue, and crime, and the mystery of the murder was very real to us. This book, still in existence, with all the birds headless from overexertion, is always inextricably associated in my mind with childish woes, as a desire on my part to make the birds wag their heads was always contemporaneous, to a second, with a like desire on my sister's part, and on those rare days when the precious volume was taken down one of us always donned the penitential nightgown early in the afternoon and supped frugally in bed, while the other feasted gloriously at the family board, never quite happy in her virtue, however, since it separated her from beloved vice in disgrace. That paltry tattered volume, when it confronts me from its safe nook in a bureau drawer, makes my heart beat faster and sets me dreaming! Pray tell me if any book read in your later and wiser years ever brings to your mind such vivid memories, to your lips so lingering a smile, to your eye so ready a tear? True enough, "we could never have loved the earth so well if we had had no childhood in it. . . . What novelty is worth that sweet monotony where everything is known and loved because it is known?"

This autobiographical babble is excusable for one reason only.

IT is in remembering what books greatly moved us in earlier days; what books wakened strong and healthy desires, enlarged the horizon of our understanding, and inspired us to generous action, that we get some clew to the books with which to surround our children, and a reminiscence of this kind becomes a sort of psychological observation. The moment we realize clearly that the books we read in childhood and youth make a profound impression that can never be repeated later (save in some rare crisis of heart and soul, where a printed page marks an epoch in one's mental or spiritual life), then we become reinforced in our opinion that it makes a deal of difference what children read and how they read it.

Agnes Repplier says: "It is part of the irony of life that our discriminating taste for books should be built up on the ashes of an extinct enjoyment."

A book is such a fact to children, its people are so alive and so heartily loved and hated, its scenes so absolutely real! Prone on the hearth rug before the fire, or curled in the window seat, they forget everything but the story. The shadows deepen, until they can read no longer, but they do not much care, for the window looks into an enchanted region peopled with brilliant fancies. The old garden is sometimes the Forest of Arden, sometimes the Land of Lilliput, sometimes the Border. The gray rock on the river bank is now the cave of Monte Cristo, and now a castle defended by scores of armed knights who peep one by one from the alder bushes, while Fair Ellen and the lovely Undine float together on the quiet stream.

For forming a truly admirable literary taste, I cannot indeed say much in favor of my own motley collection of books just mentioned, for I was simply tumbled in among them and left to browse, in accordance with Charles Lamb's whimsical plan for Bridget Elia. More might have been added, and some taken away, but they had in them a world of instruction and illumination which children miss who read too exclusively those books written with rigid determination down to their level, neglecting certain old classics for which we fondly believe there are no substitutes. You cannot always persuade the children of this generation to attack "Robinson Crusoe," and if they do they are too sophisticated to thrill properly when they come to Friday's footsteps in the sand. Think of it, my contemporaries: think of substituting for that intense moment some of the modern "tuppenny" climaxes!

It is not my province to discriminate between the various writers for children at the present time. To give a complete catalogue of useful books for children would be quite impossible; to give a partial list, or endeavor to point out what is worthy and what unworthy, would be little better. No course of reading laid down by one person ever suits another, and the published "lists of best books," with their solemn platitudes in the way of advice, are generally interesting only in their reflection of the writer's personality.

I WOULD not choose too absolutely for a child save in his earliest years, but would rather surround him with the best and worthiest books, and let him choose for himself, for there are elective affinities and antipathies here that need not be disregarded—that are, indeed, certain indications of latent powers, and trustworthy guides to the child's unfolding possibilities.

"Books can only be profoundly influential as they unite themselves with decisive tendencies." Provide the right conditions for mental growth, and then let the child do the growing. If we dictate too absolutely, we envelop instead of developing his mind, and weaken his power of choice. On the other hand, we do not wish his reading to be partial or one sided, as it may be without intelligent oversight.

I was telling bedtime stories the other night to a proper, wise, dull little girl of 10 years. When I had successfully introduced a mother cat and kittens to her attention I plunged into what I thought a graphic and perfectly natural conversation between them, when she cut me short with the observation that she disliked stories in which animals talked, because they were not true! I was rebuked, and tried again with better success, until there came an unlucky figure of speech concerning a blossoming locust tree, that bent its green boughs and laughed in the summer sunshine, because its flowers were fragrant and lovely, and the world so green and beautiful. This she thought, on sober second thought, a trifle silly, as trees never did laugh! Now, that exasperating scrap of humanity (she is abnormal, to be sure) ought to be locked up and fed upon fairy tales until she is able to catch a faint glimpse of "the light that never was on sea or land." Poor, blind, deaf little person, predestined, perhaps, to be the mother of a lot of other blind, deaf little persons some day—how I should like to develop her imagination!

Whatever children read, let us see that it is good of its kind, and that it gives variety, so that no integral want of human nature shall be neglected—so that neither imagination, memory, nor reflection shall be starved. I own it is difficult to help them in their choice, when most of us have not learned to choose wisely for ourselves. A discriminating taste in literature is not to be gained without effort, and our constant reading of the little books spoils our appetite for the great ones.

Style is a matter of some moment, even at this early stage. Mothers sometimes forget that children cannot read slipshod, awkward, redundant prose, and singsong vapid verse, for ten or twelve years, and then take kindly to the best things afterward.

LONG before a child is conscious of such a thing as purity, delicacy, directness, or strength of style, he has been acted upon unconsciously, so that when the period of conscious choice comes, he is either attracted or repelled by what is good, according to his training. Children are fond of vivacity and color, and love a bit of word painting or graceful nonsense, but there are people who strive for this, and miss, after all, the true warmth and geniality that is most desirable for little people. Apropos of nonsense, we remember Leigh Hunt, who says that there are two kinds of nonsense, one resulting from a superabundance of ideas, the other from a want of them. Style in the hands of some writers is like warpaint to the savage—of no perceptible value unless it is laid on thick. Our little ones begin too often on cheap and tawdry stories in one or two syllables, where pictures in primary colors try their best to atone for lack of matter. Then they enter on a prolonged series of children's books, some of them written by people who have neither the intelligence nor the literary skill to write for a more critical audience; on the same basis of reasoning which puts the young and inexperienced teachers into the lowest grades, where the mind ought to be formed, and assigns to the more practiced the simpler task of informing the already partially formed (or deformed) mind.

There has never been such conscientious, intelligent, and purposeful work done for children as in the last ten years, and if an overwhelming flood of trash has been poured into our laps along with the better things, we must accept the inevitable. The legends, myths, and fables of the world, as well as its history and romance, are being brought within reach of young readers by writers of wide knowledge and trained skill.

Knowing, then, as we do, the dangers and obstacles in the way, and realizing the innumerable inspirations which the best thought gives to us, can we not so direct the reading of our children that our older boys and girls shall not be so exclusively modern in their tastes; so that they may be inclined to take a little less Mr. Saltus, a little more Shakespeare, temper their devotion to Mr. Kipling by small doses of Dante, forsake "The Duchess" for a dip into Thackeray, and use Hawthorne as a safe and agreeable antidote to Mr. Haggard? We need not despair of the child who does not care to read, for books are not the only means of culture, but they are a very great means when the mind is really stimulated, and not simply padded with them.

NOVEMBER ELEVENTH

By Hilmar Baukhage

The following poem appears in the volume of sketches by C. Leroy Baldrige, "I Was There," soon to be published by G. P. Putnam's Sons. Mr. Baukhage contributes some poems to the volume.

We stood up and we didn't say a word,
It felt just like when you have dropped your pack
After a hike, and straightened out your back
And seem just twice as light as any bird.

We stood up straight and, God! but it was good!
When you have crouched like that for months, to stand
Straight up and look right out toward No-Man's-Land
And feel the way you never thought you could.

We saw the trenches on the other side
And Jerry, too, not making any fuss,
But prob'ly stupid-happy, just like us,
Nobody shot and no one tried to hide.

If you had listened then I guess you'd heard
A sort of sigh from everybody there,
But all we did was stand and stare and stare,
Just stare and stand and never say a word.

The SILVERTONE was designed and built to meet this demand. By adopting and combining the best features of all the phonographs then on the market, by making such improvements as experience had proved necessary, and by using only the finest materials in its construction, we succeeded in making the SILVERTONE a phonograph of super-quality.

Quantity production, efficient manufacturing methods, and our economical mode of selling, enabled us to offer the SILVERTONE at a price far below that of other phonographs of the same size, quality and musical perfection.

The enthusiastic response of our six million customers when we announced the SILVERTONE, proved to us that we had indeed filled a long felt want. Since then hundreds of thousands of these phonographs have been sold and are giving their owners universal satisfaction and pleasure.

The popularity which the SILVERTONE has enjoyed among our own customers has led us to believe that everybody, everywhere, whether or not they are customers of Sears, Roebuck and Co., will welcome the opportunity to purchase a good phonograph at a reasonable price and on terms which make it easy for everybody to own one. That is why we are making this liberal offer.

Send No Money—30 Days' Trial

Select any SILVERTONE Phonograph illustrated on this page, fill in the order blank at the right and mail it to Sears, Roebuck and Co. today. We will send you the phonograph without the payment of one cent in advance. And this does not obligate you in any way. All we want you to do is to try the instrument for thirty days. Examine its mechanical features, cabinet work and finish. Compare its musical excellence with any other phonograph. Give it every test necessary to prove the truth of our claims for it. If at the end of this 30-day trial you are not satisfied with the instrument, if you do not believe it is the equal of any phonograph on the market, and that the price is lower than any other instrument of the same quality, size and musical perfection, simply notify us and we will take it away at our own expense. This 30-day trial does not cost you one penny, nor does it place you under any obligation to buy.

Easy Payments

If you decide to keep the phonograph after this 30-day trial, send us the price of the phonograph you have selected in equal payments each month until the total is paid. The amount of the monthly payment on each machine is shown under the illustrations of the various models.

Features of SILVERTONE Construction

Period Design Cabinets

SILVERTONE cabinets are the finest product of the skilled cabinetmakers' art. Made in the most popular period designs, every one is a handsome piece of furniture—dignified, graceful and artistic in appearance. Only the finest selected woods are used in their construction and they are finished and fitted with that exquisite care and perfection which marks the work of the painstaking artisan.

Tone

Tone is the all important thing in a phonograph. Tone quality depends upon the reproducer, tone arm and amplifying chamber. Each must be correctly designed and proportioned and harmonized in its relation to the other two so that all will act together as a unit. This has been done in the SILVERTONE and that is what constitutes its musical perfection.

The SILVERTONE reproducer faithfully restores every tone quality that went into the making of the original record. It accurately reproduces every delicate shading of tone, every minute variation of volume and density, every sound vibration, whether it be the strains from the violin of a master, the silvery tones of the harp, the heavy instrumentation of a military band or a vocal solo.

Tone Control

The SILVERTONE is equipped with a tone modulator which gives complete control of the volume of sound. It serves the same purpose as the doors on the Victrola or the shutters on the Columbia Grafonola. You may set the modulator at any desired point, giving a uniform volume of sound, either loud or soft as desired. Or the modulator may be manipulated while a selection is being played, thus enabling you to give your own interpretation to the music.

Powerful Silent Motor

The motor used in SILVERTONE Phonographs has been tested and improved and then tested again until it is now as perfect as mechanical and human efficiency can make it. It is powerful, silent, smooth running.

Presbyterians Push 'New Era Movement' Here

By the Rev. Frederick L. Gratiot

THE Presbyterian "New Era movement" is aptly described by its slogan—"The whole church marshaled for its whole task—and a task for you."

By its efficient organization in New York it has succeeded in marshaling "the whole church" and it has studied and presented to that church "its whole task." It is occupied now with the last part of its slogan—reaching every individual member or "near member" of the church with its message of greater activity in the work of bringing the world to the Master.

In connection with that it has developed a group system for the "every member at work" plan which is to provide a definite task for every one of the 1,600,000 members of the 9,800 Presbyterian churches in the United States.

"It is the aim of these groups of a district to interest as many in their district as possible in church activity," the New Era committee writes. "By the group system data is gathered as to who is and who is not a church member. Social events are conducted, reports are made, personal invitations given, and the spirit of Christian sociability encouraged."

There are leaders in each group for each of the big features of the New Era movement—social service, religious education, stewardship, Sunday school and church advancement, and finance.

Stress is being laid at present on the "Pledge-up, pay-up" ingathering for the $13,000,000 budget for the year, which culminates in the Thanksgiving day jubilee.

Next Sunday is the annual pulpit exchange Sunday, when every pastor of the Chicago presbytery preaches at some church other than his own.

It was announced at diocesan headquarters of the nation-wide campaign of the Episcopal church, 666 Rush street, that four Chicago clergy have consented to give four weeks for speaking tours in connection with the campaign. They are the Rev. Frederic S. Fleming, Church of the Atonement; the Rev. Henry N. Hyde, St. Paul's-by-the-Lake; the Rev. E. Ashley Gerhard, Christ church, Winnetka, and the Rev. Herbert W. Prince, Church of the Epiphany. The Rev. Louis G. Wood, national vice director, made the arrangements last week.

A drive for 1,000,000 pupils in the Sunday schools of the Episcopal church begins today in connection with the campaign. "Recruiting officers" in each church school are being appointed to call upon and enlist new pupils. A religious pageant is being prepared, to be presented by the schools in all the churches Sunday morning, Nov. 30.

A stereopticon lecture on "The Gospel as Interpreted by Rembrandt's Eight Masterpieces," will be delivered by Dr. Frank W. Gunsaulus before the Sunday Evening club of the Hiram W. Thomas Memorial church, West Sixty-fourth place and Homan avenue, tonight.

A meeting for men and boys under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. with the coöperation of several churches will be held in the Masonic temple at South Chicago, Ninety-first and Exchange streets, this afternoon at 3 o'clock. The Rev. Fremont S. Tittle, pastor of the First Methodist church of Evanston, will preach on "The Future of the Church."

A new church is to be opened today by the Disciples of Christ in Chatham Fields at Eighteenth street and Evans avenue. The Rev. Herbert L. Willett, D. D., pastor of Memorial church, will preach at the opening service, which will take place at 4:30 this afternoon. The Rev. Ralph W. Nelson will be pastor of the church.

The Lutheran churches will hold a series of thirty afternoon mass meetings in the Studebaker theater Sunday afternoons at 4 o'clock, beginning next Sunday. Thirty laymen, headed by Dr. S. P. Long, originated the plan and are financing it. They obtained the approval of the Ministerial association before proceeding. Dr. Long is the preacher at the meetings.

Post-conference changes in the assignments of Methodist ministers include the appointment of the Rev. Audry S. Moore to the Washington Boulevard church, Oak Park, for the fifth year; the Rev. Walter Scott to Sheridan Road church, and the Rev. A. M. Pennewell to Covenant church, Evanston.

The Rev. Charles F. Fields

The Rev. Charles F. Fields comes from Grace Baptist church, Trenton, N. J., to become the pastor of the Irving Park Baptist church, North Kostner avenue and Irving Park boulevard.

A graduate of Brown university, 1904, he went to Rochester Theological seminary for his training for the ministry, where he was graduated in 1907. He received the degree of bachelor of divinity for extra work done at the seminary.

For a while he was pastor of the First Baptist church, Hoboken, N. J., called from there to the first church of Ogdensburg, N. Y., where he remained for five years. Before being called to Chicago he was for five years pastor of Grace church, Trenton, N. J.

Each of the churches where Mr. Fields has served reports a substantial increase under his ministry. Since he has been at Trenton 250 have been added to the church, one-half by baptism. The benevolences have more than doubled in that time, and twice his salary was increased. All departments of the work show like development.

Mrs. Field is an able assistant to her husband, teaching a large Bible class. In Trenton Mr. Fields not only taught a Bible class but conducted a Junior church of a hundred boys and girls. His special work is the study and teaching of the Bible.

Mr. Fields is preaching a series of Sunday evenings sermons during November on "The Five Free Men." The subject tonight is "The Man Caught by a Tree."

The "Catholic Classical conference" was organized last Wednesday at the law school of Loyola university, which includes in its membership all Roman Catholic institutions which teach Latin and Greek. A larger gathering will be held during Easter week.

The Rt. Rev. T. J. Shahan, D. D., of the Catholic university at Washington, D. C., was honorary chairman of the meeting, and the Rev. Albert Fox, S. J., of Campion college, Prairie du Chien, led the discussions. Educations leaders from all parts of the country were present.

The purpose of the conference is "to develop an active propaganda in favor of the classical studies in keeping with the habitual spirit and purpose of the American colleges, and with the view of perpetuating a truly liberal culture as the basis of the highest mental and moral education."

The Chicago Church federation asks the churches to observe Armistice day, Nov. 11, in their services today, by at least a moment's silence for prayer, thanksgiving, and meditation on the lessons of the great war.

At the Hope Evangelical Lutheran church, Iowa street and Monticello avenue, a bronze honor roll and memorial tablet will be unveiled next Wednesday evening. Fifty names are on the tablet. Chaplain Howard S. Snyder of Madison, Wis., will be the speaker. The Rev. S. C. Dolber is pastor of the church.

At the Congregational ministers' meeting tomorrow in the Masonic temple at 10:45 a. m. the Rev. John Gardner will lead a discussion on the present industrial unrest.

Why you should care for your Throat daily

YOU can now give the same daily attention to your throat as to your teeth; and throat care is even more important than tooth care. The throat is the great breeding place for infectious germs, which lodge there when inhaled from the dusty air, and often invade the body to cause influenza or other infectious fevers. Sometimes they attack their breeding ground itself and give rise to sore throat or tonsillitis. Throat specialists, physicians and dentists recommend

Stock Show Makes Chicago Center of Breeders' World This Month

By Frank Ridgway.

CONOMY in production of beef, pork, and mutton will be the big idea of this year's International Live Stock exposition in Chicago. y years' development of a single will culminate Nov. 29, when the at the International amphitheater be taken down for the world's big- rodeo or round-up of live stock. ugh these gates will be led from to 10,000 of the world's choicest mals, where the white hot brand of will be stamped on them by judges of North America Europe.

1900, when leading breeders and launched this great enterprise the object of stimulating produc- along educational lines, they were it would not last more than two The prediction did not hold for it has been held annually since time, and each aggregation of cat- hogs, sheep, and horses exceeded of the previous year in quality number. Today the institution is genuine international character, during its existence of two decades culations have been exceeded and pectancy surpassed. Its contri- to the most important chapter history of the live stock of this try are immeasurable.

ce the International Live Stock ition was founded, the entire in- ry has been revolutionized. On the rn ranges the big cattle outfits been largely replaced by small men, the sheep business has been on a more substantial basis in production of both meat and wool. s of finishing live stock for the t have been demonstrated at the l round-up in Chicago every year have greatly aided in keeping the try on a profitable basis where old methods would have meant ure.

It has rendered invaluable service by uraging the preservation of seed k of all the breeds of the different ies. The brightest minds of the try take part and devote deep ght, active interest, and invalua- service in building the permanent dation upon which rest successful evements in stock breeding.

ese men realize that all efforts t be focused this year upon mak- the exhibits more clearly reflect resources and possibilities now be- the breeders and feeders of this try. The demand for more and r live stock is increasing in this n in order to meet the home and gn demands. Farmers and stock- realize that agriculture is the ba- upon which rests much of the great cial fabric of this country and they must keep pace with the e management of the International Stock exposition says that these ial contests in the show ring at ago have maintained such a de- of interest that men have been sed to a sense not only of the importance of pedigreed live stock but to the allurement of the breeding sphere, coupled with its remunerative features. Horses, cattle, and sheep of untold value have been imported from Europe, the post-war period finding the United States in possession of seed stock that could not be replaced, the value of which has enhanced greatly in consequence of depletion of European herds and flocks.

In celebrating the twentieth anniversary of the International Live Stock exposition it will be a reunion of the breeders, feeders, and stockmen generally of the last quarter of a century. It will offer an opportunity for these men to gather here from all sections of the country to exchange ideas and enter friendly contests. In these contests the champions that have received plaudits and honorable decorations at the various shows and fairs throughout the United States, Canada, Great Britain, Belgium, and France will meet for the finals. There will be more than 600 classes, and these champions will not only be the leaders of their class but, after having been groomed, clipped, shampooed, massaged, and manicured for several months they will be ready to strut in full dress in the arena.

This event affords stockmen an opportunity, otherwise impossible, to create standards for individual operation. They get the benefit of the lifetime work of others, and the breeder can plan his future with greater confidence. Here is a chance to create invaluable acquaintance and friendship among live stock growers from all parts of the world. It is here that the producer and consumer meet on common ground, and often many false impressions that work injury to both can be eliminated. Those who live in the city are given an opportunity to become acquainted with the many necessary complex processes the producer has to contend with, and, on the other hand, the stockmen and farmers realize the importance of the consumer. After the consumer has seen the cattle, hogs, and sheep that are brought singly and in pairs, and even in carload lots, he is inspired with the magnitude of an industry that has never been understood and about which many of the uninitiated entertain many hazy ideas. It is truly an educational institution.

"The coöperative idea is made paramount," said B. H. Heide, secretary and general manager of the international. "Here the breeder of commercial cattle meets the corn belt finisher. We make an unselfish appeal to the farmers and breeders of the country to promote their own interests, giving them active coöperation and inducing them to look to the international as a creator of standards as near perfection as attainment is possible. It is in the establishment of these standards that the institution serves its most useful purpose, rather than in staging an annual spectacle."

During the week from Nov. 29 to Dec. 6, inclusive, there will be daily sales of pure bred breeding cattle, hogs, sheep, and horses. The sales will be held in buildings on the grounds.

The international grain and hay show has been added as a new department this year. The Chicago Board of Trade offers $10,000 in prizes, which is supplemented by the management of the International with cash premiums in a single ear class. A great deal of interest is being displayed in this department, which is indicated by the fact that entries have been received from 'most every state in the union. The government will also have an exhibit in this department.

"Twenty years ago, when the first International Live Stock exposition was held in Chicago, the institution was no more essential than at this moment," remarked Frank O. Lowden, governor of Illinois, charter member of the International and actively engaged in the campaign for improvement of American live stock. "During that two decade period the industry has been through a period of evolution; each season has developed new production problems, both in the sphere of breeding and finishing. Foreign competition, especially in the case of beef, has become of serious import, rendering maximum results imperative. A brief era of free grass and cheap grain has passed into the historical stage; making gains with cattle, hogs, or sheep enhances in cost until even with the new scale of values the industry can be profitably maintained only by intelligent methods.

"The problem confronting the American live stock grower at this junction combines economical feeding with improved breeding; therefore the new department providing for a comprehensive display of such grains and grass products as are essential to the manufacture of beef, pork, and mutton on the farm is a timely innovation. The International has kept pace with every mutation of the industry during its twenty years of educational effort, and in the hands of the public spirited men who chart its course will continue to discharge that function.

"We have emerged from the period of waste to one of highly intensified, systematic production, in which only the fittest can survive if financial results is to be the object. Feed is more than ever a factor of prime importance to the live stock grower, and the new department of the International will rank with the established features of the institution in commanding public interest."

Another educational feature will be the judging contests. In addition to the regular collegiate live stock judging classes, trophies, medals, and possibly scholarships will be offered as prizes in a noncollegiate live stock judging contest. Both boys and girls representing agricultural high schools are elegible to enter the latter contest. Agricultural students have acquired nation-wide publicity through the collegiate contests at the international, and through them students and instructors have been brought together from all parts of the United States and Canada to exchange views and experiences. There will be a wide range of contests.

A domestic science department has been carefully worked into the program of the educational features this year. In this department demonstrations have been arranged in order to teach visitors how to use the cheaper cuts of meats in making palatable dishes.

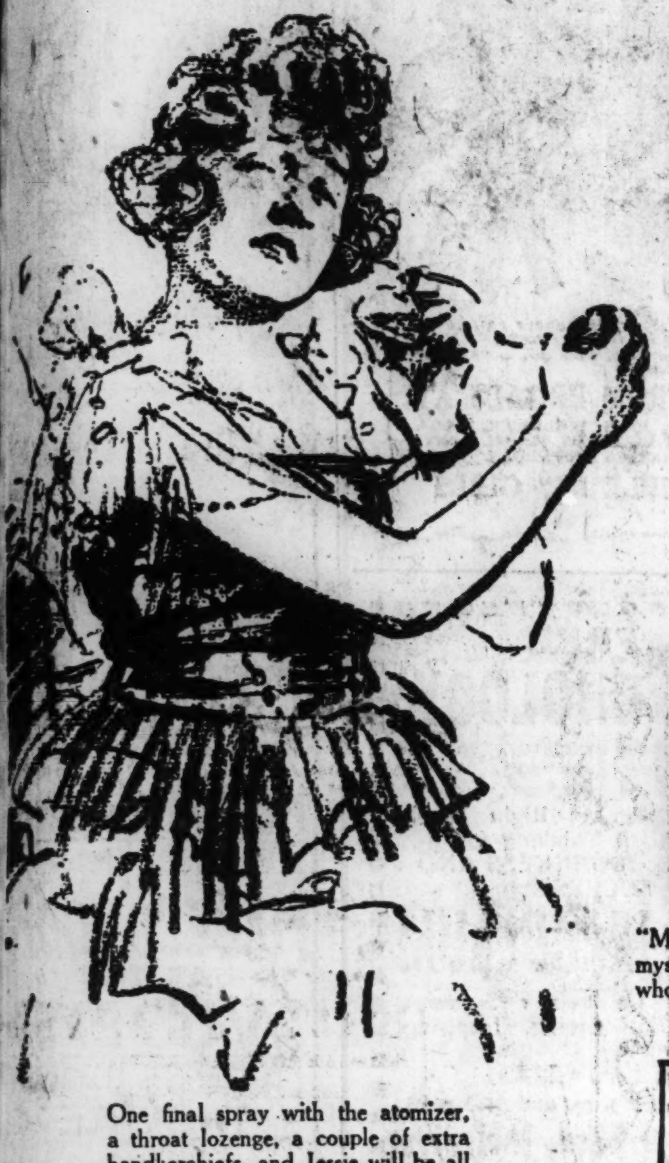
Among Us Mortals

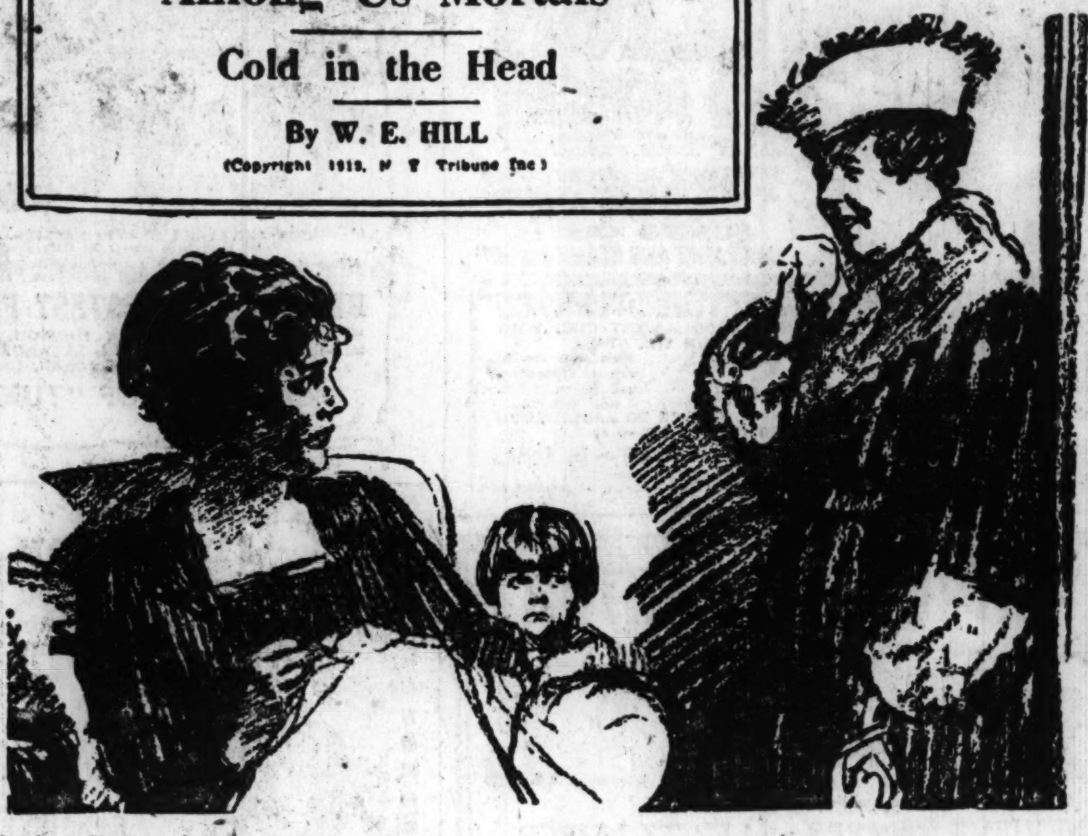
Cold in the Head

By W. E. HILL

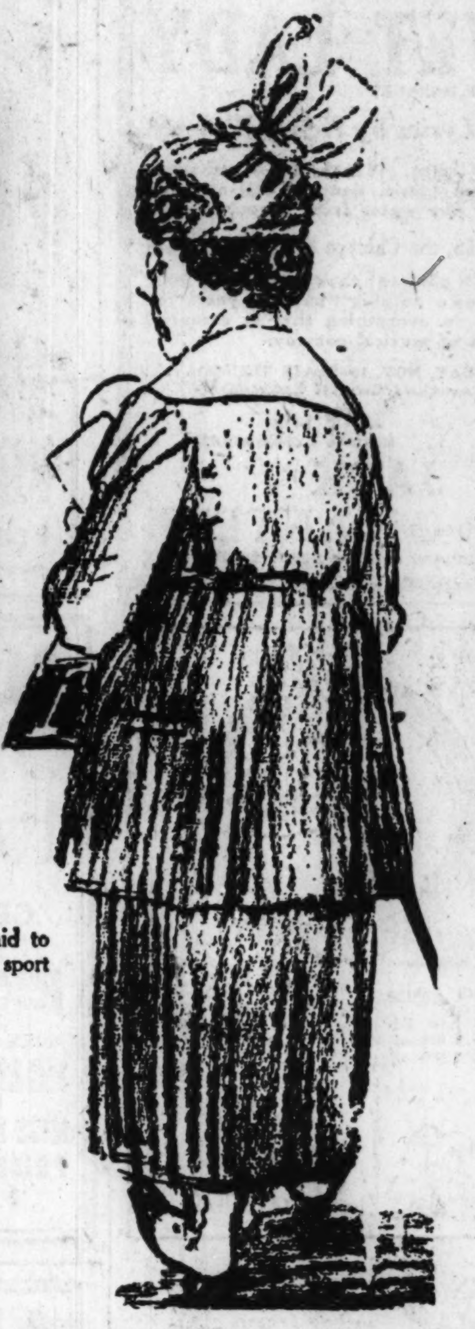
(Copyright 1919, N. Y. Tribune Inc.)



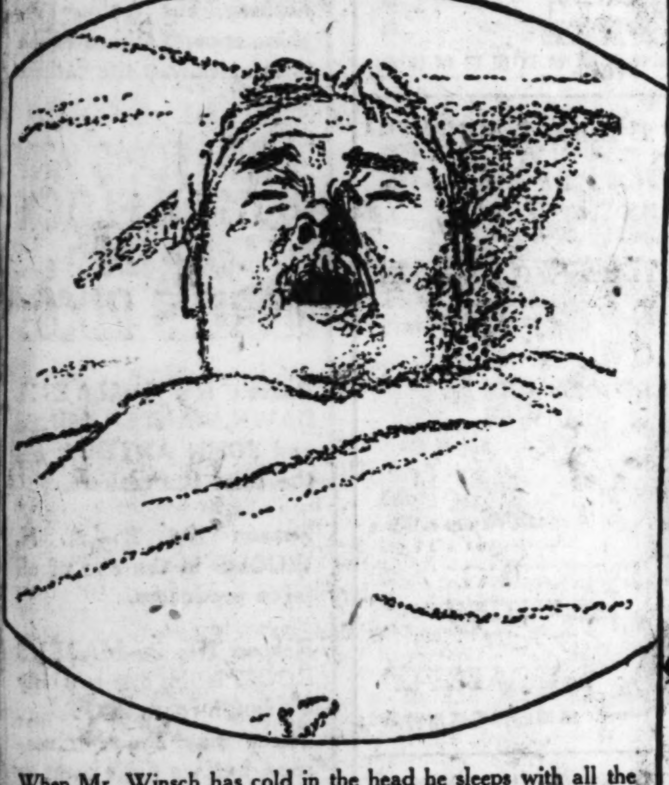
One final spray with the atomizer, a throat lozenge, a couple of extra handkerchiefs, and Jessie will be all ready to receive her young man in the drawing room.



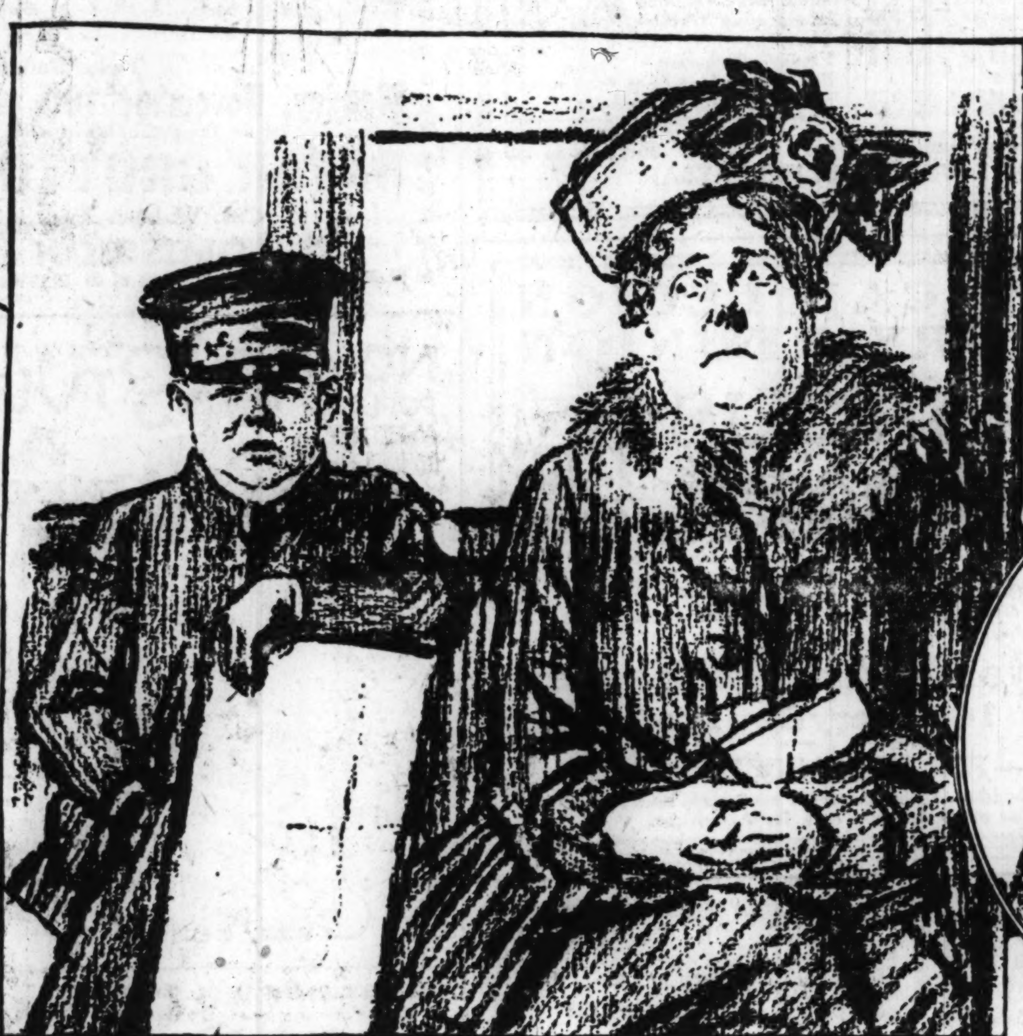
"My dear, I've got the worst cold I've had in years; in fact, I think I'm coming down with influenza; but I said to myself I wouldn't let another day pass without running in to see you and the children!" Miss Jump is a good sport who is never worried over little things like germs, provided the germs are all on her side.



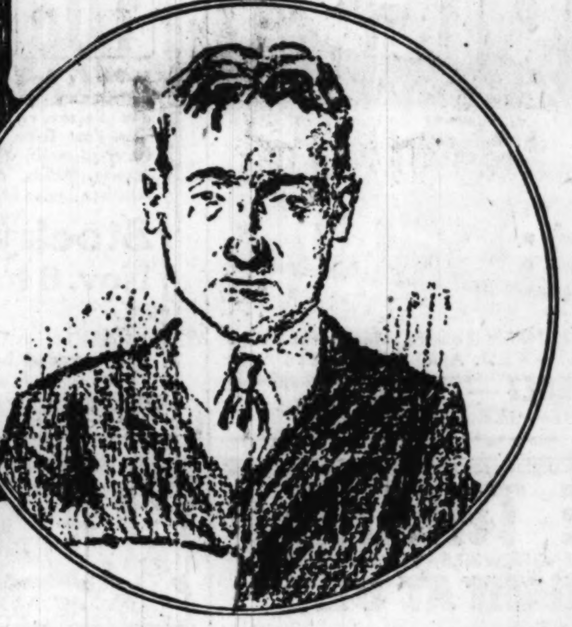
Lady with a hard cold and no rubbers walking a wet pavement on her heels.



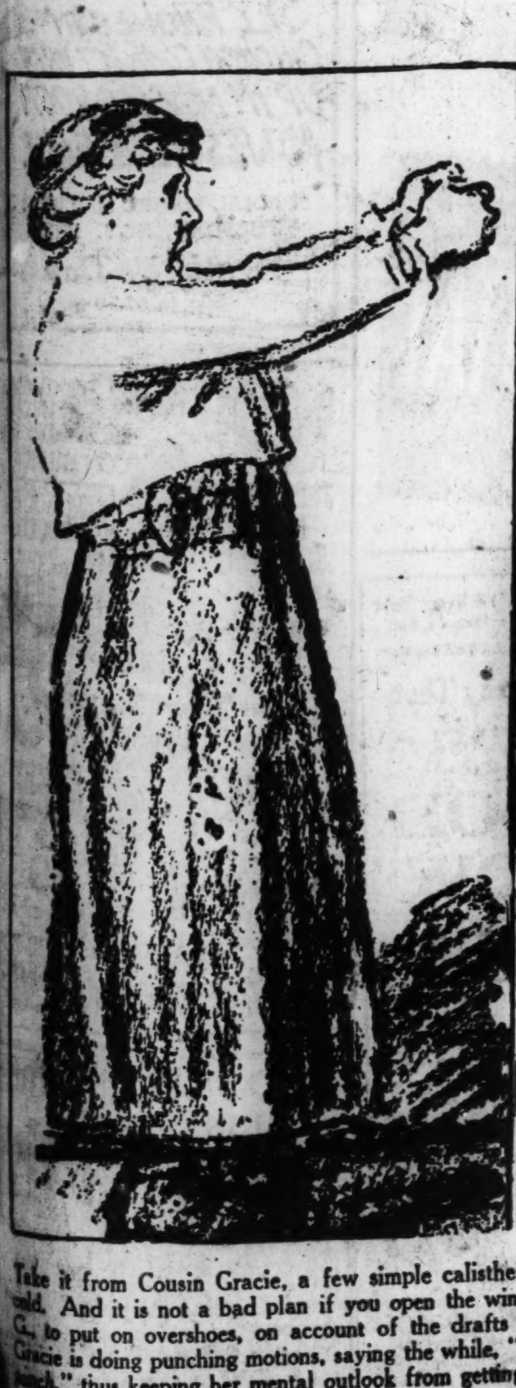
When Mr. Winsch has cold in the head he sleeps with all the windows shut tight, all the steam on, and lets nature take its course.



If Mrs. McCooey can only keep breathing out, and not in, until she reaches her corner, some blocks distant, she may not have picked up any germs from Joe's cold. And, considering the risk she is running, it seems as though there ought to be a law against people with colds from going out at all!



It's a very sad play, but the emotional effect on Harry is not nearly so telling as the people sitting next probably think, judging by the tears and snuffles, for Harry is coming down with a hard cold and has left his handkerchief at home.



Take it from Cousin Gracie, a few simple calisthenics will drive away any cold. And it is not a bad plan if you open the windows at all, says Cousin G., to put on overshoes, on account of the drafts across the floor. Cousin Gracie is doing punching motions, saying the while, "I love to punch, I love to punch," thus keeping her mental outlook from getting low.

"Vaderbild two sigs four sigs. I ab speagig iddo de receiber!"

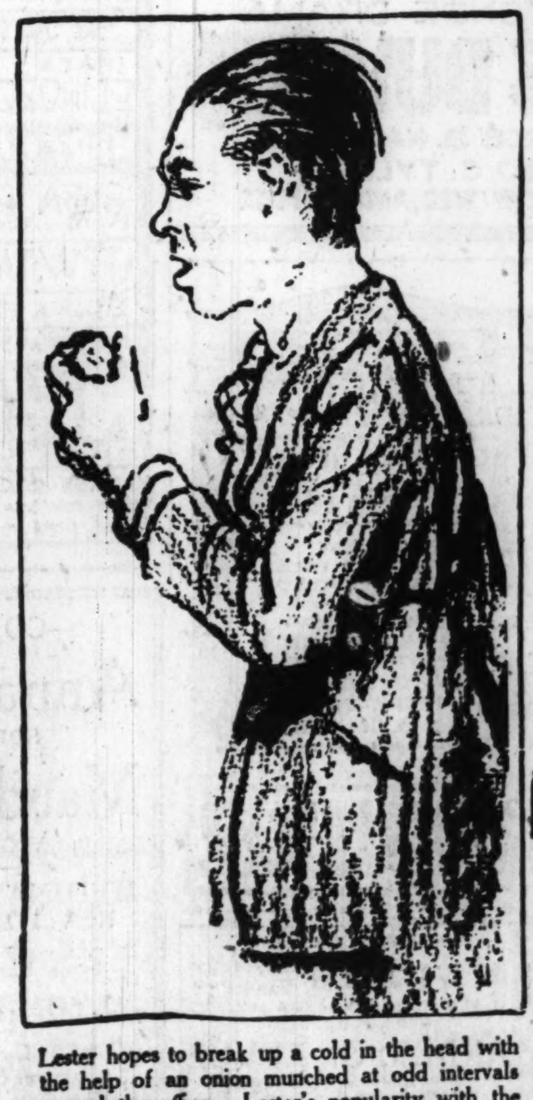
"I won't kiss you because I have a hard cold" says Mrs. Fred Dibble, proving that life is just full of disappointments.



Lester hopes to break up a cold in the head with the help of an onion munched at odd intervals around the office. Lester's popularity with the office force is sadly on the wane.

THE THEATERS

By Percy Hammond

THE real Shakespeareans are having a grand time at the Olympic these days. As you may know Mr. Mantell is not a tea-actor, and the poseurs, the learned ladies and gents of the drama, pass him by as rather bourgeois. The little experts and dissectors of the Plays discover small interest in him, and he is left to the honest, bard-loving public, the yeomanry of the classics, so to speak, who really like to hear the boom and beat of Shakespearean song and to join in the chorus of familiar quotations.

Mr. Mantell needs no club rostrums from which to exhort, between performances, an interest in his personality. No taint of the precious mars his full blooded and conventional interpretations, and his scenery is to art what Mr. Gary is to economics. An amiable legitimist he spurns things radical, and his feats of acting lull comfortably rather than intoxicate. Unlike some of the specious prestidigitateurs in his line he has no long hair to deceive us. He conjures up no bizarre didoes of detail or setting, but is simple, forthright, oxen, a primer-Shakespearean, and he gratifies the multitude.

I suspect that Mr. Mantell's sturdy popularity is due to the fact that he reads the titanic lines of Shakespeare as they are read by the average Shakespearean in what is known in Shakespearean criticism as "the closet." Not as you read them, perhaps, but as you feel that you would read them if you could. Mr. Mantell epitomizes the rhetorical tradition and he does it picturesquely, melodiously, and with dignity. He embodies and denotes the Heroes as the common person imagines them and he is at once Bourbon and a democrat in the illustration of Shakespeare's plays.

Speaking of familiar quotations, one's mind is called to a lesser benefice of Mr. Mantell's ministrations. Who, for instance, announced that the pen is mightier than the sword, and also that in the bright lexicon of youth there is no such word as fail? Most of us will ascribe these axiomatic wisdoms to Shakespeare, as we do Sterne's belief that God tempers the wind to the shorn lamb. But they were to be found last Monday night in "Richelieu," much to the surprise of a number of loop savants who know Tchekoff by heart, but Bulwer-Lytton only by hearsay.

Ten dollars per seat will be charged by Mr. Morris Gest for the first performance in New York of "Aphrodite"—the "white, implacable Aphrodite," as Edmund Gosse has said. Since Mr. Gest has imported Fockine and numerous other European celebrities to help him stage his version of the spectacle, he is prepared to laugh at what Mr. Campanini and the Chicago Opera company will do when they produce it as an opera.

When "Abraham Lincoln" is presented, early next month, the rôle of the President will be played by John McGlynn, an actor not very generally known. Mr. McGlynn was picked because his voice resembles a Lincoln tradition and because his face is admirably adapted to the most famous of history's whiskers. Tim Murphy was at first considered for the rôle, but he became an important part of "Five o'Clock," and another actor who was tried out was abolished because he insisted on telling Lester Lonergan, the director, what he would have done if he'd been Lincoln.

At the Blackstone tomorrow night Mr. Arliss in "Jacques Duval" will impersonate a learned French doctor, the discoverer of a serum fatal to tuberculosis. He is a studious and austere scientist; his wife a frivolous lady who is fond of men. So, while finding his magic lymph, he loses her, and loses her to a lover afflicted with consumption—a patient seeking to be healed with the new antitoxin. A dramatic doctor's dilemma is thus precipitated. The doctor can either kill or cure his betrayer, and he decides to cure him first and kill him afterwards.

"Jacques Duval" is so popular in Berlin that it is running in several theaters at once. It is a success in Paris, too. A Dane wrote it and since he has sold the American rights to several impresarios, Mr. Tyler, the producer, is prepared for injunctions tomorrow evening at the Blackstone. The American adaptation was made by George C. Kaufman, dramatic editor of the New York Times.

Miss Elsie Janis and her mother were overcome by Miss Ethel Barrymore's performance of "Declassé" in New York the other night, according to a wire from the Sun. At the end of the play Miss Janis hastened to the stage, embraced the star, shed tears, and announced that she was speechless with admiration. "Well, Elsie," said Miss Barrymore, "they want me to act this piece in London. Do you think I could play it there?" "Play it there!" exclaimed Miss Janis, "Why, Ethel, you could play that part in Sweden!"

When William Dean Howells' "The Rise of Silas Lapham" is produced by the Theater Guild in New York James K. Hackett will impersonate the chief character. Mr. Hackett's latest public appearances were in "The Better 'Ole" in the far, far west.

Irvin Cobb continues to find it more perplexing to write for the theater than for the weekly magazines. His latest comedy, "Boys Will Be Boys," is about to be retired in New York, after an uncertain run of a month or so.

"The Five Million" will embark from the Princess for other parts week after next, and will be replaced by Rachel Crothers' "39 East." Henry Hull and Miss Constance Binney head the cast in Miss Crothers' comedy, which is about a stage stricken middle west ingenue and her adventures with the drama at Broadway and Forty-fourth street. It was popular in New York.

The Ziegfeld Follies will start for points west Dec. 7, and will reach the Colonial theater on the evening of Dec. 21. The extravaganza's New York season now coming to a close is the longest ever played by the Follies and, in point of money made, the most successful.

The wound stripe worn by Ralph Stuart Jr. as one of the returned doughboys in "The Five Million" is the real thing. Mr. Stuart fought with the Sixth Marines from Belleau Woods through the Argonne-Meuse campaign, was shot at St. Mihiel, and was captured by the Germans just before the end of the war. His father was the late Ralph Stuart, the good comedian who played Wallingford in the Olympic theater engagement several years ago. Another dreamy crusader in "The Five Million" outfit is the youthful Percy Helton, who was cited for valor in the Argonne, and still another is Purnell Pratt, who plays a flatfoot, but who was in France a year with the A. E. F.

"Daddies" will be played at a special matinée Thursday afternoon for the benefit of the Chicago Fund for the Fatherless Children of France. All the proceeds will be given by Messrs. Powers and Belasco to Mrs. Walter S. Brewster, chairman of the fund.

Fritz Leiber and Miss Genevieve Hamper will be the lovers in Wednesday afternoon's performance of "Romeo and Juliet" by Mr. Mantell's company at the Olympic. A new production of "Julius Cæsar" will be added to the répertoire a week from tomorrow night.

Mimi Aguglia, the feverish Sicilian, who is expert at impersonating the wild women of southern Europe, is to be an American star. Her play, by George C. Hazelton, is called "The Whirlwind," and it is described as a picture of Old Chihuahua.

Cosmo Hamilton, author of "Scandal," et cetera, says that lack of concentration is the flaw that makes many, many potential playwrights mute.

"There are at least two Shakespeares in Hoboken," says he. "There is an H. G. Wells and a Shaw in Yonkers. Why don't they come to the fore? Because they haven't the terrible power of concentration needed to turn out a play. One must take himself away from family, God, the devil, everything, shut himself up and do the most arduous, uncomfortable and nerve racking work."

Mr. Hamilton believes that the war, instead of putting blood and brawn into plays, has had the opposite effect. "The war," he says, "was so gigantic, so filled with heroism and unbelievable deeds that the imaginations of an author are pale and sickly beside them. For that reason writers are frivolling and concerning themselves with the lighter things of life. They have not yet regained enough poise and confidence to take a shot at the big things."

Lackaye Success in New Role

By Burns Mantle

NEW YORK.—[Special correspondence.]—The monthly gambols at the Lambs' club serve many purposes. First, they entertain the actors as their guests. Second, they offer the actors a chance to do those things no commercial manager will pay them for doing. Thus, the player of dramatic rôles who believes, as most of them do, that God intended he should be a comedian, is given a chance to try his ambition on the most sympathetic audience it is possible to gather. Many such succeed in proving their contention, and all are funny in one way or another. Third, the gambols provide a means of trying out new material in the form of one and two act plays, and, fourth, they serve as an inspiration to playwrights, both old and new.

It was at such a gambol that Augustus Thomas became convinced that in Wilton Lackaye the stage possessed an actor of a versatility that had not been given full sweep. Mr. Lackaye, following his success as the sinister Svengali in "Trilby," has since been cast in a succession of similar rôles, until he has become associated in the managers' minds with the heavy, forbidding, physically dominant rôles of the drama. When there have been none of these for him to play he has been idle.

Thomas saw in one of Lackaye's gambol performances a "commingling of mellowness and authority" that impressed him, and following that gambol he went home and wrote a play for the actor in which these qualities coud be given their proper setting. The play was produced under the title of "Kaintuck," but it was brought into the Playhouse last week as "Palmy Days." In it Lackaye has scored a personal success of the first quality.

"Palmy Days" is a story of that early California which served David Belasco in his less authentic but more pretentious drama of "The Girl of the Golden West." Lackaye plays a bewhiskered miner, who, as a boy, had served the great Edwin Forrest as a dresser. He had been ambitious in those days to be a second Forrest, and learned the classic rôles by heart. But the only chance he was ever given to act was in the small part of attendant to Richard III. Then he had one line: "Sir, a gentleman that calls himself Stanley desires admittance." When he faced the glowering Edwin, however, he forgot Richard and Shakespeare, and reverted to his rôle of valet. Tremblingly he spoke the line with which he had most frequently addressed his master. "Sir," he said, "there is a

Miss Marjorie Poir in "The Five Million"

Miss Poir acts the rôle of a doughboy's French bride in "The Five Million" at the Princess. She came from Paris to America at the age of 16, and, being a summer neighbor of Miss Flora Zabelle, was introduced to the stage as that prima donna's protégé.

Miss Elaine Arnt "The Velvet Lady" Colonial Photo—Lewis-Smith

Miss Arnt sings well and acts even better as the bride in "The Velvet Lady." She is a former student at the University of Chicago.

Miss Elizabeth Risdon with George Arliss in "Jacques Duval" Photo—Campbell Studio

Miss Risdon is a London actress and is the wife of George Loane Tucker, who made "The Miracle Man" a popular moving picture. She came to America in the leading rôle of Shaw's "Fanny's First Play," and last year was with William Gillette in "Dear Brutus." Her first Chicago appearance will be with Mr. Arliss tomorrow night at the Blackstone.

ly downstairs." And his career as an actor was blasted.

He had married an actress in those days, and when later she was named as one of innumerable co-respondents in the famous Forrest divorce case, he left her and drifted westward, where he became known as "Kaintuck." Eighteen years later his ex-wife appears in California exploiting the talent of her daughter, a popular soubrette of the camp circuit known as "the Cricket." This girl, it transpires, is "Kaintuck's" daughter, born three months after he had left her mother.

In camp she becomes the toast of the bar, and when she is loved and won by "Kaintuck's" young partner and her good name is assailed by the young man's jealous rivals, it becomes her father's privilege to save her from contumely and bring the romance to a successful issue.

It is an interesting character comedy, with the men of the cast mostly hidden behind flannel shirts and flowing beards. Occasionally is flares into a dramatic scene of some force, but mostly it depends upon the Lackaye rôle, with the actor quoting volubly and eloquently from "the Bard," and playing with expressive feeling the sentimental episodes linked with his discovery that "the Cricket" is "the living spit" of his own mother and therefore unmistakably of his blood rather than of that of the suspected Forrest. Little Genevieve Tobin, playing the daughter, shares the histrionic honors with Lackaye.

We weary of musical plays hereabouts, particularly those musical plays that depend largely upon the thinly veiled indecencies of the Barbary coast and such humor as may be extracted from references to the Smith Bros., Trade and Mark, of cough drop fame, and the comedian's assusance that the steak was so tender it threatened to kiss him. But still they come. There were two last week. One is a musicalized version of William Gillette's once famous "All the Comforts of Home."

The version with tunes is pretty thin entertainment, saved to some extent by the employment of Herbert Corthell, the most amusing of the fat comedians, and to a lesser degree by Gertrude Vanderbilt, a lively soubrette some seasons ago, who has not weathered the prevalent epidemic of "jazz" as gracefully as her sisters.

The other is called "Just a Minute," probably because its authors could think of no title more innocuous or less fitting. This one is the usual assortment of fairly tuneful songs sung by an undistinguished ensemble, with a bare legged chorus kicking out the rhythm of the refrains. It has May Vokes and Wellington Cross to inspire the cast and the critics. They do their capable best.

WHAT I THINK OF PELMANISM—By George Creel

PELMANISM is one of the most important things that have come to the United States in recent years. With a record of hundreds of thousands of successes in England, this famous course in mind training has been Americanized at last, and is now operated by Americans in America for American men and women. Pelmanism is neither an experiment nor a theory. For twenty years it has been teaching people how to think; how to use fully the powers of which they are conscious; how to discover and to train the powers of which they have been unconscious. Pelmanism is merely the science of thinking; the science of putting right thought into successful action; the science of that mental team play that is the one true source of efficiency, the the master key that opens all doors to advancement.

I heard first of Pelmanism during a recent visit in London. Its advertising matter filled pages in papers and magazines and "Are you a Pelmanist?" was a common question.

It was T. P. O'Connor who satisfied my curiosity and gave me the facts. By 1918 there were 400,000 Pelmanists figuring in every walk and condition of life. Lords and ladies of high degree, clerks and cooks, members of Parliament, laborers, clergymen and actors, farmers, lawyers, doctors, coal miners, soldiers and sailors, even generals and admirals, were all Pelmanizing, and heads of great business houses were actually enrolling their entire staffs in the interest of larger efficiency.

Baden-Powell Enthusiastic

THE famous General Sir F. Maurice, describing it as a "system of mind drill based on scientific principles," urged its adoption by the army. General Sir Robert Baden-Powell and Admiral Lord Beresford indorsed it. In France, Flanders and Italy over 100,000 soldiers of the empire were taking Pelmanism in order to fit themselves for return to civil life, and many members of the American Expeditionary Force were following this example.

Well-known writers like Jerome K. Jerome, Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch, Max Pemberton, the Baroness Orczy and E. F. Benson were writing columns in interpretation of Pelmanism. Great editors like Sir William Robertson Nicoll and educators such as Sir James Yoxall were going so far as to suggest its inclusion in the British educational system.

As a matter of fact, with many who took the training, the thing had all the force and sweep of a religion. It went deep into life, far down beneath all surface emotions, and bedded its roots in the very centers of individual being. It was an astonishing phenomenon, virtually compelling my interest, and I agreed gladly when certain members of Parliament offered to take me to Pelman House. A growing enthusiasm led me to study the plan in detail, and it is out of the deepest conviction that I make these flat statements:

Pelmanism can, and does, develop and strengthen such qualities as will power, concentration, ambition, self-reliance, judgment and memory.

Pelmanism can, and does, substitute "I will" for "I wish" by curing mind wandering and wool gathering.

It is, and I say it advisedly, an important and necessary addition to American education, for it takes fundamental truths out of the back water and brings them back into real life and every-day use.

Viewed historically, Pelmanism is a study in intelligent growth. Twenty years ago it was a simple memory training system. Time has broadened it. Today it does not confine itself to the training of just this one function of the human mind, but scientifically exercises and developes all of the mental powers.

The founder of Pelmanism had an idea. He went to the leading psychologists of England and also to those of America, and said: "I have a good memory system. I think I may say that it is the best. But it occurs to me that there is small point in memory unless there's a mind behind it. You gentlemen teach the science of the mind. But you teach it only to those who come to you. And few come, for psychology is looked upon as 'highbrow.' Why can't we popularize it? Why can't we make people train their minds just as they train their bodies? Why can't you put all that you have to teach into a series of simple, understandable lessons that can be grasped by the average man with an average education?"

Not a Mere Memory System

AND the eminent professors did it! Pelmanism today is a known course in applied psychology, a course that will build mind as a physical instructor builds muscle. There is nothing really new in it. All of its truths are as old as the hills. But it reduces these truths to practical use. It puts them into harness for the doing of the day's work.

It teaches how to develop personality, how to build character, how to strengthen individuality. Instead of training memory alone, or will-power alone, or reasoning power alone, it recognizes the absolute interdependence of these powers and trains them together.

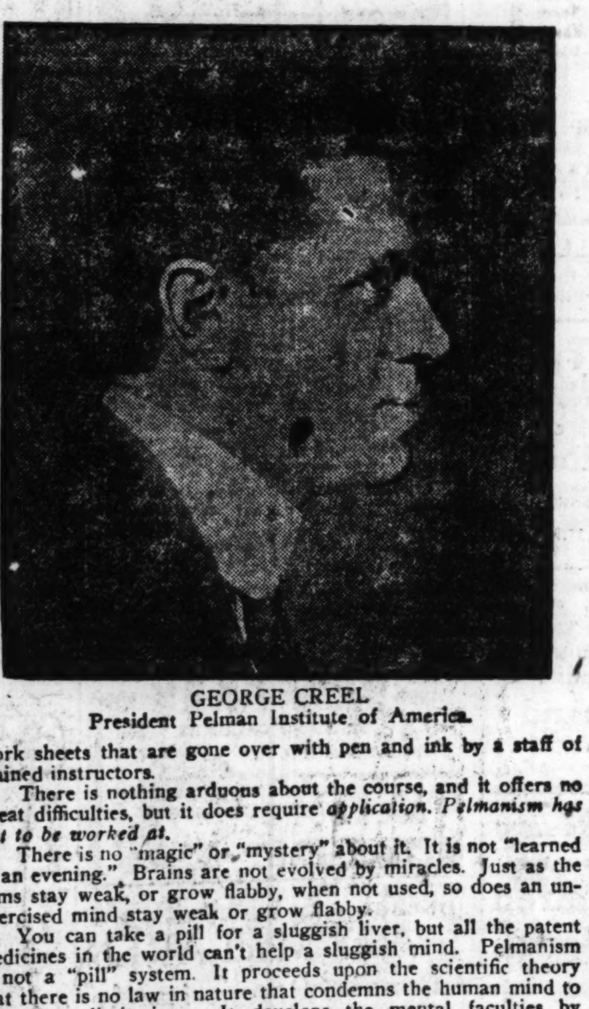
It is not, however, an educational machine for grinding out standardized brains, for it realizes that there are wide differences in the minds and problems of men. It develops individual mentality to its highest power.

The course comes in twelve lessons—twelve "Little Gray Books." They are sent one at a time and the student fills out work sheets that are gone over with pen and ink by a staff of trained instructors.



GEORGE CREEL
President Pelman Institute of America.

There is nothing arduous about the course, and it offers no great difficulties, but it does require application. Pelmanism has got to be worked at.

There is no "magic" or "mystery" about it. It is not "learned in an evening." Brains are not evolved by miracles. Just as the arms stay weak, or grow flabby, when not used, so does an unexercised mind stay weak or grow flabby.

You can take a pill for a sluggish liver, but all the patent medicines in the world can't help a sluggish mind. Pelmanism is not a "pill" system. It proceeds upon the scientific theory that there is no law in nature that condemns the human mind to permanent limitations. It develops the mental faculties by regular exercise, just as the athlete develops his muscles. It gives the mind a gymnasium to work in; it prescribes the work scientifically and skilled educators superintend the work.

The "Little Gray Books" are intellectual dumbells.

Pelmanism is going to advertise in America just as it advertised in England. I believe in advertising. As much as any other one thing, it helped to win the war. The bang of the Salvation Army drum did not cheapen religion but aided it. Advertising is the one direct method, and the quicker Pelmanism reaches the men and women of America the better it will be for the country.

The Science of "Get There"

IT is the science of Get There—getting there quickly, surely, finely! Not for men alone, but for women as well. Women in commercial pursuits have the same problems to overcome as men. Women in the home are operating a business, a highly specialized, complex business, requiring every ounce of judgment, energy, self-reliance and quick decision that it is possible to develop.

I say deliberately, and with the deepest conviction, that Pelmanism will do what it promises to do. Followed honestly, it will give greater power of self-realization and self-expression in word, thought and action. It will stop wool-gathering and mind-wandering. It will develop mind, character, personality, giving ambition, energy, concentration and self-reliance.

Americans need it as much as England needed it. There are too many men who are "old at forty;" too many people who complain about their "luck" when they fail; too many people without ambition or who have "lost their nerve;" too many "job cowards" living under the daily fear of being fired.

Original thinking is almost a lost art. We look at games instead of playing them. The less the mental demand the more popular the play. There is music in restaurants because it is too much trouble to talk intelligently. Life is cut to pieces by deep ruts, with the people in them never looking over the sides. Greater driving force and higher powers of concentration will add to the nation's assets.

There is nothing more true than that success and failure are next-door neighbors. The success of today may be the failure of tomorrow, and the inefficient can rise to efficiency when he wills it. No one can mark time in modern life, much less stand still. We go forward or drop back.

Increased Incomes

TALK of quick and large salary raises suggests quackery, but I saw bundles of letters telling how Pelmanism had increased earning capacities from 20 to 200 per cent, With my own ears I heard the testimony of employers to this effect. Why not? Increased efficiency is worth more money. Aroused ambition, heightened energies refuse to let a man rest content with "well enough." Business demands ever-increasing efficiency and employers are quick to recognize it and reward it.

But Pelmanism is bigger than that. There's more to it than the making of money. It makes for a richer and more wholesome and more interesting life.

Too many people are mentally lopsided, knowing just the one thing or taking interest in only one thing. Of all living creatures they are the most deadly. I have seen eminent scholars who were the dullest of talkers; successful business men who knew nothing of literature, art or music; people of achievement sitting tongue-tied in a crowd while some fool held the floor; masters of industry ignorant of every social value; workers whose lives were drab because they did not know how to put color in them, and I have heard men and women of real intelligence forced to rely on anecdotes to keep up a conversation.

The emphasis of Pelmanism is on a complete personality. It does away with lopsided development. It points the way to cultural values as well as to material success. It opens the windows of the mind to the voices of the world; it puts the stored wealth of memory at the service of the tongue; it burns away the stupid diffidences by developing self-realization and self-expression; it makes unnecessary the sterotyped in speech and thought and action.

Pelmanism, in effect, teaches how to spend the gold that is in the purse of life, not merely the copper coins. It considers life as a rich and expansive whole, not as a collection of unrelated fragments from which the individual must make his choice.

One may utilize Pelmanism as a means of achieving some immediate purpose—financial, social, educational or cultural—but the advantages of the training touch life and living at every point.

Note:—As Mr. Creel has pointed out, Pelmanism is neither an experiment nor a theory. It has stood the test of twenty years. Its students are in every country in the world. Its benefits are attested by hundreds of thousands of men and women in all walks and conditions of life.

In bringing Pelmanism to America, the needs of the United States have been considered at every point. Plan, methods and principles remain the same, but American psychologists have Americanized the lessons and American instructors, who are fully trained in the course, will pass upon every work sheet.

Pelmanism is taught entirely by correspondence. There are twelve lessons—twelve "Little Gray Books." The course can be completed in three to twelve months, depending entirely upon the amount of time devoted to study. Half an hour daily will enable the student to finish in three months.

As there is no royal road to learning, neither is there any short cut to the truths taught by Pelmanism. An ordinary school education is necessary, but of prime importance are sincerity of purpose and willingness to work. Its rewards are rich, permanent and of steadily increasing value, but they are won by application.

How to Become a Pelmanist

"MIND AND MEMORY" is the name of the booklet which describes Pelmanism down to the last detail. It is fascinating in itself with its wealth of original thought and incisive observation. It has benefits of its own that will make the reader keep it. Every reader of this page should send for "Mind and Memory"—Now.

Just What a HOT SPOT Chalmers Saves on a Cold Day

MOST cars are hard to start on a cold day. There is a notable exception in the Hot Spot Chalmers.

It responds to the pressure of the starter button, "warms up" quickly and runs at a high point of efficiency in a few moments.

It saves many things on a cold day:

1. Your battery
2. Your gas
3. Your time
4. Your temper

Hot Spot and Ram's-horn provide cold weather efficiency. They "crack up" the gas, rush it to the cylinders before it can condense, and "warm up" the engine in quick time.

Let us explain to you just how these two magnificent devices do the work. Once you understand them your admiration will grow stronger for a Hot Spot Chalmers.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT.

By Mae Tinee.

BESSIE BARRISCALE, a blonde lady with ideas of her own, comes forth to announce that much of the evil in the world is due to the fact that people breathe so badly. She says that proper breathing improves the circulation, complexion, and eyes; gives optimism, a keener sense of duty, courage, poise, and self-confidence.

"Many a man or boy or girl is bad," says Miss Barriscale, "because they don't breathe properly. This lack has done more to fill jails, hospitals, insane asylums, and poor houses than almost anything else."

Which may be going it a little strong, but just the same gives something to think about.

When Dorothy Dalton's in New York she constitutes herself a sort of unofficial critic on all "first nights" at the movie theaters and wires a report of how the pictures are received to the producers in Hollywood. They say that Miss Dalton is one of these truthful critics who dares be unpleasant to be honest and while sometimes her reports are hard to get they're implicitly believed by the recipients anyhow.

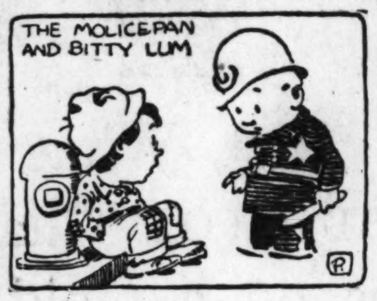
One of your screen favorites whose name begins with "M" sends me the following exquisite little verse, asking me if by any chance I wrote it:

"Once a pig molicepan,
Saw a bitty-lum,
Sitting on a surbcone,
Chewing gubber rum.



THE MOLICEPAN AND BITTY LUM

'Hi!' said the molicepan,
'Will you sim me gome?'
'Tinny on your nintype,'
Said the bitty-lum."

I have been guilty of much in the eyes of the law, but not of this. If you chance to know the author I ask you to tell me who it is so that I may tell "M." Also you may guess who "M" is if you care to.

Were you wondering how Nazimova obtained her "Brat" costume? Here's the explanation as it's been given to me: She said she'd gone all over Los Angeles looking for just the right thing when she discovered the raiment she coveted being worn by a young girl who came to the Metro studios to apply for a job. "One glance at her clothes showed me that they were precisely what I sought for the Brat," says Nazimova. "I spoke to her and told her so. She was so scrupulously neat, the pathetic dress had been brushed until it was almost worn through. I told her that her appearance at the studio was a godsend to me and suggested that we make a little exchange of clothes. So I gave her a pretty dress for the one she was wearing and everybody was happy."

Pauline Frederick advocates reserving seats in motion picture theaters. "In the first place," says Miss Frederick, "movie fans would be better patrons than they are now. They could eat their dinners, knowing that they wouldn't have to hurry to beat the rest of the world at getting seats at their favorite movie theater. It will not be long before the intelligent picture fans will refuse to enter a theater in the middle of a production. They will demand to see the picture through from the start.

You have, of course, noticed in pictures starring Billie Burke how the light seems to linger lovingly on her hair. Well, that light doesn't just happen to do so. I have it on good authority that Miss Burke refuses to begin a scene unless her halo is all lit up. Furthermore she says it isn't just because it looks good but that the effect of the light is extremely stimulating on her brain cells.

"Give me light on my head,"
Miss Billie Burke said.
"Not that I would shirk,
But it makes my brain work."
(Harder than it would otherwise.)

Florence Vidor and her husband passed through Chicago the other day en route to New York. Mr. Vidor, who directs his wife in most of her pictures, gets quite excited over the subject of studio "street sets." He says they're passé, unnecessary, and all that. With all the streets in the United States he declares producers should certainly be able to find what they want without faking.

MUSIC AND THE MUSICIANS

Musical Affairs in Berlin at Low Ebb During War

By W. L. Hubbard

INTERESTING first hand information concerning musical and living conditions in Berlin during the final year of the war was had in a talk last week with Frantz Proschowsky, who has just returned to Chicago after some ten or twelve years spent in Europe.

Mr. Proschowsky, who as a young student was a protégé of Mme. Nordica, was for a considerable length of time active here as singer and teacher, then went to Europe, where, after study in Paris and Milan, he located in Berlin, appearing there as soloist but later devoting himself entirely to teaching. His pupils included not only the Americans who flocked thither in pre-war days but also students from his own country, Denmark, from Russia, from Australia, and from Germany, France, and Italy.

When war was declared he tried to return at once to Chicago, but his stay had been two years longer in duration than the United States permits its foreign born citizens to remain abroad and passport was refused him. Only in September, 1918, was he finally enabled to leave Berlin for Copenhagen and then had to remain there an entire year in order to establish his Danish citizenship so that passport could be granted him for return to America. He now is in Chicago, as he declares, to remain, and as an American citizen, to reëstablish himself here as teacher.

Musical conditions in Berlin during the final year of the war were at low ebb so far as creative activities were concerned, according to Mr. Proschowsky's report. Nothing of real value along the lines of opera, song, or instrumental music was created, since many of the composers were busied in the war itself, and general conditions were of course not conducive to composition.

The one operating sensation of the year was an opera called "Palestrina," composed by Pfitzner, which was presented at Munich but could not be done in Berlin owing to the excessively high music written for the tenor, and which was out of the reach of any of the soloists at disposal at the Royal Opera house. In it Gregorian music is contrasted with modern and the general opinion seems to be that Pfitzner is destined to be Richard Strauss' rival and possible successor in the opera world.

Songs and orchestral works were so few as to be negligible, Hans Heermann being about the only song composer who remained active and whose songs enjoyed greatest favor. The repertory of the opera and the concert rooms had, therefore, to be made up from the old and standard works. German operas and songs were, of course, predominant, but the old time Italian arias were heard in recital, while at the opera houses Verdi, Donizetti, Rossini, and Bellini were used, but nothing by the modern Italians, Puccini, Mascagni, and Leoncavallo being strictly barred. The entire French school was also taboo, save for the Gounod "Faust" and Bizet's "Carmen," and nothing of French song literature was used except the old time.

So the enemy line was as closely drawn musically in Germany as it was in France or Italy, reports to the contrary notwithstanding. And, of course, even the old time operas used were sung in German translation. Russian music and Russian songs were extensively cultivated, however, especially after the downfall of Russia, and every effort was made to show public interest and admiration for that country and its people and art.

The patronage accorded the opera and concert was invariably liberal, the public clearly having to have amusement. Prices remained same as before the war, opera tickets ranging from [illegible]0 pfennigs to 10 and 12 marks and the concert prices being not above 4 marks. The performances started an hour earlier than before, however, commencing at 6 or 6:30 and only one-quarter of the usual amount of light was permitted in auditorium or on the stage.

The most popular singers of the concert world were Claire Dux, soprano, and Josef Schwartz, baritone, both of the opera, the favor they enjoyed being such that the Wolff bureau, the leading concert agency of Berlin, guaranteed them 120,000 marks a year.

Miss Dux is at present not in Berlin, she having determined to get to America and be freed from Berlin conditions. Prevented by the authorities from leaving, she secured an aeroplane and flew to Copenhagen, but is held there unable to return to Germany since she has broken her contract at the opera and unable to come to the United States since she can get no passport.

Franz Vescey, remembered for his appearance in this country as a youth, is now the violinist favorite there, having given ten recitals in Berlin alone during the last year.

Josef Lhevinne, who was heard with the Chicago orchestra week before last, was held as a Russian citizen and kept at his summer home in a Berlin suburb. He was permitted to circle all around Berlin, but dared not enter the city limits. Neither was he permitted to leave the country and it was only after having written to Emperor William himself that he was allowed to start for Copenhagen and thus get to New York.

Of living conditions, Mr. Proschowsky also had facts to tell. Throughout the entire last year that he was in Berlin he lived chiefly on turnips which war prisoners were made to plant and cultivate, and which, therefore, were plentiful. Potatoes were scarce and extremely costly. One-half pound of beef was allowed a person a week, but this allowance was only for alternate weeks, the meat being followed the second week by a half pound of bones. The weekly allowance of butter was two ounces, two pounds of sugar had to suffice for a month, coffee and tea were unobtainable save by the wealthy, who could get it after it had been smuggled from Holland or Denmark, but only at the rate of 100 marks a pound. Bread during the last year was made of heather, the leaves, blossoms, and roots being ground and used. Only two loaves a week were allowed a person.

CURTIS TIRES
—HAND-BUILT—

The old cobbler, in his machineless shop, who sews a shoe by hand—is unwittingly a pioneer of industry. We know a hand-made shoe outlasts the shoes made by machines. The patient care the cobbler puts into his work of hand, the careful shaping of each part soon tells the tale: economy. And similarly in tires; when tires are hand-built, it's possible to work into their form a strength, a lasting quality, which gives more miles.

So Curtis Tires all are built by hand.

When you buy a Curtis "Hand-Built" you cut down your tire expense, and Curtis "Hand-Builts" cost no more than tires which give fewer miles.

ART

High Standards Maintained in American Exhibit

By Eleanor Jewett

THERE opened at the Art institute on Thursday the thirty-second annual exhibition of American oil paintings and sculpture. The exhibition is installed in the galleries of the east wing, and, going from room to room, one feels a pleasurable surprise as the realization strikes home that the months of war, through which the artist world as well as the practical has passed, have not detracted from the creative powers of our painters.

There is work here representative of men from all parts of the country. Nor is Chicago talent dumb. One finds old friends in plenty among the names on the catalogue.

Jessie Arms Botke has one decorative canvas showing a placid, silver swan on a deep blue lake framed in trailing green boughs.

"The Sea," by Frederic M. Grant, is a delightful thing, possibly more beautifully composed than his sea-gull painting of last year, yet like it in the taking of these screaming, flashing white birds for its main theme. In the former canvas the cliff that set the birds in relief shared with them the interest of the composition. In the present picture the gulls suffer no competition. The bird flock forms a pinnacle of sharp, fluttering pinions scaling the sky from the pasture land of water below.

"Still-Life," the other painting by Mr. Grant, is a gorgeous flower design, differing from, yet alike to, the decorative panels that made such a charming feature in the recent exhibit of the Ceramic association.

Gerald A. Frank shows a spirited fantasy, "The Hillside," which in the green light that plays over it and the dancing figures which play in it is a true sister to the paint dreams of his that last winter made a gay wall at the Arts club.

To my mind the most striking painting in the entire exhibit is "The Conspiracy," by Wayman Adams. It is a large canvas showing three men engaged in an earnest conversation on a street corner. I was reminded at once by the similarity of treatment of the portrait of Joseph Pennell shown last season by Mr. Adams—the portrait that won the Logan prize of $1,500. "The Conspiracy" includes Pennell among the conspirators. But it is not because one recognized him in the group that the earlier portrait comes to mind. It is more, I think, because of the broad sweeping use of pigment, the same in both cases, and because of the general atmosphere of black and white, out of door, unfettered circumstance that embraces the three as it did the individual.

By all odds the most delightful portrait shown is that of "Aunt Patsy," by Dixie Selden. Aunt Patsy is a colored lady of uncertain years. Her hair is white, her face is wrinkled, and her expression is beaming. She is a mammy from the days of "befoh de wah" plantations. Against her white hair the soft white frills of her cap lie tenderly. Her best black waist she is wearing with a stiffly starched apron and snowy ruffles at the throat caught by a gold bow. In her hand is a cane. Over her shoulders a shawl snuggles. But it is not in these material details that the delight of the painting lies. That is found in the broad, blunt, shining features and the smiling eyes through which the spirit of the old fashioned guardian of the white massah's children burns.

By Dixie Selden is another excellent portrait—that of Frank Duveneck—and a gay street scene, "Mountain Hill, Quebec."

Lack of space forbids further detailed mention of the various pictures today, but during the next week or so this neglect will be remedied.

There were a number of prizes offered in this exhibition and the following paintings were awarded them:

The Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan medal, carrying with it $1,500, to "Leo Ornstein at the Piano," by Leon Kroll.

The Potter Palmer gold medal, carrying with it $1,000, to "When She Was a Little Girl," by Lilian Westcott Hale.

The Norman Wait Harris silver medal, with the sum of $500, to "The Line Storm," by Frederick J. Waugh.

The Norman Wait Harris bronze medal, with the sum of $300, to "The Barracks," by Robert Spencer.

The Martin B. Cahn prize of $100 to "The Silent Sentinels," by Frank V. Dudley.

The twenty-seventh annual exhibition of the Atlan Ceramic Art club opened also on Thursday, at the Art institute. In the gallery in which the exhibit is arranged there is all the glitter and luster heart could desire. It seems remarkable that so much beauty could be fashioned from potter's clay. The history of the club and its aims, as told in the catalogue, are of sufficient value to be repeated here:

> Many years ago this club, following the suggestion of the Art institute of Chicago, started the use of conventional ornament on porcelain surfaces, convinced that it was the correct form of decoration for china.
> This effort was made not as individuals seeking a novelty for their work, but as a club unit to raise the standard of china painting to what might properly be termed legitimate ornamentation.
> To quote an eminent eastern art authority, will briefly state our present standing: "The Atlan club has certainly established a new form of china decoration for the United States; their work is far ahead of anything I have ever seen done here and compares favorably with the best of Europe."
> Another authority, who had watched our progressive work, said, years ago: "Your club has certainly succeeded in presenting a new and beautiful form of ornament, and the public has accepted it; I see no reason why it should not become an established American style of decoration for china."
>
> To preserve this high standard, the exhibiting membership has been limited to a comparatively small number, with an art critic at each meeting.
> There is also a large associate membership who may or may not paint; they have equal opportunities for assistance in design and color, and the additional benefit of a winter class in the study of historic and miscellaneous ornament one day each week.
> The object of this free class is to extend the educational influence of the club to all who are not already identified with the study.

Among the members who are exhibiting articles are Mrs. A. C. Ayer, Frances A. Barothy, Mrs. A. A. Frazee, Mrs. C. A. Gale, Mrs. Frances M. Lowes, Glennie Mosely, Mrs. Bertha J. Park, Mrs. Anna Senge, and Mrs. Le Roy T. Steward, who has a fascinating series of twelve tiles.

At the Palette and Chisel club is an exhibition of paintings by George A. Leupold and J. C. Doemling, which bring to you the wonderful coloring of the Ozarks.

The Arts club began its winter season yesterday with the placing on view of a number of early American portraits and miniatures.

At the Artists' guild the following prizes have been awarded in the competitive exhibition: The Fine Arts building prize of $100, to Miss Matilda Middleton, on lamps, $50; Charles A. Herbert, on decorated leather and wood, $25, and Mrs. Anne T. Brown, $25, on luster glass and china. Honorable mention, to Mrs. A. A. Frazee, on her decorated china.

WARNING TO TRAVELERS

Few of those who are planning winter vacation tours or business trips realize the situation which they will find confronting them.

Travel is very heavy. Those who are not thoroughly posted regarding present conditions little suspect the difficulties they will encounter when they attempt to secure railroad, steamship and hotel accommodations.

Just as a competent traffic manager is necessary—especially in these times of freight congestion—to route freight shipments with greatest dispatch, safety and economy, so the services of our experts are invaluable in saving travelers annoying delays and unnecessary expense.

We are thoroughly familiar with conditions on all railroads, all steamship lines. We know even how far ahead it is necessary to reserve rooms at the hotels at which you should stay—wherever they are. We know what are the best hotels. We can secure steamship, railroad and hotel accommodations when you would be unable to do so.

Our service is of interest to every traveler. If you are thinking about one of those wonderful trips to the West Indies—the Panama Canal—that never-to-be-forgotten Caribbean cruise, one of our personally escorted parties will make sure that your pleasure trip is a pleasure trip. From the moment you leave your home, every detail will be arranged for you. You will see the things worth seeing. And you will have plenty of time to see them, because not a moment will be wasted in seeing things not worth seeing, in tiresome waiting for boats or trains or accommodations. Every detail of the trip will move as smoothly as a well-oiled machine, because it will all be arranged for you beforehand, by men who are experts—men who "know the ropes."

Or, if you are planning a vacation trip alone, or with your family, to California and Hawaii—Florida, Cuba, Europe, China, Japan, South America—T. & S. Service will insure the smoothness and pleasure of your trip—will protect you from needless delays, annoyances, loss of time, "holdups."

We shall be glad to give you full information about T. & S. Tours and T. & S. Service. Stop in at our office in the Western Union Building, or call us up. We'll be glad to tell you all about it.

ASTRONOMY

PERSEUS AND ANDROMEDA.

So the story goes, there was once a king of Ethiopia named Cepheus. He ruled his kingdom wisely and well, but he had one fault, if fault it could be called. He and his wife Cassiopeia, idolized their beautiful daughter Andromeda so much that they forgot to pay the proper respect to the gods.

This angered Jupiter exceedingly, for he had shown Cepheus many favors, and he resolved to punish the king. A great sea monster was therefore created, called Cetus. This terrible dragon was large enough to bite a ship in two, and it ravaged the coast of Ethopia far and wide. Populous cities were reduced to ruins and the once fair countryside was made a desert.

In desperation Cepheus consulted the oracles to know what to do. Through them Jupiter revealed the one plan that would save the country. Andromeda, he said, must be taken out on the bleakest cliff on the whole sea front and then chained down, to be lashed by the waves of the sea, and at last to serve as a feast for the monster when he should make his daily visit.

With sad hearts Cepheus and Cassiopeia led their daughter out and chained her to the bare rocks on the cliff. Seeing this, Jupiter lashed the sea into a fury and sent a terrible storm to dash upon the coast. Through the lightning and the rain the horrified watchers on the shore saw the monster appear and come writhing landward to sate his unholy hunger.

But now something happened. Perseus, the hero who had just slain the Gorgon Medusa, was winging through the air on his flying sandals. On one arm he bore his mirror shield and in his hand he bore the bleeding head. It will be remembered that Medusa was so horrible to behold that one sight of her would turn a person into stone, and for this reason no one could approach her to kill her. Perseus got around the difficulty by polishing his shield until it was a mirror, and by watching her reflection he got close enough to cut off her head without once looking her in the face.

Seeing the terrible commotion in the water, the charging serpent, and the chained maiden on the shore, Perseus swooped down to enter the fray. And not a moment too soon! Cetus, cutting the waves in great white swirls, was upon Andromeda, his fangs bare and his eyes gleaming green. Another second and she would be eaten. Perseus sprang down and with a shout held the horrible face of the Gorgon fairly before the eyes of the monster. With a groan Cetus stopped, turned over, and sank—for he had been changed to stone.

Perseus released Andromeda, they say, and the two lived happy ever after. Now, this story may be true or not, just as you think, but all the people concerned in it are in the sky, even Medusa the Gorgon, and you can see them tonight if you will just take the trouble to look.

THE CONSTELLATION OF PERSEUS

A Ballad of the Beaten Path

By Guy F. Lee.

I know a guy who starts to work
  Right on the minute every day,
No single hour does he shirk,
  He even regulates his play,
Though skies be bright, or skies be gray,
  He's safe aboard the reg'lar boat—
Perhaps he has his fun, but hey,
  I would not care to live by rote.

I've seldom known this bird to lurk
  A second over schedule—say
He'd bust a gallus if he'd jerk
  A jigger off his programmed sway;
The clock's his creed; to it he'll pray
  In work or pastime. Faithful goat!
He's my idea of a jay—
  I would not care to live by rote.

Existence at its best doth irk,
  There's very little in it gay,
The different stuff alone will perk
  It up, and make the darn thing pay.
O, woe is he who has to stray
  Along the self-same path, and tote
The self-same load! For me, nay, nay,
  I would not care to live by rote.

I'm for iconoclasm's bray,
  The jangled and the tangled note;
I court the offshoots on life's way.
  I would not care to live by rote!

ESSEX MOTOR CARS

The Essex Satisfaction

It Comes from the Ability to Out-Perform Others and in the Knowledge That It Is a Fine Car Even Though It Is Not Large

That Is Distinctive

One thing we can't forget in buying a motor car is the pride of ownership.

The automobile is a pleasure vehicle and it spoils the fun to be hopelessly outrivaled by a car that is smaller and cost less to buy.

And for the same reason there is a lot of satisfaction in having a car that, though it is small and its cost is less, does outperform all of its class and has few rivals among the large, costlier automobiles.

That Is Why You Hear So Much of Essex

Anyone who has ever driven much knows that the greatest delight, where speed is concerned, comes with the ability to best a rival with extra bursts of speed. It is the situations which show a car's ability to out-perform others that give greatest cause for pride.

And knowing that the Essex does excel most cars, even many that are larger and that cost more, there is little wonder owners speak of it as they do.

Essex Quality Didn't Just Happen

The Essex performs as it does because it is built to the highest type of car standard. Its size and price has meant no sacrifice in quality, durability or comfort.

Every construction detail is comparable to one of the world's most famous fine cars.

That is why the Essex is so speedy, so nimble and so enduring. It is why everyone knows it as an utterly different car than has ever been offered. As well attempt to judge the capacity of a man's brains by the size of his hat as to determine what the Essex can do merely by its type or size and the fact that it sells for only a little more than other cars whose limitations you recognize.

Note the Advantages of Such a Car

The Essex is not a large car, neither is it tiny. No space is wasted. No extra weight is used. Neither passengers or driver are crowded. They have plenty of room on the seats and for their legs. The size of the Essex gives it many advantages, including moderate cost and operating economy. And think how much more convenient to drive. It slips through traffic that a larger car can not negotiate. It can be parked in space that others can not squeeze into. It turns in a short radius.

So Don't Forget This Fact

The Essex in every particular, save in price and weight, is comparable to cars that cost much more. And it possesses the further advantage in economy that comes from its lighter weight.

Remember, 18,000 owners are telling of more good qualities about it than any Essex salesman can tell you. Essex owners will advise you to buy an Essex in either the five passenger touring, the sedan or the roadster models.

On Secret Service —in Mexico

BY DR. PAUL BERNARDO ALTENDORF.

[Late agent A-1 in the Military Intelligence Department of the U. S. Army.]

ARTICLE 7—COLONEL IN MEXICAN ARMY.

THE "Palace" proved to be a large two story barnlike structure of light colored brick set a little back from the street on a plot of bare ground. A flight of about six steps led up to a wide double door standing open. Two sentries paced to and fro on the street in front.

Within the entrance, which was indescribably filthy, was a captain who immediately called the guard, consisting of thirty soldiers clad and equipped like the samples outside, to receive us with military honors. This ceremony over, we ascended a broad flight of uncarpeted wooden stairs to the second floor. There were no carpets anywhere; the furniture was of the cheapest quality, and the floor had apparently never been scrubbed. Everybody chewed tobacco and spat at random.

At the head of the stairs was a very large anteroom in which Calles' staff, consisting of some twenty men, were busily chewing tobacco and doing clerical work in a desultory way.

Meets Gov. Calles.

A tall, gaunt man with red nose and bristling mustache opened a door leading into an inner room and, shifting his quid of tobacc to permit utterance, announced us. After a wait of two or three minutes we were told to enter.

Gov. Calles was standing beside his desk, a cheap roll top affair, to receive us. He is about six feet one inch tall, heavily built, erect and dignified, with iron gray hair, a close cropped mustache, piercing brown eyes, a thick nose, a large head and a quick, nervous manner. His way of speaking is pleasant enough for those in his confidence; for all others he has a harsh, gruff voice.

Calles greeted Schwiertz effusively; Auch cordially. Then, turning to me, Schwiertz said:

"General, let me introduce Capt. Dr. Altendorf, whom I wired to you about."

Greeted as "Valuable Man."

I acknowledged the introduction with a military salute, which pleased Calles greatly After a brief conversation about nothing, such as is usual under the circumstances, Calles remarked on my perfect Spanish, whereupon Schwiertz remarked:

"Yes, and he almost looks like a Spaniard, although he is a German-Austrian. He will be a very valuable man here."

As it was almost 12 o'clock, our brief interview ended with an appointment for myself alone with Calles at 3 o'clock. Just as we appeared at the entrance on our way out a score of soldiers in blue overalls, sandals, and big straw hats, without coats, but with an abundant accumulation of dirt, and armed with long, straight brass trumpets, began a furious fanfare. I thought it was intended in our honor, but Schwiertz said no; it was the regulation thing whenever the governor arrived at or left the palace. The uproar, which could have been heard for miles, was kept up for about five minutes.

Discuss American Invasion.

Promptly at 3 o'clock I presented myself at the palace and was received by Gov. Calles alone. He was very cordial; offered me a cigaret and then settled back for a comfortable chat.

I observed that he was very nervous, to which he replied that he supposed he was overworking himself. It was arranged that I should see him professionally at as early a date as the matter could be arranged, and then the conversation turned to the coming drive against the United States. I asked Calles if he thought we could get men enough together to make a successful invasion of the United States.

"O, yes; we have enough men," he replied. "With the assistance of experienced German officers we can put the men in the field. We Mexicans are not afraid of the United States. We have very brave men, but we need good leaders. We have some German officers here and we are promised more from South America. We are not short of money, as Germany is supplying us. We have enough food. We can get almost enough munitions from Germany in submarines to Spain and thence by Spanish vessels.

Counted on Captured Supplies.

"By breaking up the mines here we can get enough steel to make whatever additional rifles and the like we may need. I myself have built a little shop where we repair rifles. Mexico now has an arsenal turning out fifty rifles a day. I suppose we could do more if we had the raw material. But we are counting on capturing American guns and thus obtaining large supplies. Above all, we know positively that the Mexicans and Germans in the United States will join us and that is enough to insure victory."

The interview ended by Gov. Calles conferring upon me the rank of colonel in the Mexican army. He personally handed me the insignia for cap and coat. When I told Schwiertz of my appointment he was delighted.

"I told you that we Germans and the Mexicans are one," he exclaimed.

Schwiertz and I had a long talk with Calles the next day, in the course of which the latter handed me $100 for expenses. I happened to step to a map on the wall and make some casual inquiry about the Yaqui country, which prompted Schwiertz to volunteer my services in planning a campaign against the Yaquis.

Fake Strategy Goes Wrong.

Calles seized at this proffer so eagerly that I had no alternative but to start right in on an impromptu dissertation on the proper strategy for a campaign. Heaven only knows how I could have struggled through if I had not chanced to remember having read an account of the battle of the Marne. I began to explain, covering up the poverty of my knowledge by a generous flow of language, how it was that Von Kluck had been beaten and pointing out the similarity of Foch's strategy to that which would bring the Yaquis to terms.

Calles was so impressed that he stopped me while he called in Gen. Gomez and Col. Garcia of his staff and had me begin all over again. Gen. Manjo was called in and ordered to go immediately to La Misa to carry out my plan. He did so and lost sixty men killed without accomplishing anything whatever. Fortunately Calles laid all the blame upon Gen. Manjo.

After my plan of campaign against the Yaquis had been disposed of it was arranged that I should go to El Claro, there to coöperate with Maj. Schwiertz.

A Tryout for "Jones."

Meanwhile I was very desirous of opening up some means of communication with the American military intelligence department on the border. I had been keeping a watchful eye on Friend Jones all this time, and at last felt convinced that my original impression of him must be correct. Watching for a suitable opportunity when I knew Schwiertz would be engaged with Calles I eluded other prying eyes and contrived to meet Jones out in the country about two miles from the town.

We began to discuss my pretended deal whereby I was to sell some of Schwiertz's plunder to Jones at a reduced price, each watching the other narrowly and studying every word and look. At last I made up my mind that it was safe to take a chance.

"See here, Jones," said I. "Do you know anybody at Nogales, Ariz., connected with the American military department? I have some rather important business up there, and as I cannot go myself I should like to ask if you will not act in my person."

Coward or Patriot?

Jones looked at me intently while tears gathered in his eyes. I drew my revolver, and, pointing it at him, exclaimed harshly:

"See here, Jones, men do not cry. Are you frightened? If you are a coward, you might as well be dead as alive."

"No, doctor, I am not a coward. My emotion overcame me for a moment because I now know you for an American secret service agent, and I can understand from what I have seen since we have been traveling together that you have some important information to be forwarded."

"Are you a secret service agent?"

"No, but I gave up my business to help the United States. Put up your pistol. There is no occasion for all this gun play."

"I will put it up when you have sworn to be loyal to the United States and to me"

The oath was taken. Then, to impress Jones more strongly with the weight of his debt to me, I told him briefly of Schwiertz's plot to lure him and Edelman out and murder them, and warned him not to let the major think that he had any important sum of money at any time.

Plan to Fool Major.

"Mr. Jones, you will leave tomorrow on the passenger train at 1 o'clock for Nogales, Ariz., where you will hand this parcel over to the United States military intelligence department. Return on the next train to Hermosillo and stay here fooling Maj. Schwiertz while you wait for further instructions from me. I am going to El Claro with Schwiertz, and no doubt will soon have some more information for you."

We returned to town by different routes without arousing suspicion. The third day after our arrival at Hermosillo Schwiertz, Auch, and myself left for El Claro, which is about twelve miles west of Santa Ana, the nearest railroad station, which is fifty miles north of Hermosillo.

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

THESE HERE, NOW, STRIKES.

They say the street car birds can strike
And make a whole darn city hike;
Because they have a grief or two
Tahel with me, tahel with you.
And should we poor befuddled mutts
Get all the kicks and uppercuts
While they and their employers fight,
They say it serves us goobers right—
Well, mebbe so,
I dunno.

I'm told that all the railroad guys
Can strike and make us walk the ties
Or die like rats for lack of food
If one should speak to them too rude.
And it is right as right can be
Because we're, as you might say, free
But if such birds can leave us flat,
Are we so doggone free, at that?
Well, mebbe so,
I dunno.

The miners take their lamps and picks
And walk right out and leave us hicks
To freeze to death unless each geek
Gets ninety-seven bucks a week;
Perhaps 'tis right that this is thus,
That we should freeze while they discuss.
But if it's true the people rule,
The people—he one dam beeg fool!
Yes, sir!

Two Kinds of Economy in the Post-War Maxwell

More miles per gallon
More miles on tires

THE Post-War Maxwell inherited from its 300,000 predecessors two traits that captivate the person who likes continuous, uninterrupted, comfortable and low cost mileage.

One is its freedom from repairs. It runs on and on. Give it gas, oil, grease and water and it will deliver an amazing amount of mileage.

The second is the low price you pay per mile. Its thrifty engine makes gas go a long way. Its 2000 pounds of weight assures long tire wear.

Such kinds of economy came from years of study and the experience which 300,000 previous Maxwells have taught.

The notable improvements and refinements to be found in this car have caught the attention of many who figured that high efficiency meant high price.

The public has served notice that it does appreciate value.

That is why 40,000 persons will have to go without a Post-War Maxwell this year though 100,000 are being built,

Tested 250,000 Miles Three-Point Cantilever Springs Greatest Improvement Since Pneumatic Tires

OVERLAND 4 has been put through the most thorough and severe test possible.

250,000 miles of mountain trails, desert sand, heat, cold, mud and dust, demonstrated the quality of every part of the car long before we began manufacturing.

This remarkable test showed conclusively that Three-Point Cantilever Springs, exclusive with Overland, are the greatest improvement in riding comfort since the introduction of pneumatic tires.

They protect the car from road shocks and prolong the life of every part.

They enable the wheels to hold better to the road. They give greater comfort under all road conditions.

They do away almost entirely with side sway and rebound which twist and rack the car.

Diagonal attachment of the Three-Point Springs at both ends of a 130-inch Springbase gives the steadiness and smooth riding of the heavy car of long wheelbase.

Equipment is complete from Auto-Lite Starting and Lighting System to Marshall Divan Spring Upholstery.

MOTORDOM

"Farm-to-Table" Week, Nov. 15-22, to Lower Prices

City Motorists and Farmers to Co-operate on Knocking H. C. of L.

BY JOHN L. SPELLMAN.

IT'S up to American motorists to come to the rescue of thousands of tons of farm produce. Vast supplies of apples, potatoes, onions, beets, cabbage, squash, pumpkins, and other perishable foodstuffs are now in the hands of farmers. Tons and tons of it will rot and spoil for lack of time and transportation to markets and shipping centers, unless outside help and facilities come to aid the farmer.

"Farm to Table" week, Nov. 15-22, has been designated by the automobile industry for a nation-wide demonstration of the readiness and willingness of city motorists and the farmer to get together in relieving the acute situation. The idea is enthusiastically supported by hundreds of automobile and accessory manufacturers, car and tire dealers, and by scores of women's clubs, chambers of commerce, automobile clubs, and state granges.

"Motor to the country and fill your market baskets," is the slogan adopted by the allied combatants of H. C. L. From reports received from various "Farm to Table" headquarters, literally swarms of autoists will take the road during the week. So pronounced has been the indicated response on the part of car owners, leaders in the movement are taking steps to inform not only the farmers along the beaten highway routes and paved roads, but as well the farmers along the small country lanes and out of the way roads. Knowing that prices are apt to be lower on the less traveled roads, and the supplies just as plentiful, thousands of car owners are expected to explore farther than the usual routes.

"Farm-to-Table" week has many attractions for the city car owner. Aside from the feature of reduced prices of butter, eggs, fruits, and vegetables there are other benefits. He can make his motor car more efficient. There is the element of recreation presented by a short tour into the country at a time when the country roadsides and fields are ablaze with autumnal colorings. Also there is the item of health. A trip in the brisk, snappy November temperature is certain to impress the city man with the importance of more frequent and longer trips during the fall and early winter season.

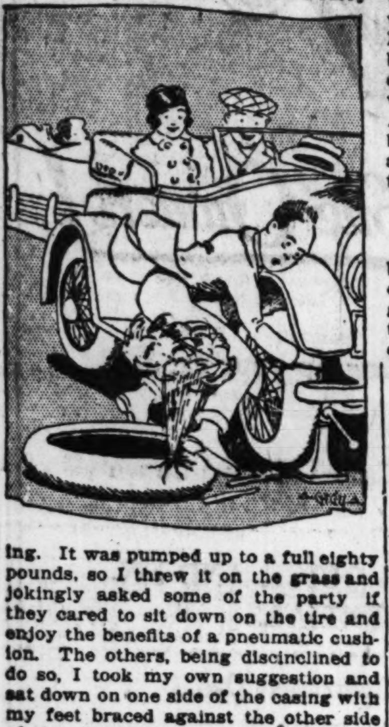
"Farm to Table" week is a 50-50 proposition. The farmer furnishes equipment consisting of a roadside market and a blackboard or sign listing his wares and reasonable prices for same. The motorist's equipment is his automobile and a few hours' leisure time.

Nov. 15-22 has tremendous possibilities. A majority of America's 3,000,000 city motorists are expected to take advantage of them Likewise thousands of farmers will be benefited by this vast coöperative program.

MY FUNNIEST MOTORING EXPERIENCE

A Rising Cushion.

Having had a puncture, it became necessary to change tires, so I took off the extra tire which we were carrying. It was pumped up to a full eighty pounds, so I threw it on the grass and jokingly asked some of the party if they cared to sit down on the tire and enjoy the benefits of a pneumatic cushion. The others, being disinclined to do so, I took my own suggestion and sat down on one side of the casing with my feet braced against the other side of the rim and casing.



All went well until I pushed on the rim with my feet, when unexpectedly the tire blew out with a loud report. It blew out right between my feet, and I, amid a cloud of dust ,was thrown off and away from the tire, landing about three feet from the tire, much to the amusement of the crowd.

Needless to say, I was too badly shaken up to see any humor in the situation, and did not at all join in the mirth of the others. F. S. Z.

Safety First.

My cousin having bought a new car, took my mother and I for a ride. We were out in the country quite a ways when we met a pretty country maiden. My cousin, of course, kept his eyes busy on the girl. He also lost control of the car, ran into a farmer's wagon with a load of apples just ahead of us. Apples flying all around, we sure did burst out laughing; but my cousin had a nice time picking up the apples for the farmer. E. L.

How About It?

One day this summer I was driving between the street car tracks and the curb and a milk wagon in front of me, going the same direction but in the track, all of a sudden the driver pulled out of the track and in front of me, I certainly had to jam the brakes to prevent hitting his horse. When I regained my breath, I told him in a nice way: "You always should put your hand out in advance of turning, as a signal," when he exclaimed, in a German accent: "How kin I put-en my hand out ven I got a line in each von hand to drive mit." DORT
Quality Goes Clear Through

An outstanding and impressive fact about the Dort is that the testimony of one owner varies but in the slightest degree from what another owner has to say about the excellence of the car.

What difference there is can be fairly credited, we believe, to a difference in the care of the car or conditions under which the car was operated.

The essential thing to consider and remember is that the skill and soundness with which the Dort is built is bearing fruit in the shape of trouble-free travel at a very low upkeep cost.

You can confidently expect to secure from your Dort the same fine and faithful quality of service that thousands of other owners are now enjoying day in and day out.

HYDRAULIC GEAR SHIFT
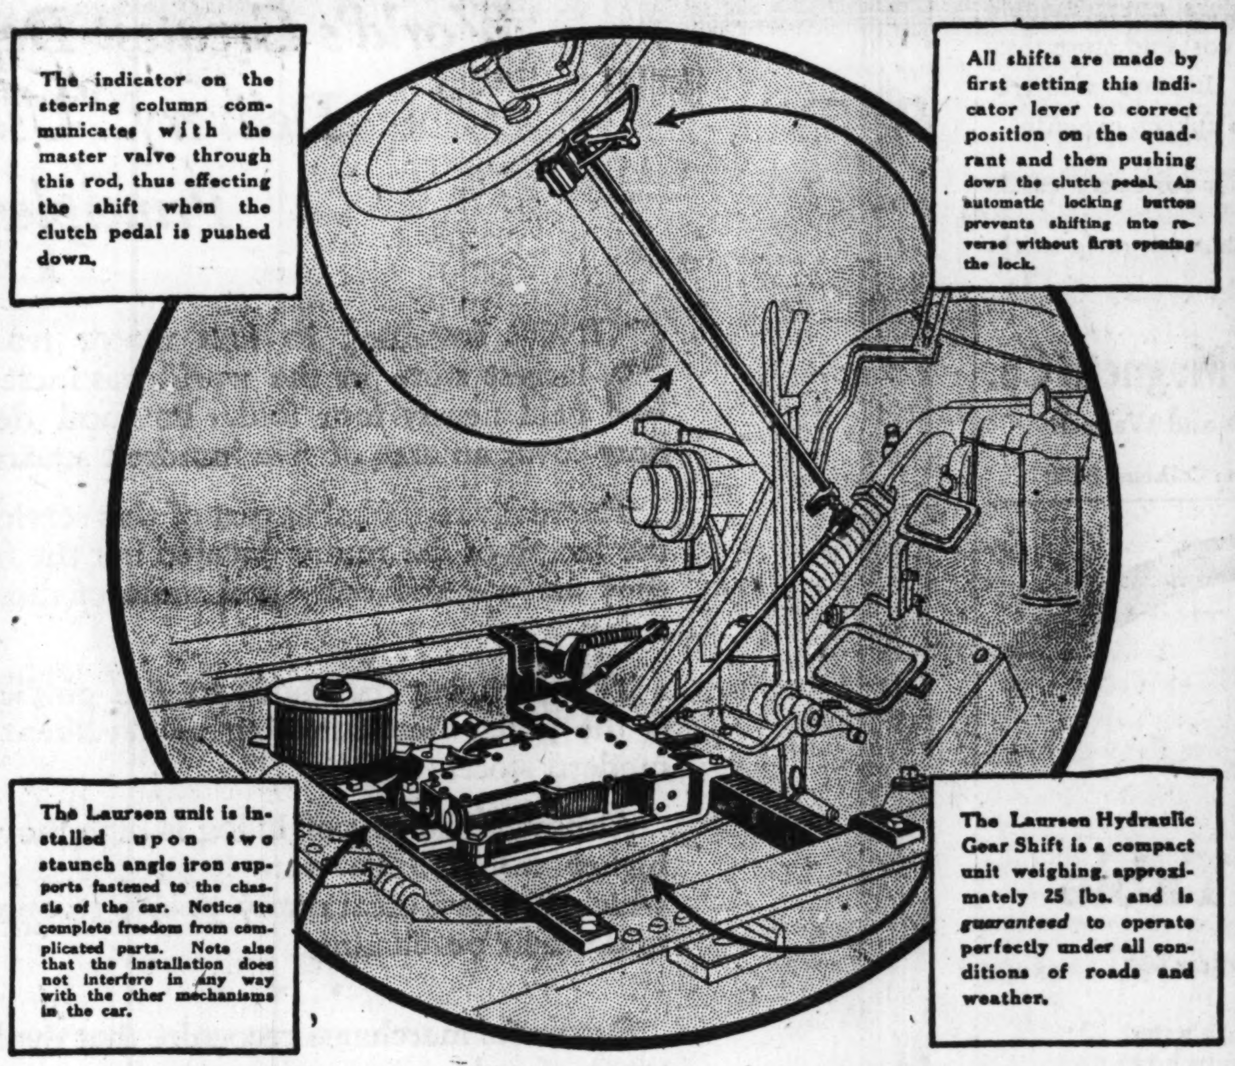
"The Motor Cars Supreme Refinement"

Discards the Gear Shift Lever—enables any one to drive a gas car with the greatest ease and confidence. Can be installed on any car of selective drive transmission without interfering with any mechanical or electrical equipment of the car.



The indicator on the steering column communicates with the master valve through this rod, thus effecting the shift when the clutch pedal is pushed down.

All shifts are made by first setting this indicator lever to correct position on the quadrant and then pushing down the clutch pedal. An automatic locking button prevents shifting into reverse without first opening the lock.

The Laursen unit is installed upon two staunch angle iron supports fastened to the chassis of the car. Notice its complete freedom from complicated parts. Note also that the installation does not interfere in any way with the other mechanisms in the car.

The Laursen Hydraulic Gear Shift is a compact unit weighing approximately 25 lbs. and is guaranteed to operate perfectly under all conditions of roads and weather.

DEMONSTRATIONS DAILY
At 2715 Michigan Avenue

Come in, motorists, and investigate this marvel of engineering skill that marks the final step in motor improvements.

The LAURSEN HYDRAULIC GEAR SHIFT is on exhibition at our store, 2715 Michigan Avenue, where also it is installed on cars for demonstrating purposes. We invite motorists who own cars of selective drive transmission to see this simple, compact and efficient unit shift gears with a positive noiseless action that never fails. It is a refinement you will want on your car before you've been out five minutes with our demonstrator. And remember, the LAURSEN HYDRAULIC GEAR SHIFT has been tested by America's most eminent automotive engineers, is GUARANTEED FOR THE LIFE OF YOUR CAR, and there's a MILLION DOLLAR COMPANY back of the GUARANTEE. Installations will be made promptly according to priority. Get your order in early.

Out-of-Town-Motorists—send for our illustrated booklet.

Ten Reasons Why You Will Want a Laursen Hydraulic Gear Shift on Your Car:

1—It gives you automatic gear shifting—you indicate the change of gear by a touch of your finger, then push the clutch—that's all.

2—Removes the last barrier to perfect driving joy—the work and nervous strain of shifting gears by hand.

3—Makes your gas car as easy to drive as an electric.

4—Removes the gear lever permanently.

5—Enables two or three persons to occupy the front seat, comfortably, without interfering with control of the gears.

6—Absolutely prevents gear stripping—a thing always possible with hand shifted gears, and the constant fear of beginners.

7—Prolongs the life of your car by eliminating guesswork in making a shift, and the consequent grinding wear and shock to the transmission and co-ordinating parts.

8—Reduces possibilities of accidents by enabling you to have the use of both hands for steering and emergency action.

9—Increases your interest in driving by enabling you to anticipate changes of speed and make them quickly when necessary.

10—Because this latest refinement in motor car operation is absolutely guaranteed for the life of your car.

"Guaranteed for the Life of the Car"

The Gas Car Becomes a Woman's Car—the Laursen Hydraulic Gear Shift Has Made It Possible

Every man who owns a motor car knows that wife or daughter is keen to drive. Yet note how few women drivers there are. Any automobile demonstrator can tell you the reason why. It is because of the skill required in shifting gears by hand, woman's natural timidity in attempting a mechanical operation, and her consciousness of disaster if the shift is not done rightly. This barrier to the universal driving of gas cars by women is now removed.

The LAURSEN HYDRAULIC GEAR SHIFT makes the gas car as easy to drive as an electric. It is so simple a child can operate it. It is so safe the most timid women take the wheel with confidence.

Men, you know your wives and daughters are not enjoying the car to the extent anticipated because they do not drive it. Will you deny them that great pleasure—and your own, as well—when it is so easily and quickly obtained by the installation of this unit that adds a million joys to motor driving?

Take This Advice to Avoid Trouble on Hard Starting

Cold Weather's Effect on Auto Engines Can Be Overcome.

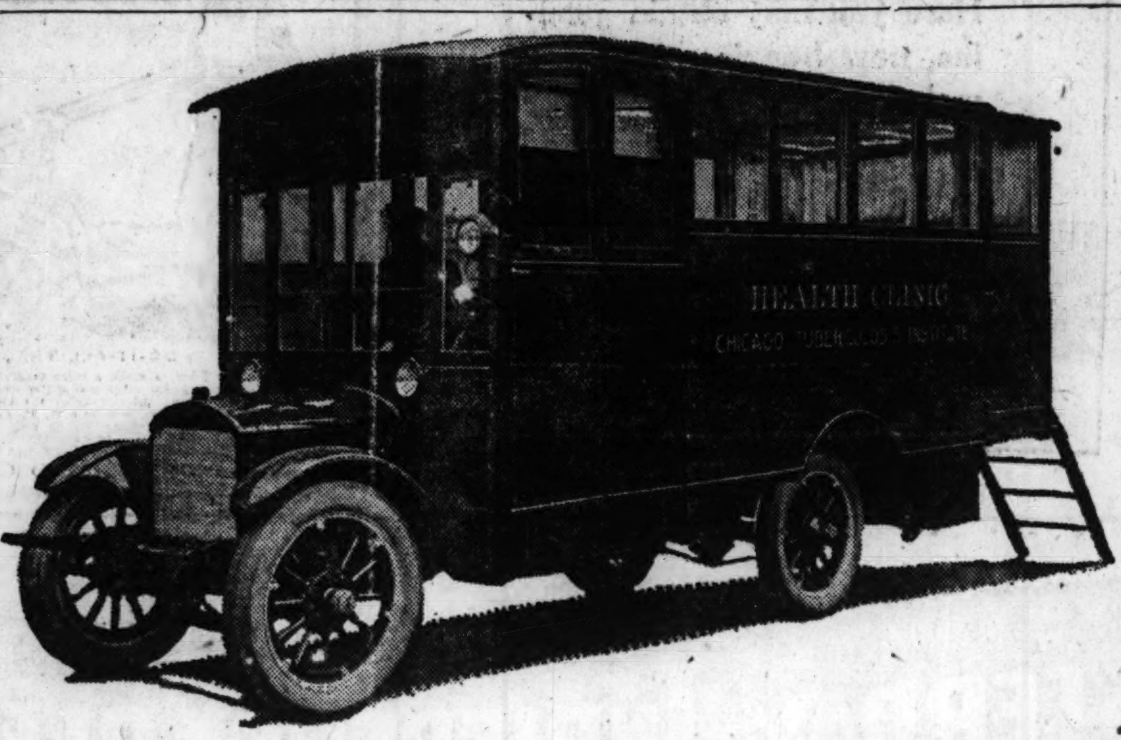
BY HIGH SPEED.

IN cold weather gasoline does not vaporize as it does in higher temperatures, resulting in all sorts of engine troubles from hard starting to lack of power. As gasoline gets colder it becomes, we might say, thicker or heavier, and then instead of flowing freely through the nozzle of the carburetor it has difficulty in getting through at all, especially on starting up. In order to make the action clear, imagine the gasoline to be as thick as mucilage. The latter cannot be forced through a very small opening such as a carbureter nozzle and formed into a fine spray. It might be forced through, but it would run down the sides of the nozzle or be pushed into the manifold in the form of drops. Cold gasoline does just that.

On starting a cold engine on these days of poor (heavy) gasoline even on a moderately warm day it is necessary to apply the choke. This is done in order that a large amount of gasoline will be drawn through the nozzle in the hope that in that large amount there is enough of a volatile nature to get into the combustion chamber and explode. It is for the same reason that you prime the engine through the petcocks or a special primer. You introduce into the combustion chamber a comparatively large amount of fuel the greater part of which is so heavy that it will not vaporize even with ordinary heat applied. The remainder, though a small portion of the whole, forms a sufficiently large volatile volume to start an explosion, which is all that is necessary. The trouble with priming and with keeping the choke applied is that it wastes fuel and also lets into the engine a quantity of gasoline which does no work, in fact it is harmful, if we may say the production of carbon and oil contamination are really harmful. The gasoline that does not vaporize does not all go out through the exhaust. Some of it does, but much burns with a flame and deposits carbon. Some also flows down the sides of the pistons and gets into the crank case, where it mixes with the oil. Both conditions are not the best for the engine, and of the two the oil dilution is the worst. The oil is thinned and weakened, hence lubrication of the entire engine is impaired.

The owner can overcome some of these difficulties by making a few changes and observing certain facts. First install a primer, but instead of using ordinary gasoline use a mixture of gasoline and commercial ether. This gives firing immediately, providing the spark is good, and avoid using a large quantity of fuel to get initial firing. Secondly, avoid keeping the choke applied longer than necessary. So much for getting started. After the engine is started, it should run at such a temperature that the fuel will be vaporized before it gets into the combusion chamber. This does three things: It saves fuel, gives more power, and keeps the engine clean. The same results practically are had if the fuel is preheated enough and kept so until it reaches the cylinders.

The market now affords various devices for heating the gasoline either for priming or for normal running, or both. The electrically operated primers will be found to be especially desirable, as they heat the gasoline by causing it to pass over a red hot coil made so by battery current. Fuel preheaters in constant operation may be of the electrical or exhaust type. The latter are more economical and if properly regulated are perfectly satisfactory. Hot spot manifolds tend to produce the same effect, but the manifold must have a reasonably large size heated area before it will show good results.



AUTO EFFECTIVE IN THE FIGHT AGAINST TUBERCULOSIS—The automobile not only is a picturesque factor in Cook county's fight against tuberculosis but it is the one that is doing the most good. It has "delivered" so effectively that the Chicago Tuberculosis institute hopes, through the annual sale of the famous Red Cross Christmas seals this year, to raise funds enough to buy another one. The institute's Cook county "traveling clinic" is the only one of its kind in the country. It travels a regular route through the county towns, carrying the message of hope to the patient's very door. It is a completely equipped clinic, including dressing rooms and folding beds, and is accompanied by a physician and nurse. It was suggested originally because of the fact that, although tuberculosis can be both prevented and cured, there are many victims who for one reason or another will not go to a doctor. So the automobile takes the doctor to the patient. This health truck is financed solely through the sale of the little seals, to be used on envelopes and packages during the holiday season. The Chicago public knows the seal, but it is not so familiar with the fact that the pennies contributed for the seals have made possible the only "traveling clinic" in the country, and that this automobile has carried its message of deliverance from the dread white plague into many homes in Cook county that otherwise would not have escaped the horrors of tuberculosis.

County Promises Early Start on Good Road Plan

BY a majority of 71,386 votes the Cook county voters last Tesday approved a program for further "pulling the county out of the mud."

This was the approval of the $5,000,000 bond issue for good roads. It is estimated that 154 miles of hard surfaced roads and eight new bridges can be built with this money. The funds will keep the county highway department going on new work for about two years, when the state will take up the good road program provided by the $60,000,000 state bond issue of nearly a year ago.

The county's program is comprehensive. A start on it will be made early next spring, as soon as the construction season opens. A large portion of the work will be under way before snow falls next winter.

700,000 Trucks in U. S.

There are 314,029 motor trucks in the twenty-four states which make a separate tabulation of commercial vehicles, according to statistics just gathered by the B. F. Goodrich Rubber company. The balance of the states make no distinction between passenger cars and trucks in their registration records, making a national total impossible to compile. However, it is estimated that the grand total will reach more than 700,000. This is based on average estimates for all states which keep no record of trucks. Among the states with heavy truck registry are: New York, Illinois, California, Iowa, Indiana, Minnesota and Missouri.

You can't make any storage battery last forever—that's a fact.

You've got to keep it filled with water and test it, just like a tire has to be kept filled with air, or it will cost you money.

Some day—if you have an ordinary battery—it's sure to have to be re-insulated, no matter who made it.

But—if you'll buy a Willard Battery with Threaded Rubber Insulation, you'll get clear away from the biggest cause of battery troubles. The insulation will probably last as long as the plates.

Drop in and ask us any question you can think of. We're here to give you the kind of help, service and advice that make friends.

Packard Delivery Serves Public and Pays Merchant

World's Greatest Department Store Built Business on Delivery. Uses Packard Transportation Principles and Packard Trucks

SINCE installing its first motor truck, the largest store in the world has increased its field nearly four fold. Its local deliveries now cover an area of five hundred square miles.

The really remarkable part of this service is not the length of the routes covered but the fact that they are covered daily and some of them twice a day.

This bringing the goods to the public's door is the great merchandising achievement of the modern store.

Although the cost of living is high, how much higher would it be were it not for the system which brings a great many people to one centre to do their purchasing?

* * *

Successful merchants recognize that the Public's sense of values is very acute. Any element of service in their business must be run with the greatest economy so that it takes its proper place in the cost of merchandise.

The rule for economical delivery service is to haul the maximum number of packages and tonnage with the minimum of equipment.

Compliance with this rule gives cost of upkeep and length of life precedence over first cost of truck.

More Packards than ever are being selected for this work. Perhaps because there is little guess work about selecting a Packard.

Packard facts and figures are established and are constantly being amplified by tests in every transportation field.

In this delivery field especially the importance of having one high standard for the whole Packard truck—and building every part in the Packard factory in order to keep it—is recognized.

The one outstanding fact about Packard trucks is their consistency of performance—as evidenced in the records of department store Packards, many of which have gone over two hundred thousand miles.

* * *

More study has been given department store delivery than to any other phase of truck transportation. Yet even here the Freight Transportation Department of the Packard organization in your city can help by keeping figures up to date. Call upon them. No charge for service.

Gossip of the Auto Trade

JAMES RAYMOND GIBSON has gone with the Packard Chicago branch as assistant adertising manager. He recently returned from France, where he was in the aviation corps.

Announcement was made by the Kokomo Rubber company, Kokomo, Ind., of the appointment of Earl P. Logan as director of sales. Mr. Logan is one of the younger automobile tire sales executives who have come into notice rapidly with the expansion of the tire industry. The new sales manager's past activities have been in the south and middle west, where he is widely known.

Fifty per cent of the Haynes 1920 production will be closed cars. The company claims that the demand for closed cars is growing daily. The appointment of J. A. Benell as assistant general manager also was announced by the company.

The annual convention of the American Tire Filler Industry, Inc., will be held at the Congress hotel, Nov. 15 to 18. Practically all the manufacturers of standard tire filler belong to the organization.

A "movie" called "The Road to a Better America," was displayed by the White company at the beverage exposition. This showed the need of better highways.

The Chicago Oneida Truck company will soon have a new home. This is at Twenty-third street and Wabash avenue, where a new building is being completed. The service station of the company is to give day and night service.

Albert H. Zimmerman is the new vice president, treasurer and general manager of the Supreme Motors company of Warren, O.

This is the best time of the year for motoring, said Louis Geyler. He said there was no season like Indian summer for the motorist.

Harry Unwin, manager of the Chicago Reo branch, reported that his "Help Hail Hoffman" service plan was working fine. Hoffman calls on Reo owners and checks on the operation of their cars.

The Swinehart Tire and Rubber company just completed an "experience canvass" from the Chicago branch.

Harry Lansdale and G. L. Guyman have joined the Mercer company.

M. J. Moore has been made secretary and treasurer of the La Fayette Motors company.

John N. Willys, president of the Willys-Overland company and the Willys corporation, pointed out that these are separate organizations.

Grant C. Nicol is now Chicago manager for the Garford Motor Truck company. He succeeded George Crane, who resigned.

Arrangements are being made to have the automatic steam carburetor distributed in English colonies.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS by HIGH SPEED

I have a Buick car, model E-49, 1918. I have heard of the steam method of removing carbon by injecting small quantities, or rather drops, of water into the carburetor. How would you proceed to do this? Is this method advisable? While washing the car one time water accidentally got into the valve cages. On running the engine about two minutes after the water entered the cages the engine coughed and then raced at high speed, ejecting a mixture of steam and smoke. Would this be harmful? Could this be used to remove carbon?

The transmission of this car operates very noisily and is in fact annoying. Low, reverse and second all emit growling, rattling noises but shift smoothly. The teeth do not seem to be chipped. The oil is always kept fairly thick, but is not of the consistency of grease. How would you remove the noises if they can be removed?

ALBERT COHN,
Chicago, Ill.

Steam and water injection into the manifold of an engine does not remove carbon. Regardless of the fact that manufacturers are spending large sums of money in advertising to the effect that their various steam injection devices do remove carbon, these are merely claims.

Recently at the bureau of standards in Washington there was concluded a lengthy and rigid series of tests for the investigation of the steam injection problem. It was found that steam and water injection in various quantities, from a few drops per horse power per hour to quantities sufficiently large to stop the engine, had no noticeable effect on the disposition of carbon.

Water is one of the most stable compounds known to a man. The affinity between oxygen and hydrogen is so strong that only two or three ways are known by which it is possible to separate water into its component parts. Because of this great affinity between these elements, hydrogen and oxygen, it does not seem logical from a chemical standpoint that the oxygen in the water will become dissociated from the hydrogen and join with the carbon to form carbon dioxide.

Regarding the noise in the transmission, it is probable that a bearing at either the forward or rear end of the countershaft in the transmission is cracked or worn excessively. This is indicated by the fact that in low, reverse, and second gears the noise occurs, while in high gear it does not occur.

The Tire Guaranty!
WHAT IS IT ?

THIS is a plain, frank talk on tire guaranties.

It clears up the misunderstanding about the guaranty that misleads many a tire user and dealer.

It shows them how their rights and safety are best secured in the sale of a tire. It means more protection to the user, and a stabler business to the dealer.

Why does a user buy a certain tire? Nine times out of ten because he has been led to expect a certain mileage from it.

Therefore, it is vital that the user understands clearly what service he has a right to expect from a tire.

• • •

DOES the tire guaranty make this clear between him and the dealer? What does it guarantee? Where does it begin, and end? Read and see.

All the leading tire manufacturers, The B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company the same as the rest, guarantee tires with these identical words:

> "We guarantee all Pneumatic Automobile Tires bearing our name and serial number, to be free from imperfection of material and workmanship. • • • •
> • • • • Pneumatic Automobile Tires are not guaranteed to give any definite number of miles."

This guaranty means that if "in the judgment" of the manufacturer usage reveals an imperfection of material or workmanship, the manufacturer will "repair or replace it at his option," adjusting it according to his own judgment; and it means nothing more.

• • •

"BUT how," the tire user very properly demands, "is the adjustment of an imperfect tire made? Where does the adjustment begin?"

To such questions, the guaranty against imperfection makes no specific answer whatever.

But to all these questions, the Goodrich Adjustment makes a specific answer, open handed as Justice. It takes up a tire where the guaranty stops, and leaves no room for misunderstanding, or controversy, between user and dealer.

It says that a Goodrich Fabric Tire, with proper usage, will deliver at least 6,000 miles; and a Silvertown Cord at least 8,000 miles.

• • •

AN imperfect Goodrich Tire is so rare that an adjustment is an immaterial thing to The B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company; but a single imperfect tire to the individual user who gets it is too material a thing to be ignored.

Yet without an adjustment basis, clearly and definitely stated, a tire user with a claim against a tire, goes into a court where there is no law. But the Goodrich Adjustment lays down the law, fair to user and dealer—clear to both.

Thus Goodrich first insures the user against an imperfect tire with the guaranty; then specifies clearly the amount of his insurance with the Goodrich Adjustment basis—6000 miles for Fabrics—8000 miles for Silvertown Cords.

That takes the risk out of the sale of a Goodrich Tire, both for dealer and user. It takes the guess out of its service.

Demand Goodrich Tires of your dealer.

YOU MUST BE THE JUDGE.
IF YOU ARE ONE OF THE TEN MEN YOUR 1920 OPPORTUNITY NOW AWAITS YOU.

What has the war done for you? Is your business better or is it worse? Is what you sell in general demand? Does every one want it? Is there no less than 1,000 qualified prospects in your territory from whose sale by you will net you a minimum of $500 each? Does your present firm create demand to a degree where each salesman has no less than 100 prospects who await his coming? Do your present associate salesmen close more than two sales a week at $1,000 net to them? You say no? Well, I say you are in the wrong place. I say that if you are a real salesman you are not doing yourself full justice.

NOW LET US GET DOWN TO CASES.

I want ten salesmen—ten real men—ten men who have good ordinary ability. Each of these ten men must be honest, hard working, and capable of sticking to the truth. Our commodity is the basis of all life. Any man who is half a salesman can sell it. We want—must have—only those men who will sell in the proper proportion to the purchaser's requirements. To men of this kind—to ten men—we offer a lifetime opportunity. This is worth the time—your time—to investigate. You simply cannot afford to let next week pass by without coming in and going over the details with me or my assistant.

The VOCATIONAL BUREAU RECEIVES
NEW APPLICANTS ONLY MONDAY and
SATURDAY AFTERNOONS or
SPECIAL APPOINTMENT.

COMMON SENSE

will tell you that the individual or company that devotes their time conscientiously to one given proposition will obtain better results than those who try to handle a dozen propositions at one time.

WE HAVE FOUND,

after trying each plan that our present mode of operation is ONE HUNDRED PER CENT more efficient because our placing men are NOT INTERRUPTED in their placing work on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday morning, and have ample time to CONCENTRATE ON EACH INDIVIDUAL AND CONSEQUENTLY ARE OBTAINING MAXIMUM RESULTS.

IN FACT,

we have only a SCATTERED FEW from the THOUSANDS OF APPLICANTS that we have received who have not been placed to their entire SATISFACTION. We consider an UNPLACED APPLICANT as a BLOT upon our RECORD, and needless to say no stone is left unturned to accomplish satisfactory results.

OUR ADVERTISING,

you will notice, is devoted to statements about our ORGANIZATION, POLICIES, ETC.—all facts that you should know—FACTS THAT ARE VITAL TO SERVICE. We honestly are performing satisfactorily AND ARE PROUD OF OUR RECORD.

WE DO NOT BELIEVE

in camouflage, false promises, faulty excuses or, in fact, anything except—facts that mean satisfaction, absolutely, to our clients.

ORDERS! ORDERS! ORDERS

We have been asked why we do not list all of our orders each week, and the answer is that, while we always have approximately 500 orders on file, we realize that in the United States there are approximately 5,000,000 positions of the nature that we handle, and there are 5,000,000 men handling these positions, and if we had an order that exactly fitted each man who called upon us it would be necessary for us to have on file at all times, because every man is an individual proposition.

5,000,000

WHAT WOULD YOU THINK OF A DOCTOR WHO HANDLED HIS PATIENTS 5 OR 6 AT A TIME AND GAVE THEM ALL THE SAME MEDICINE BECAUSE HE HAPPENED TO HAVE IT ON HAND, REGARDLESS OF THEIR AILMENTS? FUNNY, ISN'T IT? THINK—THIS BUSINESS IS NO DIFFERENT—you are an individual and should be handled as such and

IF WE DON'T

HAVE AN ORDER ON FILE THAT EXACTLY FITS YOU—WE DON'T TRY TO MAKE YOU FIT THE POSITION—BUT GO OUT AND GET WHAT YOU WANT FOR YOU. DO YOU REALIZE THAT

75 PER CENT

OF OUR PLACEMENTS ARE MADE BY CREATING FOR THE APPLICANT THE KIND OF A POSITION HE APPLIED AND IS BEST FITTED FOR? THINK HARD! THIS IS A NEW IDEA IN VOCATIONAL WORK.

A FEW EXAMPLES
Of Orders We Now Have on File.

And we don't only send you to the positions, but complete all preliminary details, and when you leave our office with an introduction you are 50% placed, because the employer knows your qualifications and is interested in talking to you—and we can tell truths about you that you could not tell yourself.

BUSINESS PERSONALS.

PERSONAL.
FROZEN NORTH vs. SUNNY SOUTH.

We came from frozen North to Sunny South as an all-year proposition. But the experiment has proven unsatisfactory. Winter here is all right. Summer is all wrong. We are going back North. Chicago or vicinity preferred. On account of the high cost of living and the low value of money we would like to double up with a financially independent old couple or widow who have or has a home possibly too large for themselves or herself. We [husband and wife—Protestants] are middle aged, healthy, educated, childless, semi-retired business people; could handle affairs large or small in a satisfactory way, and care for the home. We have purchased a neat little place in the South near the Atlantic ocean, not far from Jacksonville, and could take care of such a couple or widow the coming winter at a reasonable figure. We propose motoring North next April or May. Best of references given and required. Correspondence invited. Confidential. Address W, Pablo Beach, Florida, Lock Box 174.

CALLING YOU

THE FARMING INDUSTRY cannot be paralyzed by strikes, as the farmer now substitutes machinery for labor. The auto truck, automobile, and hard roads all help to make farmers independent and farming more profitable. The farmer today is sending to market by cooperative auto truck express his by-products of eggs, butter, poultry, vegetables, and fruit, of which in former years many a farmer produced only enough to supply his own needs. But nowadays the reduced trouble and expense of hauling things to market leaves an excellent margin of profit for all of the smaller products of the farm. U. S. needs a million more small farmers, and at the rate land is selling now thousands are hearing the call and soon there will be no more cheap land for sale.

THE TIME for you to start is NOW, while the price of this land is still very cheap and the terms very easy. At the present time we have 40,000 acres of hardwood land in Michigan that we are selling for only $15 to $30 per acre on our long time easy payment plan, that enables one even of small means to take advantage of this big opportunity to own a farm home. WE WILL POSITIVELY INCREASE THE PRICES OF OUR LANDS NEXT JANUARY, some of them as much as $5.00 PER ACRE, as our prices now are actually less than the lands are worth. By acting now you will save yourself several hundred dollars on your purchase.

You may get 10, 20, 40, 80, 160 acres, or a larger tract for stock raising, on easy terms. Our free expert farm advisers guide you to success. We loan money to erect buildings and to buy live stock, after the land is paid for. A Michigan law exempts settlers from paying taxes for five years, and our free insurance protects your purchase in case of death. Every safeguard that is the outgrowth of our 20 years' experience is thrown around you.

This land will produce big crops of potatoes, clover, wheat, alfalfa, beans, rye, millet, oats, vegetables, and fruit. The district is well supplied with good markets, schools, churches, hard roads, etc. We offer for sale no swampy or stony land. There are excellent opportunities in poultry, truck, and tree fruits and all products of the garden.

WRITE TODAY for big free booklet. It places you under no obligation whatever. Read it over carefully and then prove the statements you have read by going on one of our excursions and seeing for yourself. We are still running them, and there is still time left for you, if you act promptly, to thoroughly inspect our lands, and thus avoid putting off purchasing for another season, which to many means never, and to those who do buy next season means paying more money. The crops have been largely harvested, but the barns, granaries, and cellars contain ample evidence of bountiful returns, which will be subject to your inspection. Our new Club House has first class accommodations for you and your wives. Our own autos take you over the lands free of charge. Write for full particulars at once. DO IT NOW.

ON TOP

The Chicago Tribune, in the course of an editorial entitled, "DAYS OF WRATH," on Oct. 31, says:

"The boy who sits on the top of the world these days is THE FARMER. He is there. He can go to his dairy for his milk and the kids can gather the eggs. His potatoes are in his bins.

"He is a going concern if the world suspends. The worst walkout is that of the cattle from the field into the corn. The worst lockout is that of forgetting the key.

"Young man, STICK ON THE FARM. There is nothing in the west but bolsheviks and nothing east but labor conferences. Buy a phonograph and a Ford, put in a telephone, get a lot of machinery to do the work, let the cider harden by the insistent process of nature, and thus live, not caring whether Mr. Gompers or Mr. Gary has the world by the tail."

We have farms in six great dairy counties—TAYLOR, LINCOLN, LANGLADE, CLARK, PRICE, and MARATHON. Very liberal terms. No interest charged until April 1, 1920.

In case you find, when you inspect our farms, a light blanket of snow, as may happen now any day, we guarantee that the soil and surface shall be as represented to you. If when you come to take possession of the farm next spring you find soil and surface otherwise, money will be cheerfully refunded to you.

We invite your closest investigation. Look us up through your own bank. Forty years of continuous LOEB-HAMMEL activity in Wisconsin. We are proud of the reputation for responsibility and square dealing which we have built up. We are in business to stay, and we will make every effort to suit you, not only before you have bought but after as well. We now have Wisconsin offices at MEDFORD, MERRILL, and ATHENS. You can reach our farms either on the Soo Line, C. & N. W., or C., M. & St. P.

WE SOMETIMES TAKE DESIRABLE INCOME PRODUCING PROPERTY IN PART PAYMENT, TAKING MORTGAGE BACK FOR BALANCE.

We also sell horses, cows, etc., on very liberal terms. Write today for FREE LISTS AND LITERATURE. Office open Saturday afternoons. No trouble to answer questions. Phone Randolph 5757. Call or write.

CADILLAC CURRENT MODEL 57 PHAETON.

Four passenger; equipped with Kelly-Springfield Cord Tires; painted a Cadillac Blue; the radiator, head and side lamps are in nickel and the wheels finished a natural wood color. It will be hard to duplicate this outfit at our price later.

PIERCE ARROW 6-48, 1917 MODEL.

Seven passenger; powerful, luxurious, high grade car; you could hardly notice that it was ever used. Your automobile worries are over for ten years with a car like this.

CADILLAC VICTORIA, CURRENT MODEL 57.

Seats four passengers comfortably; looks a little different from the regular stock car; it's painted Maroon with all nickel trimmings; has cord tires; one spare; in fact, every appointment to make you feel proud to own it, and at our price it should be interesting.

CADILLAC TOWN LANDAU, CURRENT MODEL 57.

Imagine a Cadillac run only 5,000 miles. You can hardly see it was run at all. Upholstered in velour and the graceful lines of the body give it an air of richness that is characteristic of this type of car. At our price it surely is a bargain.

STUTZ CURRENT MODEL S.

Four passenger; upholstered in tan leather and painted green body and orange color wire wheels; just the type of car that a young couple ought to have, with room for two in back; you'll never wear out a car like this.

PAIGE CURRENT MODEL.

Four passenger with green leather cushions to match the color of the body and it well deserves the phrase "most beautiful car in America"; moderately priced at $1,850.

COLE LATEST MODEL PHAETON.

Four pass.; painted the popular scarlet color. It has only been run about 2,700 miles and has all cord tires and one new spare, with a patent leather tire cover to match the color of car. We also have a six passenger of the same model.

NATIONAL 12, CURRENT MODEL SPEEDSTER.

Carries two passengers comfortably and has a special khaki top with a graceful duck shape back tonneau. Finished a maroon with bright red trimming; five wire wheels, extra tire, patent leather hood straps, tire cover, and she can step some.

MERCER MODEL 22-72.

While it can carry six passengers comfortably, it looks like the four passenger, long, low, graceful looking car. Over rough roads you can pass any of them as if they were standing still and not feel jarred. A car like this we sell very quickly, especially at the price we're asking for it.

HAYNES SEDAN, CURRENT MODEL.

The kind of a car that you can always depend upon for twelve months of the year. Room for seven passengers; upholstered in whipcord and has all cord tires. You should not have to spend a dollar on this car for the next six months. We're offering it at a very close margin.

KISSEL SILVER SPECIAL, LATEST MODEL.

Four passenger; color of the body robin's egg blue; trimmed in Spanish leather to match, with bullet shape lamps, and it's only been run 44 miles. We also have a seven passenger of the same model and can save you plenty.

MERCER ROADSTER, MODEL 22-73.

Roadsters as a rule have only room for two passengers, but this one is a specially designed body with a disappearing back tonneau seat so you could carry four passengers; in fact, the entire outfit was built in very good taste and has every equipment to make it complete.

Perhaps you'd like to arrange to buy a car on a credit plan or trade your old car.

AUTUMN USED CAR SALE

Beginning today, Sunday, November 9, we are offering the following list of used cars at special reduced prices. Each car has been rebuilt and refinished in our own shops, and the work has been done by our own skilled and experienced mechanics and rigidly inspected.

If you are in the market for a thoroughly good used car you will probably find in our large and varied stock exactly the car you want at the price you want to pay—and you can be sure that it will give you splendid value and service for the money. FURS

People who look upon furs as an investment will, as they would with any other well planned investment, investigate carefully all the facts in the proposition into which they are thinking of putting their money. SAFETY will be their first consideration. They do not want to spend their money, and after a few months find that they have made a sorry bargain.

In buying a fur coat one should be assured of full value in return. Value not only in fashion and beauty, but also in service and satisfaction. For this assurance one must look to a reliable furrier with an established reputation for these qualities. Our furs are sold at prices as low as can be charged anywhere for dependable merchandise.

S. CORN CROP THIRD LARGEST EVER SECURED

910,250,000 Bushels; Exceeds Last Year's by 327,000,000 Bushels.

The corn crop of 2,910,000,000 bu is the preliminary report of the government department of agriculture for November. It is the highest return this year and based on huskings. The yield is the third largest crop on record and is of unusually fine quality, being 10,000,000 bu more than suggested a month ago, and 327,000,000 bu in excess of last year, with an increase of [illegible] bu above the five year average.

Yields of wheat, oats, rye, and barley were not reported this month, the preliminary returns having been made in October. They aggregate 2,421,000,000 bu, or 381,000,000 bu short of last year, the wheat crop being 1,000,000 bu more and oats 318,000,000 bu less than a year ago. Taking the five grains, including corn, the aggregate returns were [illegible] bu, an increase of 10,000,000 bu for the month, but a decrease of [illegible] bu from last year, and 236,000,000 bu short of the record of 1915, the big reduction being in corn and oats.

Illinois Corn Crop Short.

In the seven surplus states where the commercial corn crop is raised there is [illegible] bu, or 5,959,000 bu less than last month, and 106,444,000 bu in excess of last year. Iowa leads all states with [illegible] bu, and with all large corn states has a yield in excess of last year, while Illinois, the second largest, with [illegible] bu, is 55,000,000 bu short of last year. Texas exceeds all its records with 208,000,000 bu, compared with 69,000,000 and an average of 131,990,000 bu. The flaxseed crop is a short one and below domestic requirements, being [illegible] bu, or 5,207,000 bu below last year's.

Higher Potato Prices Loom.

A shortage of 48,000,000 bu in the potato crop is an important factor and means high prices. The crop is 352,000,000 bu, while the average for the country is 366,000,000 bu. This is in a measure made up by a sweet potato crop of [illegible] bu, or 3,700,000 bu in excess of previous figures, and 34,000,000 bu above the average.

CASH CORN AND FUTURES BRING LOWER PRICES

Weakness Is Manifested in Market; Oats Are Irregular.

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

Weakness and lower prices for cash corn and futures dominated that market and was reflected in other grains, the close being at around the lowest of the day and week, with corn off 1¾@3⅞c, oats ½c lower for December and unchanged for May, rye ¼@⅞c lower and barley unchanged.

Losses in corn in the southwestern markets were about the same as Chicago, Kansas City leading in weakness. Oats were irregular, Kansas City being unchanged, Minneapolis ⅛@½c lower and Winnipeg ⅛@¼c lower, with 164 cars in. Cash corn lost 10c at the extreme close and oats were unchanged to ½c lower. News and sentiment was more bearish and there was nothing to induce buying except the decline in prices.

December corn finished the week 1⅝c higher, while the other deliveries are ⅜@¼c lower. Oats ½@1½c lower, December leading. Rye ¼@1c lower. Barley 2c lower on December and ¼c up on May. Pork is off 17½c, lard 10c lower to 2½c higher, the latter on January, and short ribs 7½c lower.

Corn Market Weakens.

Scattered liquidation was in evidence in corn, and while there were many sharp bulges due to short covering, the undertone was easy the greater part of the day. At no time were prices as high as the previous day's close, and the finish was well toward the bottom with December $1.32⅝, May $1.26¼, and July $1.25⅛.

The passage of the Edge foreign finance bill by the house was responsible for a rally from $1.34 to $1.35⅛ in December early, but the upturn brought in liberal selling. Sentime was decidedly more bullish, and all classes of traders were free sellers at times. The most effective buying was by shorts and commission houses on resting orders.

Forecast for unsettled weather was more than offset by increased country offerings to arrive, and a material lowering in bids to arrive. An industry offered 6@8c less than the previous day for loaded grain, and sample values were 3@10c lower. Eastern call was very slow, with sales 16,000 bu. Receipts, 114 cars. Government report to be issued after the close was expected to be bearish.

Country offerings of grain increased considerably after the opening and considerable selling of futures by receiving houses was credited to hedging for interior dealers.

Oats Show Fair Strength.

Oats reversed their action of previous days and were as strong as corn was weak. There was heavy and persistent buying by cash houses and also reinstating of long lines of May recently sold out, which with short covering absorbed the offerings on the breaks, and the average of prices was higher after an early dip. At the finish December was 70⅝c, and May 74⅛c, the spread widening ½c.

Seaboard exporters were after cash oats here, and at Omaha and Winnipeg and a good business was understood to have been put through. Country offerings were only fair. Domestic call was restricted by the uncertainty as to the car situation and the break in prices. Sample values showed little change with receipts 97 cars. Shipping sales, 21,000 bu.

Flax Seed Closes Weak.

Flax seed market was decidedly unsettled. Torrential rains have fallen in Argentina and damage is feared. Duluth clearing house refused to clear flax trades at more than 5c above the previous close, which was responsible for a sharp reaction. Duluth closed 11@12c lower; December, $4.65; May, $4.39. Winnipeg 4@7c lower; December, $4.48; May, $4.35.

Rye firmer, with cash ½c higher. No. 2 sold at $1.37@1.37¾. Receipts, 14 cars.

Barley was unchanged to 1c higher, with a better demand. The seaboard reported 200,000 to 250,000 bu sold for export, with a further demand. Spot sales were at $1.25@1.38. Receipts, 34 cars.

Timothy seed unchanged. March, $12.75 bid. Country lots, $8.00@11.25 per 100 lbs. Toledo, 2½c lower; March, $5.75 per bu of 45 lbs. Clover seed unchanged. Country lots, $30.00@47.00 per 100 lbs. Toledo, 15c lower; January, $30.45 per bu of 60 lbs.

Weakness in Provisions.

Provisions declined and closed around the inside with fair losses. There was considerable stop loss selling at times, also good buying of short ribs early. Some of the houses who have been on the selling side of late were good buyers on the break to cover shorts. Ribs were picked up fairly and a good cash demand was reported with sales of 60 lbs averages at $19.50, and 20c was bid for 50 lb averages. Hogs were higher but had little effect. Shipments of lard and meats for the week were 40,063,000 lbs against 40,481,000 lbs the previous week and 34,196,000 lbs last year. Lard shipments decreased 3,000,000 lbs for week. Prices follow:

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

The government report given out an hour and fifteen minutes after the close yesterday made the best showing on corn for the year, 2,910,000,000 bu, a gain of 9,000,000 bu over last month, and compared with 2,583,000,000 bu harvested last year, and an average of 2,749,000,000 bu. Farm reserves of old corn Nov. 1 were 72,263,000 bu, compared with 114,675,000 bu last year and a five year average of 87,277,000 bu. The trade construed the report as bearish.

A majority of the trade were bearish on corn at the close regarding the break of 10c in the cash market with old No. 3 yellow selling at $1.53 for a car or two and new No. 3 white at $1.42, the inside of the day and off 10c from the previous day, as significant. Such breaks on cash corn as occurred at the close are not infrequent at the windup on Saturday, especially when the market for futures is repressed and the trade is strongly committed to the short side. There was nothing to buy corn on except that there has been a loss of more than the advance on the distant futures the last week, while December is only up 1⅝c, as compared with a week ago when the strong upward movement was strikingly apparent. The situation, however, is different from a week ago, as the incentive for the advance has been removed.

Farm reserves on corn, as given by the government report on Nov. 1, are 72,263,000 bu, against 114,675,000 bu last year. With the visible supply there is 73,747,000 bu, against 119,408,000 bu last year. Taking the crop and reserve in all positions, there is 2,984,000,000 bu, compared with 2,702,000,000 bu last year.

An immense short covering was on in oats, the local professionals absorbing the offerings from 71@71½c. After they were through the price dropped 1c from the top. Another feature was the heavy buying of May and selling of December by some of the largest cash and commission houses, which widened the spread from 3 to 3½c. The gossip is that this spread will widen to 7½c. The cost of carrying from December to May is 10c.

Peoria reported 31 cars of new corn left over from Saturday and 24 cars new additional in yesterday. New No. 4 yellow was $1.40, with No. 1 mixed white and No. 2 yellow sold early at $1.57½ and other yellows at $1.57.

The government report does not show the weight of oats as low as the trade has generally counted on, being 31.1 lbs per measured bu, or 2.1 lbs less than last year and 1.3 lbs under the five year average. Wheat averaged 56.3 lbs, or 2.5 lbs short of last year and almost 2 lbs under the average. Barley 45.2 lbs, a loss of 1.7 lbs from last year and 1.3 lbs from the average.

The Board of Trade transportation department calls attention to the recent ruling of the railroad administration necessitating loading of cars to full capacity. The minimum weight on grain product will be approximately 60,000 lbs, except where marked capacity of a car is less, when not less than 40,000 lbs will apply.

Primary receipts of wheat for the season to date aggregate 241,803,000 bu, against 273,520,000 bu last year, and oats 72,983,000 bu, against 121,009,000 bu last year. Receipts of corn since November 1 are 4,963,000 bu, against 8,528,000 bu last year.

Torrential rains have fallen in Argentina, and the wheat crop in the northern section of that country has been damaged to some extent, as the grain was ready to cut. Russell's News says a large surplus in the Argentine will be very helpful in the world's wheat situation as minimum needs of importers are estimated at 675,000,000 bu, which would be difficult to supply without substantial inroads into the carryovers in the southern hemisphere from last year.

An advance of 10@25c in hog prices carried the general average to $15.10 Saturday, $1.90 above the low day the previous week, against $14.95 Friday, $14.10 a week ago, $12.55 Oct. 23, lowest day since February, 1917, and $22.70 July 31, the highest day on record.

Week's hog receipts of 163,500 were largest in nearly five months, yet showed 42,000 decrease, compared with a year ago. Competition Saturday was lively, with local packers the principal buyers. Notwithstanding the sharp advance this week Chicago prices are relatively lower than in the west.

Good Cattle Higher.

Better grades of cattle closed 10@25c higher than a week ago, while the common and in between kinds were generally 20@30c lower. Quality was about poorest of the season, the price range being unusually wide. Closing values for sheep and lambs were little different from previous Saturday with prime lambs quotable around $15.00.

Receipts at Chicago for Monday are estimated at 30,000 cattle, 38,000 hogs, and 35,000 sheep, against 28,082 cattle, 48,435 hogs, and 51,333 sheep a year ago. This week's estimated receipts are 85,000 cattle, 180,000 hogs, and 130,000 sheep. A year ago arrivals of hogs were 210,202, and corresponding week of 1916 receipts were 278,778.

Know Your Investments.

It is a curious fact that investors in general pass by the securities of corporations with whose business they are more or less familiar and choose investments in fields where they have no expert knowledge and probably no real information whatever. The reason is not that they think the securities they understand are unsound, but that somehow the unknown looks more attractive than the known.

An illustration of this is found in the numerous new issues of preferred stocks that have been offered by investment houses this year. Salesmen soon learn by experience not to spend much time in trying to sell the stock of a tire company to men who are in the tire business, or the shares of a shoe company to people who are dealing in shoes. The best market for the bonds of Sweden is not found among Swedish people, and Chinese obligations meet a chilly reception in Chinatown.

Evidently an ancient trait of human nature leads investors into a fundamental error. It is certain that the more an investor knows about his investments the less risk he runs of loss. With complete information he is not likely to select unsound securities, and if he does he can sell them when the first signs of danger appear. Other things being equal, an investment near home is better than one far away, and one in a familiar field is safer than one in unknown territory.

Brief Answers.

C. H., Fairfield, Ia.—The National Oil, dealt in on the New York curb, is a New Jersey corporation having oil lands in Mexico and Texas. It has issued $2,471,049 of preferred stock and $10,555,900 common, all of $10 par. It is paying dividends on the preferred stock. In 1918 it earned $232,037.

E. A. T.—The Buda company earned $614,069 after taxes, interest, etc., in 1918. The dividend on $1,000,000 of preferred stock evidently was covered many times over. Since Dec. 31 last $209,700 of preferred stock has been retired.

COTTON PRICES CLOSE NEAR TOP

New York, Nov. 8.—COTTON—Prices closed well toward the best, with gains of 28@30 points for the day, despite the ginning figures, which were larger than expected. The report was based on returns to Nov. 1, aggregating 6,273,000 bales, compared with 7,777,000 bales last year and 7,185,000 bales in 1917. Traders regarded the Edge bill to encourage exports as a bull factor. Good buying developed on the break and the early losses were easily recovered, despite the weakness in the stock market and the scattered liquidation. Prices follow:

—YOUR "GOOD WILL"

"Good will" may not be a tangible asset to a manufacturer or wholesaler, but he is not likely to make much money without it.

Satisfied customers constitute the biggest element of your "good will"—they are your best salesmen—and draw no commissions or salary.

If you could sell your merchandise for cash, it would give you a great deal more cash-working capital and enable you to do a much larger volume of business, and thus make more selling profits. You could buy closer for cash, or anticipate your bills—thus improving your credit standing and "good will" with your Creditors.

You can sell us your customers' active accounts for probably less than the discount you offer them for cash and reach practically the same results as if they paid cash—and yet accommodate them with credit. You get your cash immediately, and yet maintain your "good will," as you collect the accounts as usual without notice of the transfer to your customers.

Write for our brief rate folder "Bigger Business Builders" or for our representative to call and explain, without obligating you.

Build and maintain "good will" with both your Debtors and Creditors and at the same time make more money for yourself.

A Chicago manufacturer, established 20 years and now retiring, desires a successor to a high class profitable business. Rare opportunity.
Address B A 252, Tribune.

MANUFACTURERS ATTENTION
A Chicago manufacturing and foundry company would like to negotiate for the purchase of one or two concerns which use iron castings in the manufacture of their products, and where the combined lines could be marketed to hardware jobbers, mail order houses and automobile manufacturers by our highly organized sales force which covers the whole country.
Would like to hear from concerns of good standing, producing $200,000 or more yearly.

HEAVY SELLING MARKS TRADING IN N. Y. STOCKS

See Liquidation of Long Accounts as Important Influence at Work.

The New York Times.

New York, Nov. 8.—[Special.]—Heavy selling marked business in stocks today, aimed particularly at the industrial issues which were leaders of the recent advancing movement. At the end of the session a number of the steel, automobile, sugar, and rubber shares were from 3 to more than 5 points under Friday's final quotations.

While the comment of brokerage offices indicated that considerable profit taking was contained in the output of stocks, the more important influences at work were liquidation of long accounts, irrespective of profits or losses, and the operations of short sellers. The unsettlement noted on Friday, inspired by the situation of the credit market, was continued, and it seemed as if bearish sentiment was increased by indications that court proceedings in the miners' strike would be pressed.

Trading Is Nervous.

Trading was nervous in the last quartetr hour and prices gave only slight signs of recovery.

In the cotton market the tendency was upward under a moderate volume of business. Spot cotton sold at New York for the first time at 40 cents a pound. In southern spot markets the quotation for staple for immediate delivery reached 43 cents several days ago.

Outside of the uncertain aspect of the coal strike, the week ended with the business outlook somewhat better than a fortnight ago. Reports from manufacturing and distributing centers indicated in the final days that signs of improving labor conditions were finding some reflection in sales of goods and in plans for future production.

As regards the soft coal situation, sentiment veered to the viewpoint that some sort of agreement would be reached shortly between the government, the miners, and employers which would end the strike.

Contraction of Loans Shown.

The soundness of this opinion, of course, remains to be proved by events this week. The stock market paid much less attention to underlying matters of industry because of the overshadowing influence of bank credit on speculative operations. The record of transactions and prices showed that the speculative load on the long side was lightened somewhat after the federal reserve bank raised its discount rates, and the next few days will doubtless reveal more fully the plans of traders. The clearing house bank statement disclosed a contraction of loans during the week, which was brought about in part by the liquidation of stocks.

Tares and Wheat

Strikes and production are the tares and wheat of the industrial world. Just as the wheat grew side by side with the tares, production will go on and increase, despite the disturbing influence of strikes.

Immense manufacturing operations are necessary to make up the losses caused by the intense destructiveness of the past five years. Those who perceive the need for them, and plan now for greater and improved manufacturing facilities, will share largely in the harvest that is sure to come.

We can help you plan and build.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

NEW FACTORY BUILDING LEADS REALTY MARKET

Barnheisel Building Sale the Only Big Loop Transaction.

BY AL CHASE.

Announcements of new industrial plants to cost $1,000,000 and downwards were so numerous during the week that the only big downtown transaction, the sale of the ten story Barnheisel building and leasehold for a reported price of $650,000, was somewhat overshadowed.

The latter deal was of interest, however, for several reasons. It was the first in some time in downtown Michigan avenue and it marked a total investment in the Barnheisel building, which is at 616-22 South Michigan avenue, 80 feet north of the Blackstone hotel, of $1,320,000. Thomas Dennehy, secretary of Charles Dennehy & Co., wholesale liquors, paid Hetty Green $670,000 for the fee, 80x172, three years ago.

Leased from Hetty Green.

A ground lease was made in 1912 by Mrs. Green to J. D. Murphy for ninety-nine years. Frederick Barnheisel purchased it in 1912 from Mr. Murphy for $105,000 and erected the Barnheisel building. The original lease contained a provision that before the fee should be sold the lessee should be given the opportunity of purchase. It was under this provision that Mr. Barnheisel permitted the purchase of the fee in October, 1916, by Mr. Dennehy through Oliver & Co. At that time Mr. Dennehy was given a thirty day option to purchase the leasehold and building for $615,000, but Mr. Dennehy failed to take advantage of it.

The building has foundations for six additional stories and Mr. Dennehy says he ultimately intends to add them on. Oliver & Co. represented both parties.

Plans $1,000,000 Plant.

In the week's industrial activities the announcement that the Plamondon Manufacturing company is to abandon the west side, after a stay of fifty-nine years, and is to build a $1,000,000 plant at the southeast corner of Western avenue and West Fifty-second street, extending to the Belt Line tracks, attracted most attention.

The Plamondon company, manufacturers of transmission machinery, rounded out their purchases of a 1,100 x200 tract by buying from Mrs. Jeannette C. Plamondon Murphy, widow of Dr. John B. Murphy, of 165 feet in Western avenue, 463 feet south of Fifty-second street, extending back to the Belt Line, for $50,000.

Work has started on a 200x500 one story concrete building, to cost about $250,000, which will be the first unit of the $1,000,000 plant. It will have approximately 100,000 square feet of floor space. The company at present occupies a four story 100x300 building at 24 North Clinton street. Half of its 120,000 square feet of floor space is used for storage.

Big Boulevard Factory.

Another huge industrial plant announced during the week is the $750,000 Wilson-Jones Loose Leaf company two story building to cover 260x360 square feet at the northwest corner of Franklin boulevard and Spaulding avenue. An official declares it will be one of the highest type of industrial buildings in Chicago. Of course, there'll be showers and a restaurant where food will be served at cost, and rest rooms, and various other welfare features, but in addition there'll be a well equipped library in charge of a competent librarian, and a reading room. It is planned to have this open every evening for employés.

The company has outgrown its present plant, a five story concrete structure at 3031 Carroll avenue. The new building will have a total floor space of 187,000 square feet. It will be finished next spring. S. W. Straus & Co. have underwritten a $700,000 first mortgage 6 per cent bond issue. The Wilson-Jones company owns the entire block bounded by Franklin, Spaulding, Ohio, and Homan.

$500,000 Furniture Factory.

Another good sized industrial deal will result in a $500,000 furniture factory at Diversey avenue and the St. Paul tracks. H. Z. Mallen & Co., now at Carroll avenue and St. John's court, have purchased from Paul J. Healy approximately 140,000, facing south on Diversey and lying west of the St. Paul tracks, for a reported cash price of $41,477. Preliminary buildings to cost $200,000 are planned with an ultimate expenditure of $500,000 contemplated. Edwin J. Bowes Jr. & Co. represented the purchasers and Harvey M. Doyle the seller.

Goose Island is to get a $500,000 warehouse. A. M. Castle & Co., warehousemen and distributors of finished steel products, have bought from Cyrus H. McCormick the northwest corner of Blackhawk street and Cherry avenue, 561x219, with irregular lines, containing about 122,000 square feet, for a reported price of $225,000. It runs back to the river.

The east half of the property contains several buildings under lease to the Union Wire Mattress company. The purchaser, whose main warehouse is one block south, will start work in the spring on the first unit of a half million dollar building. It will cost approximately $325,000. The floor area will be about 203,000 square feet. Frederick T. Hoyt represented both parties.

New Clothing Factory.

It seems to be getting a weekly occurrence to announce a new clothing factory. Last week's is a $350,000 three story plant being built by John R. Bowes on 350x84 at the northwest corner of South Kilbourn avenue and Lexington street. It has been leased by Alfred Decker & Cohn for seven years at a term rental of $347,000. The floor space will approximate 100,000 square feet.

The rapidly growing district at the end of the Ravenswood branch of the Northwestern L is to have a new seven story fireproof storage warehouse to cost approximately $250,000. Albert H. Hollander, president of the Hollander Fireproof Storage Warehouse company, has purchased from Michael J. Faherty, president of the board of local improvements, the 131x 125 feet at the southeast corner of Lawrence and Sawyer avenues at a reported price of $44,000 cash. Mr. Hollander will improve 75 feet at once. Thomas E. Sullivan & Co. represented both parties.

BUNGALOW BOOM BLOSSOMS OUT IN HINSDALE

The Hinsdale district, quiet for a long time from a real estate standpoint, blossomed forth yesterday with a sale which is expected to lead to considerable activity. Albert E. Cook of Evanston sold seventy-four acres at West Hinsdale, with a large frontage on the Hinsdale Golf club grounds, for a reported price of $60,000. The name of the purchaser is withheld by William D. Murdock & Co., the brokers. The tract is to be platted in five and ten acre units and will be improved with bungalows and country homes.

These seventy-four acres are part of a wooded tract of 385 acres owned by Mr. Cook at Clarendon Hills on the north side of the Burlington railroad. It is announced that it is the intention of Mr. Cook and his associates eventually to improve all of it with high grade country residences.

Makes $25,000 Profit on Residence in 3 Years

One of Sheridan road's most attractive residences, the fourteen room house designed by George W. Maher and built in 1913 by Harry Stevenson of the H. M. Stevenson company, tailors, 332 South Michigan avenue, on the 100x257 at the northwest corner of Sheridan road and Bryn Mawr avenue, has been sold for an indicated price of $115,000 by the present owner, Carey U. Snyder, of C. U. Snyder & Co., to Henry Reeves. It is understood that to duplicate the house today would cost over $100,000. Mr. Snyder bought this three years ago for $90,000. He will continue to live there until next May.

Red Cross Rents Quarters in North Michigan Ave.

The American National Red Cross has leased from David C. Cook the fifth floor of the Pioneer building, northwest corner of Michigan avenue and South Water street, for a term of years at an annual rental of $6,600. The Chicago headquarters of the Red Cross will move from the Lemoyne building on Jan. 1. John R. Magill & Co. represented Mr. Cook and Albert H. Wetten & Co. the Red Cross.

$550,000 APARTMENT HOTEL IN ROGERS PARK LEADS FLAT BUILDING

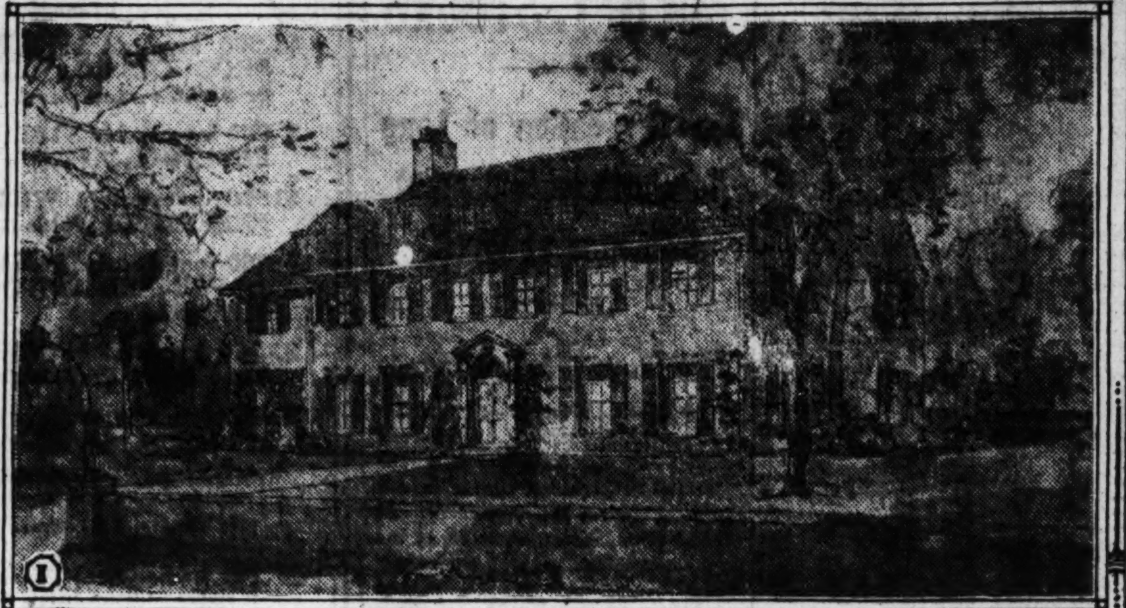
Scarcity of announcements of new flat buildings was made up for by the size of the few announced. Rogers Park topped the list with the $550,000 Beachview apartment hotel, at the northeast corner of Sheridan road and Rogers avenue. Work has started, and it is expected to be finished May 1. It will be four stories, with sixty-four apartments of two, three, and four rooms, all furnished, and restaurant, lounging and billiard rooms, etc. The gross annual rental will be around $110,000. Samuel Olson, the builder, has given a trust deed to the State Bank of Chicago for $300,000, ten years, at 6 per cent, secured by the property. The lot fronts 125 feet on Sheridan road and 150 feet on Rogers avenue.

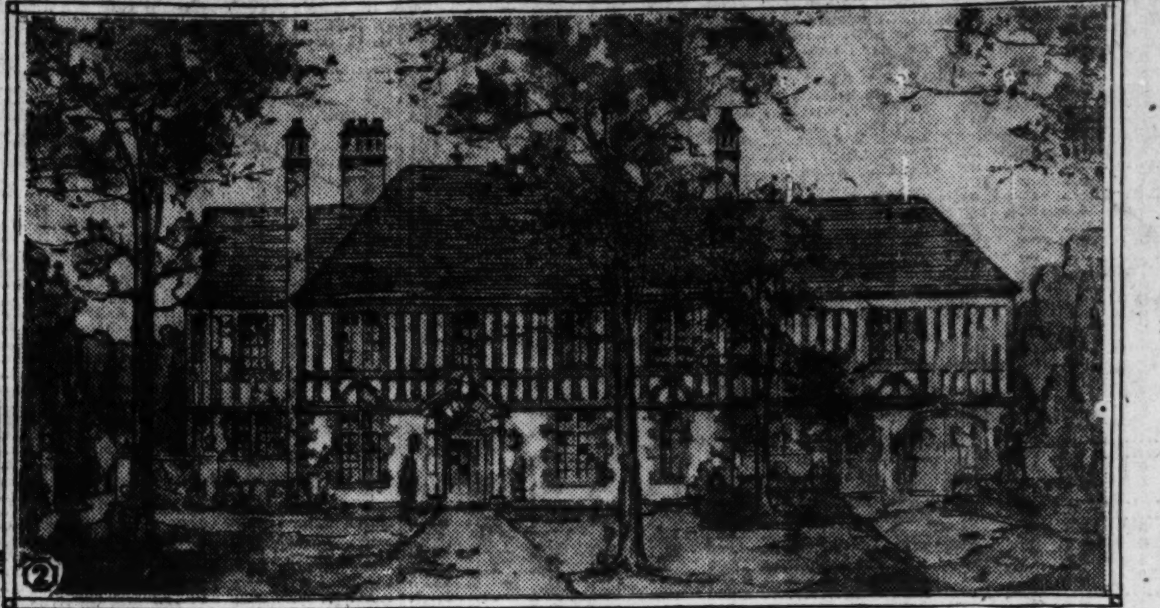
Another Rogers Park apartment building to be erected is the forty-eight flat structure at 1613-21 Columbia avenue, near Ashland avenue. Paul F. Olsen, architect, has purchased the property, 119x121, from George W. Walker and William L. Wallen for a reported price of $20,000. William L. Wallen & Sons, brokers, have made a building loan with the Midwest Real Estate Bond and Mortgage company for $150,000. The building will have an estimated gross annual rental of $34,000.

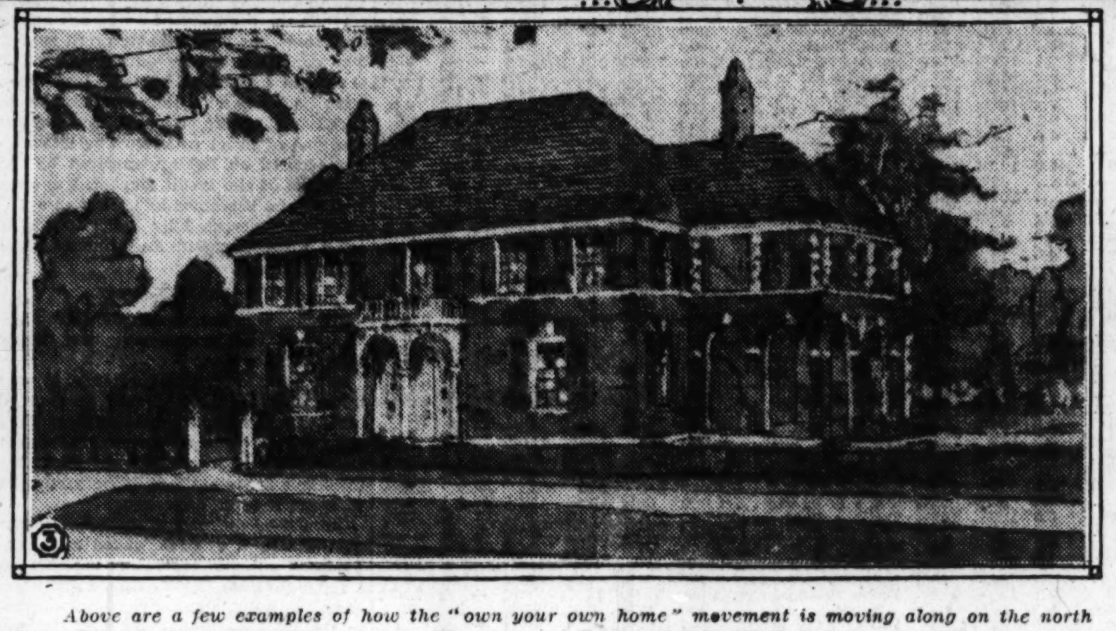
What is said to be one of the last unsubdivided acre tracts in Rogers Park, east of the Northwestern railroad, has been sold by William L. Wallen and Mathias Mann to Frank R. Walker. It is bounded by Meadow lane on the east, the Northwestern on the west, Pratt boulevard on the north, and a line 125 feet north of North Shore avenue on the south. The consideration is reported as $48,000. Mr. Walker will build twenty-six brick bungalows. William L. Wallen & Sons represented all parties.

JOINS H. E. HENDERSON & CO.

Clyde A. Kirk, connected with the firm of William Kirk & Co., has resigned and is now in the sales department of H. E. Henderson & Co. at 6532 Sheridan road.







Above are a few examples of how the "own your own home" movement is moving along on the north shore, although these are a bit more pretentious than usually associated with that slogan, for their cost ranges from $35,000 to $50,000. Chester H. Walcott is architect of all three.

No. 1 is a fourteen room brick colonial structure, being built at the southeast corner of Greenleaf street and Sheridan road, Evanston, by Clifford Off, who now lives at 1404 Forest avenue, in that city.

No. 2 is being built by Henry Stanton of the J. Walter Thompson company in Blackthorne road, Winnetka. It is in the early French half timber style; cement plaster with brick quoins. The interior is designed along antique lines with a stone fireplace in the paneled library, wooden ceiling in the living room, and lighting fixtures of old time pattern.

No. 3 is of the modified Georgian type of architecture. It has twelve rooms and is being built by William G. Burt on the 120x125 at 1521 Asbury avenue, Evanston.

$97,500 Paid for Film Theater in Rogers Park

The Regent theater building, at the northwest corner of Columbia avenue and Sheridan road, has been sold by Mrs. Minnie Geis to Louis and Max Jacobson for a reported consideration of $97,500, subject to $20,000. A. B. Jacobson was broker.

Another outlying theater sale was the Circle movie playhouse, at 3241 Roosevelt road, 50x125, purchased by Louis Nath from Gussie Balaban, mother of Barney Balaban of Balaban &, Katz, moving picture theater operators, for an indicated price of $81,500, subject to an incumbrance of $16,500. Seymour Marks, now Keller, Marks & Co., was broker for both parties.

Realty Auctioneers in Cincinnati Bar Red Flag

Taboo is the red flag of auctioneers in Cincinnati. The banishment came as a result of the too free use of that colored ensign by the I. W. W.s, the anarchists, Socialists, and revolutionists of various kinds all over the world. The real estate men of the Ohio city who auctioneer have chosen Alice blue as the color under which to do their business. Their act was followed by other auctioneers, so no one but radicals wave the red flag in that town.

Michigan Ave. Landmark Gives Way to Business

Another south side landmark, the old Darlington residence at 2335 South Michigan avenue, is to go before the march of business. The property, 25x 130, has been purchased by Kirk D. Holland, who will erect a three story building to cost approximately $80,000 for the Double Seal Piston Ring company. The reported consideration was $22,500. Joseph Battersby and Arthur S. Carruthers were the brokers.

Piecemeal Zoning Called Harmful by Gotham Expert

This is the fourth of a series of articles on city zoning written for "The Tribune" by Herbert S. Swan, secretary of the New York zoning committee. In it he warns of the dangers of piecemeal zoning and cautions against temporary ordinances.

BY HERBERT S. SWAN.

[Secretary New York Zoning Committee.]

To be most effective a zoning scheme must be city-wide. Piecemeal zoning inevitably results in leaving a large part of the city unzoned and the part zoned, zoned without reference to the best interest of the city at large. When the whole city is zoned at one time it is possible to treat all districts similarly situated and of like character in the same manner. When one section of the city is zoned at a time this is very difficult, if not quite impossible. Each locality being studied separately, the regulations adopted will, of course, be drafted to suit the idiosyncrasies of its own particular development.

A comprehensive survey embracing the entire city would, however, reveal the presence of dozens of localities, each perhaps slightly different yet sufficiently alike to be treated together as one class. The establishment of a multiplicity of kinds of districts, when a few would suffice, serves no good purpose—it only creates confusion and tends to bring all zoning into disrepute.

Must Consider Courts.

There is also another point to be considered and that is the attitude of the courts toward zoning. In order that the ordinance passed may have its legality sustained it is especially important every care be exercised in framing the proposed regulations so that they fit local conditions, that they are not arbitrary or discriminatory, and that they do not fall within the ban of class legislation.

Above all, reasonableness must be the test of both the classification and the districts established. Whether the legality of any particular zoning scheme will be sustained depends more upon the carefulness and fairness put into the preparation of the regulations than upon a lack in the forward looking attitude of our highest court.

Temporary Ordinances Undesirable.

The question of passing a temporary ordinance protecting residential districts appears to come up whenever a city considers the adoption of a zoning ordinance. Once appointed, the zoning commission will be repeatedly urged to formulate restrictions for certain localities before completing plans for the entire city. This the commission should consistently refuse to do, for when the legality of the law is tested in the courts the city will be in a much stronger position to defend the scheme if it is able to say that all the regulations are mutually interdependent and part of a common plan.

Of course, it is hard to see sections ruined while protective measures are being formulated, but the harm done in this respect will prove very small. If the commission concerns itself with special districts at the start the injury done in the city at large due to the later adoption of the plan will no doubt be much larger in the aggregate than the benefits conferred upon a few scattered residence districts temporarily protected.

Other Objections.

There are also other objections to temporary ordinances. Such regulations having once been imposed, the owners in such sections of the city are apt to consider themselves adequately protected and lose all interest in the final working out of the plan.

A tentative plan, moreover, is likely to prevent the erection of buildings in sections where they would be allowed in the final plan. Persons who have their building projects interfered with in this manner will naturally be more or less disaffected and oppose the enactment of any regulations.

REALTY BOARD NEWS

Saturday, Dec. 20, has been chosen as the time for the annual banquet of the Chicago real estate board. It will be held at the Congress hotel. Negotiations are now on for two speakers of national importance.

At the regular monthly meeting on Wednesday a letter of thanks from Frank N. Wood, former real estate editor of THE TRIBUNE, for recent resolutions of appreciation passed by the board, was read.

John W. O'Leary, vice president of the Chicago Trust company, and a member of the labor commission in Washington, will be the speaker at the Thursday luncheon at 12:15 at the Chicago real estate board rooms.

The Real Estate Association of the State of Illinois will hold its fourth annual convention at Champaign, Ill., on Nov. 21 and 22. "A very attractive program has been prepared for your entertainment, you might even get a chance to shake hands with the governor," writes President W. C. Johnson to Chicago real estate men.

At the members' November meeting of the Cook county real estate board to be held Tuesday at 3:30 p. m., a nominating committee of eight will be elected to meet with the committee of seven appointed by the directors to select one candidate for each office of president, vice president, secretary and treasurer, and four directors. Charles M. Nichols, chairman of the board's zoning committee, will tell his experiences on the recent zoning trip.

Fine Idea? I'll Say It Is Declares Factory Girl

Several months ago a gigantic map of Chicago was fastened on a wall of the offices of the Florsheim Shoe company, 541 West Adams street. A few days later it began to break out with a rash of little red dots. But no one seemed worried about it. Instead Milton S. Florsheim, president of the company, daily studied the rapidly spreading crimson spots and smiled contentedly.

One day the man who had been jabbing the little red topped pins into various parts of Cook county remarked to Mr. Florsheim that the job was done. Thereupon Mr. Florsheim carefully studied the map for a long while and at last said:

"Let's Go."

"It looks to me as though Belmont and Harding avenues are right in the center of things. Let's go."

A little later property in Belmont avenue, between Harding and Springfield avenues, 267x125, was purchased and a four story factory was started. It will be ready May 1.

"It's just a case of taking our factory to our employés instead of making them come to it," explained Mr. Florsheim last night. "We needed more space in addition to our main plant and took a census of employés. We put a red pin in the map for the home of each employé. We found that 67 per cent lived within a mile and a half of the site of our new plant. Now they have to come from four to six miles by street car or elevated. When the new plant is finished those at the main plant who want to can change to the Belmont avenue factory and walk to and from their work. We will employ between six and seven hundred in the new plant."

"Merely Common Sense."

"It was merely common sense to build near our employés," said another official. "It means a steadier labor market and it also means happier employés, with more time at home and not so much time wasted in car riding."

"Fine idea? I'll say it is," said a girl worker who lives two blocks from the new factory.

Glenwood Gets 83 Acre Forest Preserve Present

Glenwood, in Bloom township, has had a nice little gift given to it by the forest preserve commission in the shape of an eighty-three acre tract of woodland park, purchased from Robert Balfour for $20,875, just south of the town limits and west of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois tracks.

CRANE MEDICINE CO. TO BUILD.

The Crane Medicine company announces plans for building an eight story concrete structure 99x130 at the southwest corner of Chicago avenue and Orleans street, which with the land will represent a reported investment of over $300,000. They will occupy several floors in the new building. Three pieces of property were purchased through Frank S. Pagin & Co. The corner, 49x130, was bought from Michael J. Faherty for a reported price of $25,000; and two adjoining twenty-five foot holdings were purchased from the estate of William Hereley and Henry Chamberlain.

$1,000,000 IN FACTORIES FOR WEST SIDE TRACT

Grant Land Association Reports Industrial Activity.

Over $1,000,000 worth of industrial buildings are to be erected on property recently sold by the Grant Land association, according to Callistus S. Ennis & Co., their agents. The aggregate consideration is said to be $154,000. The property is located on the B. & O. C. T. R. R. and is at the southeast corner of South Fifty-fourth avenue and West Sixteenth street, with a frontage of 1,279 feet and an average depth of 630 feet.

One piece of 150,000 square feet was sold to Warren S. Burnet at a consideration of $30,884. He has not yet announced his plan of improvement.

Next and adjoining this on the south the Century Rubber works, now in business on the northwest side, bought a tract of approximately 250,000 square feet at a reported consideration of $48,844. They contemplate erecting a large plant to cost several hundred thousand dollars, to be ready for occupancy next year.

Buys 221,000 Square Feet.

South and adjoining the above tract John R. Gray has purchased 221,000 square feet at a reported price of $44,202. Mr. Gray is not ready as yet to disclose for what purpose this property has been acquired.

Farther south a tract containing approximately 152,000 square feet has been sold to the Arabol Manufacturing company, chemists, New York City, which will improve with modern buildings within the next few months. The consideration in this sale is reported as $30,368.

A. J. Montague & Son were associated with Ennis & Co. in the sales to Mr. Burnet, the Century Rubber works and John R. Gray, and H. A. Knott was associated in the sale to the Arabol Manufacturing company.

Big Improvements Planned.

Ennis & Co. report that they have five other sales of property in the Grant land subdivision under contract comprising a total of 915,000 square feet, to be developed within the next year with buildings and improvements to be erected that will cost over $2,000,000. One plant alone will erect buildings to cost close to $1,000,000, they say.
